THREE INJURED IN COLLISION THIS MORNING

BRAKEMAN, ENGINEER AND FIREMAN HURT

Wreck Took Place About One O'clock—Engine Badly Battered and Two Cars Burned—A Heap of Wreckage—Fire Brigade Called Out.

THE INJURED.

M. Clark, engineer, Havelock, cut about head and face. Not serious.

THE CAUSE.

The semaphore, which is about 200 yards from the scene of the wreck, was up for Engineer Clark to stop. The engineer states he saw the signal, but claims that he could not get the brakes to work.

A serious rear end collision, which might have been attended with disastrous results, took place on the C.P.R. railwya at one o'clock at the west end of the city, where Parnell street crosses the track. A freight was standing at this point, presumably waiting for orders. Between the place where the train was standing and the line leading from the station yards there is a sharp curve, which prevented a view of the train stationed there to anyone coming from the west. A west-bound freight from the local station, drawn by engine No. 1,586, with M. Clark, the engineer in charge, and Fireman Haggarty, both of Havelock, had gained considerable speed before it reached the curve mentioned. Apparently oblivious of the obstruction in front, the driver proceeded, with the result that the engine crashed into the van of the standing train with such force that it smashed the van to fragments, which were hurled on both sides of the track, together with four other cars. At the time of the collision Conductor Carson, of the standing train, was not in the van, but a young brakeman, Thos. Abbey, Toronto Junction, was unfortunately in the van. He was severely injured, especially about the head, and, it is feared also, internally, and was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

The colliding engine had all the upper part of its equipment swept off by the crash, and was badly battered, but its motive parts, the wheels, driving rods, engine machinery, etc., are intact.

The driver and the fireman luckily escaped with minor injuries, surface wounds about the head and face. Another result of the collision was the breaking out of fire in the wreckage.

BRIGADE'S GOOD WORK.

The fire brigade was called out at 1.15 and made a quick run to the scene of the wreck and fire. The nearest hydrant was 2,100 yards away from the fire, and it was necessary to utilize all the hose in the possession of the brigade to reach the conflagration. On account of the long distance from the hydrant the hydrant the pressure was not very strong, but Chief Howard used excellent judgment, and with good work on the part of his men, succeeded in keeping the fire from spreading. It was confined to two cars. Another car caught fire, but it was extinguished just in time. Had the wreck occurred a few yards farther out from the city limits the brigade would have been unable to do very little, as they could not have reached the flames with the supply of hose at their command. Two waggon loads of hose were utilized at the fire.

THE INJURED IN THE WRECK.

It was rumored around that the injured brakeman would not recover from his wounds, but inquiries at the hospital elicited the information that he was not as seriously injured as it was at first thought he would be. Dr. Gray, the C.P.R.'s physician, attended to his injuries, and that of the engine driver and fireman.

The brakeman was brought to the hospital in a semi-conscious condition and is still in a state of heavy stupor. His face and head are very badly cut, his eye much swollen and the skin torn off his knees and legs. Provided he is not suffering from serious internal injuries, and he is not thought to be, every hope is held out for his recovery. None of his bones are broken. Dr. Gray found it necessary to use several stitches to close the wounds of the engineer and fireman. They were both sent to their homes at Havelock.

The crash of the collision was deafening and was like a loud explosion, the violent clanging of the couplings being heard amid the din. The people in the neighborhood immediately ran out to the wreck, and quite a crowd had assembled in a comparatively short time. They kept coming all the morning, and watched the work of clearing up the debris.

The sight at the scene of the wreck was one of the greatest confusion. Huge pieces of wood and iron from the cars and engine were piled and strewn around. The wrecked engine presented a sorry looking appearance, stripped of its upper armament, leaving only its boiler and lower structure on the track. It was tilted over on to the siding and the rails of the track of the main line, on which it was standing at the time of the collision, and those of the side were both bent and smashed by the concussion. The articles of freight were scattered along the sides of the track. That portion of it that was not damaged was piled up alongside the track, to be removed to a suitable place of storage until it could be taken on.

WRECKING CREWS.

The wrecking crews worked indefatigably to get the line clear. At the point where the wreck took place there is a double track and the siding. It was necessary to make way for three trains, the two early morning trains from Montreal and the 7.58 express for Toronto. Word was sent for help to clear up the debris, to Havelock and Toronto. An auxiliary arrived from Havelock at 4.30 o'clock and a steam crane from West Toronto was on hand at about a quarter to eleven. The track was clear at a quarter past eleven, and the 5.26 am., train, which was standing near waiting to proceed, pulled out with its nine coaches at 11.22. The others followed later.

HELP TO BUILD UP PETERBOROUGH

The Company Begin Operations Again Larger Than Ever---Peterborough Can Become in a Few Years a Very Large Manufacturing Centre With a Population of 50,000 People---Here is the Opportunity to Give the City a Lift.

Its Railway Facilities, its Water Power, its Trent Valley Canal, its magnificent Agricultural Country and its larger accumulations of capital can, if judiciously used, double its present population in the next ten years.

Peterborough is essentially a manufacturing centre. Every factory that can be brought here means increased money to be spent in Peterborough, more pay rolls mean increased number of buyers on the market, at the stores and in the shops. It means more houses to be occupied, more people to buy food and clothes. It means more employment for the people, more money to be handled by our banks, it means in short growth and prosperity to Peterborough and to the farmers in this locality. One of the oldest and best factories—The Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company—a factory that started on a small scale fifty years ago, a factory that has done much for Peterborough in the past, has now been closed for some months, and a systematic and concerted effort is being made at present to have employed by the 1st of January, '09 at least 150 hands. This factory is located almost in the centre of Peterborough and with its grounds covers between six and seven acres

THE WM. HAMILTON WORKS, PETERBOROUGH.

The cost of this factory and its equipment was over $319,000. The present Company have purchased the entire plant, buildings, machinery, patterns, right, title, good will and name and over $20,000 worth of raw material and stock in trade, all for less than one third of the original cost.

Of this plant, the boiler shop and pattern warehouse are new, having been built during the past five years, while the moulding shop, foundry and part of the machine shop have been modernized and equipped with labor-saving devices, and there is over $35,000 worth of modern machinery that has been installed in the last six years; so that the plant to-day is easily worth twice what it has cost the present company, beside the large amount of stock in trade valued conservatively at over $20,000, now on hand.

To get working capital, we are asking the citizens of Peterborough and the surrounding country to subscribe for $300,000 of Preference Stock in this enterprise on the following conditions:

The preference Stock bears interest at the rate of 8% per annum and is cumulative, so that if in any year there were only sufficient earnings to pay 7%, the other 1% is a first charge on the profits of the next year. With each two shares of preference stock, one share of common stock is given as a bonus. Each purchaser will thus receive 8% on the money invested and whatever dividend the common stock may earn. This is a good straightforward proposition, honest from top to bottom, in which there is no watered stock and in which each shareholder is most amply secured.

An enquirer might ask, what has been the output of the factory, what have been its sales? From the signed statements of W. R. Morris, Chartered Accountant, who has audited the books of this company, the net sales for the six years 1901 to 1906, both included have been $1,552,050.00, or average sales for the six years of $258,275 per year, the bulk of the sales being in Ontario, though their customers are found from Vancouver to Halifax. Having been manufacturing for over fifty years and supplying Saw-Mill Machinery, Water Wheels, Boilers, Engines and Mining Machinery to hundreds of mills and factories in Canada, the keeping in repair of which each year gives the company a very large revenue, and as the present company own and hold all the patterns, this repair item alone is a guarantee of a large trade.

If you are one of the citizens who want to knock everything that is coming Peterborough's way, you will go right out and condemn this enterprise; but if on the other hand your business is here, this enterprise asks for your backing, for your co-operation, your good word, and for a careful examination, to see if this is not the very soundest, the safest and sanest investment that has ever been offered the citizens of Peterborough and surrounding country.

Let every business man, every man or woman with idle capital look at the cut of the magnificent buildings shown herewith, covering nearly seven acres in the heart of Peterborough, already equipped and ready for business, and tell us is there is any sane reason why this factory should remain close for the lack of a working capital, when we have $3,000,000.00 in the Savings Banks in this city on which we are receiving 3%. Is there any reason why the trade that this factory has built up should be allowed to go elsewhere to build up other cities and towns, while skilled workmen are here to do the work and the trade legitimately belongs to Peterborough?

Running with the full compliment of men, this factory will pay out $12,000.00 per month in wages. What does that mean to you?—to me?—to the city?—and especially to the country surrounding it?

We ask you to examine what we to offer and give us the opportunity of showing it to you. We can show you an investment in every way sound and reliable, and your money will at the same time help to build up Peterborough. We are asking for neither gifts nor charity but we do ask that every citizen who has the interest of Peterborough at heart to co-operate with us in this movement

The buildings are being put in thorough repair and a large part of the former staff have taken up the matter and are working to the limit of their ability.

Will you co-operate with them and at the same time help yourself? Write for our booklet or call at our office, Room 14, Bank of Commerce Building, or call us up by Bell 'Phone No. 242.

FELL FROM SCAFFOLD AT THE ARMOURIES, AND WAS SERIOUSLY HURT TO-DAY

David Flynn, an employee at the new armouries, and who resides at 203 Carlisle Ave., met with a serious accident shortly before noon today. He is at present lying in St. Joseph's hospital, badly injured as a result of falling from a scaffold several feet high to the concrete floor below. He was walking along the scaffold when he missed his footing and fell.

Dr. Morgan was called, who immediately summoned the Dan Spence ambulance and had the man removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. Upon examination it was found that his right arm was fractured at the wrist, the broken bone projecting from the flesh. His face was besmeared in blood, it being badly bruised and cut. His injuries are of a more serious nature than was at first thought, it being feared that he has been hurt internally.

Mr. Flynn had only been working on the armouries a short time, and his accident was most unfortunate.

CIVIL SERVANTS HERE WILL APPEAL AGAINST INCOME TAX

Messrs. O'Connell and Gordon, solicitors for the employees of the civil service in this city, gave notice of appeal this morning, against the overassessment on the incomes of the servants of the government. The appeal will be heard before His Honor Judge Weller.

Application for reduction of the tax was made to the court of revision but no action was taken in the matter and the government officials will appeal,

PERSONS WITH LITTLE MO NEY LOOKING FOR PLACES TO SLEEP

A local gentleman has made the suggestion that a place should be opened in the city where persons "down in their luck" could sleep at night. At the present time there is no place where they can secure lodgings at night unless they pay for them at the regulation rates. Frequently people of the class referred to above have some money but not enough to pay for lodgings at a hotel.

The Review's informant stated that a few evenings ago he was accosted on the street by a man who wanted to know where he could secure a bed for twenty-five cents. It was all the money he had and he could not get a bed at a hotel for that amount. There are cases of this nature frequently and it might not be a bad idea for some of the charitable organizations to take the matter up and see what could be done for the winter months.

FORMER PETERBORO' GROCER DEFIES POLICE IN LONDON

London, Nov. 13 —An immense throng witnessed an exciting row this morning between the police authorities and Mr. John Garvey, one of the leading wholesale grocers of this city. A case is at present pending against Mr Garvey, for driving his lorries on the sidewalk at the rear of his warehouse which extends through from Dundas to Carling streets. This morning the police stopped one of the drivers who was preparing to drive across the walk. Mr. Garvey thereupon mounted the load and drove it across himself. He was promptly arrested, and taken to the police station where he was as promptly released, Magistrate Love refusing the request of Chief Williams to grant an information. The pending case against Mr. Garvey will be heard on Monday,

A DAY OF ILL LUCK

Emily Farmer Had Bad Fall Thanksgiving Day

Edward McGahey, of the 12th con. of Emily, has little reason to look back upon Thanksgiving day as a joyful anniversary. On that day he was engaged patching a leaky roof, and while moving a plank on the platform he missed his footing and fell a distance of about fifteen feet, breaking his right arm above the wrist and fracturing three ribs. Dr. Brown was summoned to attend to the injuries, which at first were thought to be even more serious than they turned out to be.

On Sunday a brother, William John McGahey, of con. 12, Emily, had the misfortune to lose a horse worth about $200 through an attack of inflammation. Dr. Cowan, of Lindsay, treated the animal Saturday evening at his stable on York street, and desired Mr. McGahey to leave the horse with him for a few days in order to complete the cure, but the owner felt confident of his ability to finish the treatment. The horse was a Clyde, weighed 1,900 lbs., and was a grand specimen of the breed, being only six years old.

WORKERS ON CANAL KILLED

Two Deaths at Glen Miller, Near Trenton---Were Crushed by a Derrick

Trenton, Nov. 13.—William Cronin, of Trenton, foreman for Larkin and Sangster, contractors, and an aged Italian workman, were killed this morning on Trent canal construction at Glen Miller, three miles north of this place. What is known as a goose-neck iron on a large derrick broke, and the heavy boom crushed both men. The Italian was instantly killed and Cronin died soon after, his skull being crushed.

MR. McCLELLAN WAS AT LINDSAY

Gave Interview Regarding Reports of Low Water

Mr J. Harris McClellan, superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal, was in Lindsay today on business. In conversation with a Post representative regarding the low water in this district, he denied the rumor prevalent that some of the industries in Peterborough were obliged to close down owing to the fact that sufficient water was not available for operating their plants.—Lindsay Post.

THIRTY CENTS A DOZEN FOR EGGS

Price Asked at To-day's Market --Fowl Very Plentiful

The market this morning was a good one, the number of buyers and sellers being very large. Fowl was plentiful, turkeys being eagerly bought up at from $1.00 to $2.00; geese at 80 cents to $1.00; ducks at $1.00 per pair, and chickens at 65c

On the outside, the first beef by the quarter, of the season, was offered. Four and five cents per pound was realized. Pork sold at 10 cents and 11 cents, and lamb at 9 and 10 cents.

IS LIBRARIAN FOR TORONTO

Mr. G. H. Locke M. A. Appointed to Important Position

Mr. George H. Locke, M.A., B. Paed, has been appointed librarian for the Toronto Public Library. He will begin his duties on December 20th. Mr. Locke is a son of Rev. J. H. Locke, a former pastor of George street Methodist church in this city, and he is well known here. His salary will be $4,000 per year.

BIG RUGBY MEETING

Will be Held a Week From Monday---Will Discuss Senior and Junior Team and City League

A meeting will be held a week from Monday night to consider the organization for next season of a senior and junior rugby team and also a city league. The question as to what series the two teams will be placed in will also be taken up. The place of meeting has not yet been decided upon but will be announced next week.

The meeting will be a very important one, as will be seen by the matters to be taken up, and it is most desirable that a full attendance of those interested in the game attend,

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women or received so many genuine testimonials as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every one you meet has either been benefited by it, or has friends who have.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., any woman any day may see the files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, and here are the letters in which they openly state over their own signatures that they were cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made from roots and herbs, without drugs, and is wholesome and harmless.

The reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the feminine organism, restoring it to a healthy normal condition.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

The Daily Review

SATURDAY, NOV. 14, 1908.

THE WM HAMILTON CO.

We are informed by Mr. Austin, of the Union Stock Underwriting Company, of Peterborough, that his company is putting on the market $130,000 preference stock of the $200,000 preference stock of the total $300,000 capital of the new Wm. Hamilton Co. organized June 26th, 1907. One share of common goes with two shares of preference. The personnel of the new company's directorate is composed of A. Macfarlane, L. A. Potvin, Geo. G. Gladman, C. R. Cameron, J. C. Smith, D. Spence and W. H. Collier, of which it is understood, that Mr. Macfarlane will be chosen president; Mr. Gladman, vice-president, and J. C. Smith, secretary-treasurer, while the president, secretary and Mr. Collier will compose the Board of Management. R. E. Wood is the new company's solicitor and W. R. Morris, C.A., the auditor. It is confidently expected that enough stock will be taken by the public to enable the works to open with 150 men on Jan. 1st, 1909. So far $70,000 has been subscribed, a portion of which has been paid up. The outlook, Mr. Austin assures us, is of the brightest. The idea of applying to the city for a loan has been given up in favor of public subscription.

TWO GREAT JURISTS

Mr. George F. Shepley, K.C., tore open the insurance company scandals in the celebrated investigation which he figured in as Crown prosecutor for the Royal Insurance Commission, and now Mr. Geo. H. Watson, K.C., another able Liberal lawyer, is doing the same for the marine inquiry at Quebec. We wonder if any Liberals can be found in Peterborough to do in this marine inquiry case as they did respecting the Insurance Commission's report, viz.; smirk and swallow it. Such men are dishonest at heart and they know it. There is no getting away from it. If Mr. Shepley and Mr. Watson, the members of the commission appointed by the Laurier Government, or the Laurier Government itself, were so designedly wilfully and crookedly blind as such men pretend to be there would be no "revelations" and no hope. Our statement is not exaggerated, for did it not happen just as we say? A sharp distinction between Liberals who are honest enough to own up and those who are not, should be kept well in mind by the public. People who gloss over will not hesitate to take advantage of or practice the very same common everyday miserable crookedness. They pretend that it is the fervor of their party zeal that impels them. Tell that to the marines, but not at this inquiry, or you might be caught. The great majority of Liberals are just as good, patriotic and intelligent men as the great majority of Conservatives or independents. We are glad to acknowledge what is, of course, a patent fact, but that there are a number of at least two of these parties who would sell what remains of their miserable souls, for a dollar bill or its equivalent, few will deny. It is amusing to read or hear the big talk of such men whose ideas of probity probably after all, are equal to their ideas on that or any other subject. If the attitude, if such a word can be prostituted to such an ignoble use, taken by them is correct, why do they not disown Laurier, the commission, the Parliament that approved the reports and the jurists who prosecuted. There is one satisfaction, however, which can never be taken away from anybody in this matter and that is the public is "on to their bluff." The day of blind partyism, Grit or Tory, is pretty nearly over, but not before it did the country vast injury. Parties nowadays are largely made use of to further the ends of designing men who make use of them for that purpose. It remains for the people to correct this abuse or they will, as the Insurance Commission Report and the Marine Inquiry showed, suffer the consequences of their supineness and neglect.

SOCIALIST DEMAND

The accompany extract very well defines Socialism as it is to date. The increase in the Socialistic vote in U.S., Britain and Germany has been astounding. In the recent Presidential election over one million electors voted for the straight Socialist candidate, Debs:—

The earth for all the people. That is the demand.

The machinery of production and distribution for all the people. That is the demand.

The collective ownership and control of industry and its democratic management in the interests of all the people. That is the demand.

The elimination of rent, interest and profit, and the production of wealth to satisfy the wants of all the people. That is the demand

Co-operative industry in which all shall work together in harmony, a higher civilization, a real republic. That is the demand.

The end of class struggles and class rule, of master and slave, of ignorance and vice, of poverty and shame, of cruelty and crime — the birth of freedom, the dawn of brotherhood, the beginning of man. That is the demand.

UNEMPLOYMENT

The cause of slackness, depression or bad times whichever suits the fancy best is unquestionably the unevenness of employment. The problem of unemployment, as it is called, is the great problem now under consideration in Germany, Great Britain, and the United States. Some times the employment pot is boiling over. Then people rush in from the farm to supply the feverish demand for workers. In a short time the demand for work slacks off and the workers find themselves laid off too.

To prevent this and its accompanying misery is the problem of the hour. The first step in the direction of preventing it must necessarily be the keeping of the level of supply so that there shall ensue no rise and fall, no depression or corresponding period of boom.

Fits and starts are the worst possible method of doing business. Overproduction is the sin against which every effort must be directed apparently. Under production will take care of itself. How can overproduction best be provided against? Here is a subject for the local Board of Trade, the Canadian Club, etc. Can it be provided against by state control? Inter-national control alone would do it. But state control is socialism. Inter-national state control is International socialism. Shall we go on as we are doing or shall we find a remedy in socialistic state control?

If we do not find a remedy otherwise the exigencies of the times will demand that we lay aside our prejudices and adopt state control, which, as we say, is socialism. Evidently a central bureau of some sort is necessary. Trusts are supposed to check overproduction but unfortunately they do not stop there nor do they even reach so far as a rule. Socialism is a state trust in which all employment, all production and all consumption is known, provided for and controlled. The most superficial observer can see that taking industry as a whole, that is, including agriculture and the professions, there is enough work to be done for everybody. The needs of luxury we are at no pains to dilate upon. There is no misery where the needs of poverty are satisfied.

The needs of poverty are heat, light fresh air, food, premises and clothing. These are the prime necessities. Broadly speaking they can be found by everybody, (not, of course including the physically incapable). Therefore our system or lack of system in the finding of them is what produces poverty, properly so called. Where poverty is due to drink or idleness it is no matter for economic legislation. It is then a question of morals. But we are dealing just now with unavoidable or undeserved poverty and the conclusion that seems to force itself upon us is that the same need for system that has been found in every department of industrial life exists in industrial life as a whole. Such a system can be put in practice only by government and once again we run up against socialism.

Hence we see that socialism is really national and inter-national governmental system, applied to all forms of production and employment. But we are confronted with the evil of so doing that is to say, with its tendency to fetter the individual as distinguished from the state. Must then the individual give up his individuality for the general good? If so there remains no excuse for deferring socialistic state control another day. But alas, who is prepared to say that the state which we ourselves have built up shall thus be allowed to reduce us all to, be its slaves.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Owing to the so far inexplicable "personal element," or personal peculiarity in disease, a noted scientist considers him the best physician who is empirical or experimental in his treatment.

Disclosures continue at the Marine inquiry. The vigor with which the Government counsel is prosecuting it is a crushing reply to the Tory politicians who pretend to look upon it as a sort of blind. The result of the inquisition will undoubtedly lead to action that will be beneficial to the public service."—Hamilton Times (Liberal).

It is hardly possible to be more unfair than the Times is in this observation. It was entirely due to the Opposition that this and other investigations were made at all. When the Opposition demanded them and sat there doggedly until they were granted, the Times called it a congeries of obstructionists. It is a pity that a reputable journal will allow itself such latitude.

The following is from the British Weekly;—

The Catholic Encyclopaedia bids fair to be a very splendid work. No expense and no labour have been spared in its preparation, and it contains a mass of information about Roman Catholicism which is extremely interesting. The biographies contain much that is quite new to us, and very curious. We note the extreme hostility to the Anglican Church, and particularly to the High Church party. Of the latter it says;—"It stands thus in the illogical and unhistorical position of a system which is philo-Catholic in its views and aspirations, but hopelessly committed to heresy and to heretical communication, and built upon an essentially Protestant foundation. Though to Catholics its very claim is an impious usurpation of what belongs of right to the Catholic Church alone, it fulfils an informal mission in influencing English public opinion, and of familiarising the English people with Catholic doctrines and ideals."

RHEUMATISM IN THE BLOOD

Liniments and Rubbing Will Not Cure it---The Disease Must be Treated Through the Blood

The trouble with men and women who have rheumatism is that they waste valuable time in trying to rub the complaint away. If they rub hard enough the friction causes warmth in the affected part, which temporarily relieves the pain, but in a short time the aches and pains are as bad as ever. All the rubbing, and all the liniments and outward applications in the world won't cure rheumatism, because it is rooted in the blood. Rubbing won't remove the poisonous acid in the blood that causes the pain. But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will, because they are a blood medicine acting on the blood. That is why the aches and pains and stiff swollen joints of rheumatism disappear when these pills are used. That's why sensible people waste no time in rubbing but take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the first twinges of rheumatism come on, and these speedily drive the trouble out of their system. Mr. John Evans, 12 Kempt Road, Halifax, N.S., says: "About three years ago I had an attack of rheumatism which settled in my right leg and ankle, which became very much swollen and was exceedingly painful. I wasted a good deal of time trying to get rid of the trouble by rubbing with liniments, but it did not do me a bit of good. My daughter was using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the time and finally persuaded me to try them. Inside of a week the pills began to help me, and after taking them a few weeks longer the trouble had completely disappeared and has not bothered me since. My daughter was also taking the pills at the time for weakness and anaemia was also cured by them, and I am now a firm friend of this medicine."

Most of the trouble that afflict mankind are due to poor, watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new red blood. That is why they cure anaemia with its headaches and backaches, and dizziness and fainting spells; the pangs of rheumatism, and the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia; also indigestion, St. Vitus dance, paralysis and the ailments of young girls and women of mature age. Good blood is the secret of health and the secret of good blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AN OLD CRIME IS AVENGED QUEBEC MURDERER IS SHOT

Sherbrooke Chief of Police Receives Letter From Spaniard Telling Him That Escaped Compton Criminal Confessed Early Crime.

Sherbrooke, Que., Nov. 14.—Chief of Police Davidson has received a most extraordinary letter from Buenos Ayres, South America, which has a direct bearing on a murder that occurred near Coaticooke over a quarter of a century ago, the killing of Francis Daly, by James Bowen, while the former was driving to his home. The murderer was never captured.

The letter referred to states that Bowen had confessed to the writer that he killed Daly and escaped the gallows by breaking out of jail.

The most remarkable part of the letter is that the confession was made a few moments before the writer, a Spaniard, killed both Bowen and his (the writer's) wife, whom he discovered together alone at his home, his wife believing him away from the city. The writer, whose name Chief Davidson prefers to withhold for the present, goes on to say:

"I stripped him of all, and then in the presence of my wife I asked him to make any statement before I would kill him. He told me that he once lived in a small village near Compton, and during a quarrel in which he was to blame he killed a man. He then told me that he was arrested, tried and found guilty and sentenced to the gallows, but his relatives took him away one night. He asked me to write you and let you know his finish in South America. After his confession I shot him and my wife back to back. The law of this country cleared me before a court of justice. You will pardon me for taking up your time. I have written you as requested by the man that wrecked my home. If you wish to know more of the affair you can address a letter to the chief of police department, where you will receive full information in regard to this matter. I will send you a picture if you desire. A feature that would attract attention was the funny shape of his nose. He also informed me that he came from an old and respected family."

A SHINING MARK

(What Parisian Sage did for Chas. S. Baker, it will do for you. Read the following;—

"I was bald and such a shining mark for my friends, and I, as a last resort, tried your Parisian Sage (after trying several bottles of the highly advertised and high priced so-called hair restorers), and I am glad to say I now have a heavy growth of new hair. I am now 44 years old and I have a heavy growth of new hair after carrying my shining mark for over seven years. I gladly recommend Parisian Sage to all afflicted with baldness." Charles S. Baker, 491 Main St. East, Rochester, N.Y.

Parisian Sage, the only natural hair restorer, is guaranteed by W. Madill, to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and cure itching of the scalp, or money back. It is the ladies' favorite hair dressing, because it adds charm and luxuriance to the hair. 50 cents a bottle. Ask W. Madill about it.

ACTION AGAINST A RAILWAY CO.

Chief Justice Mulock is to decide a test case between the North American Telegraph Company and the Bay of Quinte Railway Company, which operates a little railway between Deseronto and Bannockburn. The Telegraph Company is suing for return of railway fares which were paid by their repair men along the line.

The case turns upon the construction taken of an existing agreement between the companies. The Telegraph Company operates the telegraph system for the railroad, and prior to 1904 had unlimited passes along the line of road. Then under a new management the linemen are only allowed free transportation on two passenger trains.

AGED AND SICK DOCTOR CAST A GOOD TORY VOTE

For some years past Dr. Cornwall, of Omemee, has been suffering from rheumatism, and has been confined to the house. His many friends always hopefully look forward to his recovery, but it is feared that the aged doctor will not get better. He is unable to stand up, but still on election day he insisted on having a box democrat brought to his house, and he was carried out on a stretcher and placed in the rig, and driven to the polls, several miles away. He was carried into the polling booth and cast a good Tory vote for Col. Sam Hughes while lying on the broad of his back.—Lindsay Warder.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario, are located the curative Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where treatments for nervous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and all particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

HAS MOVED FROM FENELON FALLS

Dr. Wilson Will Reside in Toronto in the Future

Dr. A. Wilson has disposed of his practise in Fenelon Falls to Dr. H. B. Johnstone, who is now in possession. Dr. Wilson intends removing to Toronto in the near future, where he can pursue his profession without the hardships of country work. Needless to say, he will be greatly missed by the host of friends he has made during his long residence in this village. His successor, Dr. Johnstone, who has been assisting him for some time, comes well recommended, and is making himself very popular with Dr. Wilson's clientele. — Lindsay Free Press.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Trenton will vote on local option Jan. 4.

Fire broke out in The New York American building early yesterday, just after the first edition had been issued, and further publication was stopped.

At a meeting of the British group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union for Peace, at Westminster, Lord Weardale presiding, the holding of a congress in Canada was discussed. A meeting of the council of the union will be held in January.

Fire visited Spooner, a station on the Canadian Northern Railway, between Winnipeg and Port Arthur, originating in the Stockholm Hotel. The hotel, an adjoining saloon building and The Northern News building were totally destroyed. Loss about $15,000.

Brakeman John Carter of Wilkes-Barre was killed and Fireman E. T. Bradshaw of Wilkes-Barre was fatally injured, when the boiler of the engine, drawing a fast freight train, south-bound, on the Delaware & Hudson, blew up about half a mile south of East Windsor.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Barrie Boy's Accident.

Barrie, Nov. 14.—In spite of the warnings of his play companions, little Frank Moran, son of Patrick Moran, a G.T.R. mechanic, locked himself in an outhouse on Thursday. Thinking to escape, he climbed to a window, but lost his balance, falling backwards, impailing himself on a hook attached to the wall. The sharp steel penetrated the abdomen. Slight hopes are entertained for his recovery.

Wilbur Wright Improves.

Lemans, France, Nov. 14.—Wilbur Wright, the American aeroplanist, succeeded yesterday afternoon for the first time in making a start with his flying machine without the use of the derrick previously employed for his purpose.

He circled the field twice on this flight and then came to the ground.

Boycott Postmaster.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—A large portion of the community of Chelsea have boycotted the postmaster. They mail their letters there, but buy their stamps in Ottawa, and the postoffice inspector has written a number of people in Chelsea telling them that they must buy their stamps where they mail their letters.

Four Children Burned.

Alliance, Ohio, Nov. 14.—The country home of John Wampfler, a local milk dealer, was destroyed by fire early yesterday. Four children, Lucille, aged 9; Leroy, 7; Katherine, 5; Chas., 3, perished in the flames. The parents and three children escaped. The father was badly burned, but will recover.

SUPPORT VON BUELOW

German Cabinet Stand Firm With Prince Against Kaiser.

Chancellor Takes Position That He Represents the People and Chances Are That He Will Resign After His Interview With the Emperor on Monday—Has Wanted to Retire for Some Time.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—Chancellor Von Buelow and his friends are so preparing the political situation that if the chancellor should retire after his audience at Kiel next Monday with Emperor William it will be because His Majesty was not willing to concur in the declaration made in the Reichstag by the chancellor on Tuesday, that it was essential that the Emperor be more reserved in his utterances in the future.

Chancellor Von Buelow has taken the position that he represents the entire people on this question, and because of this he is bound to interpret the national will to the sovereign, standing or falling by his decision.

While it cannot be said that Chancellor Von Buelow has taken counsel with all the Imperial Ministers, he has been in consultation with some of them, and they support him actively. The chancellor submitted the question whether he should reply further to the criticisms of the Emperor and himself to the Prussian Cabinet, which was in session in the Reichstag building during the debate of Wednesday. His colleagues advised him not to do this, but to rest upon his speech of the previous day. Referring to his utterance of Tuesday, the chancellor said privately to a friend: "Those who cannot comprehend what I said are not to be helped."

The impression among the intimates of the chancellor is that he has no great desire to remain in office. His wife, since his illness in 1906, often has urged him to retire to private life, and his physician, Prof. Renvers, is constantly advising him not to work so hard.

There is excellent authority for the statement that the rumors of the chancellor's immediate resignation circulating in Berlin and abroad, together with the use of the names of certain men as his possible successors, are connected with the intrigues against the chancellor and in the interests of his rivals for his position.

British Columbia Elections.

Vancouver, Nov. 14.—Practically complete election returns from Yale-Cariboo give Burrell 1,470 and Ross 1,168. In Kootenay, the totals stand: Goodeve, 2,116; Curtis, 1,458; Davidson, 1,069.

Though Davidson, Socialist, had pluralities in such Socialistic centres as Fernie and Michel and other towns in Crow's Nest Pass, he was hopelessly out of it in the cities of West Kootenay. Comparatively he made hardly as good a showing as did his comrade, Hawthornthwaite, in Nanaimo, against Ralph Smith.

The turnover has come as a complete surprise in British Columbia.

Surplus For Gardeners.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—The display of the products of the field and garden by the Ontario Horticultural Association will be a financial success this year. Considering that for several years deficits more or less large have been faced by the directors, the showing is particularly gratifying, placing the annual event as it does upon a substantial footing.

The attendance for the five days has been about 10,000.

Porto Rican Elections.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Nov. 14.—The official election returns for the Island of Porto Rico were made public yesterday.

They show that the Unionist party carried all the seven districts of the island and that the house of delegates will not have a Republican minority.

Murdered by Discharged Employe.

New York, Nov. 14.—In view of hundreds of persons in the Pennsylvania depot in Jersey City yesterday, Walter Ammon was shot three times in the head and body and died on the way to the hospital. The man who did the shooting was Andrew McGrath, who had been employed by Ammon and had been discharged.

Brakeman Cut In Two.

Orillia, Nov. 14.—Falling between two cars which he was coupling together yesterday morning at 12.30, John Campbell of Lindsay, a G.T.R. brakeman, was completely cut in two by the train passing over him. Campbell was a Scotchman, and came to this country about two years ago.

Sectionman Killed.

Tecumseh, Nov. 14.—Sectionman F. Henning was struck and instantly killed here yesterday morning by a Wabash passenger train No. 1 going west. He was standing on the track watching a wayfreight shunting and did not notice the approaching train.

Gimblett Goes For Trial.

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—Robert Gimblett was committed for trial yesterday morning on the charge of robbing the mails. The chief evidence against him was an alleged confession made to Inspector Henderson.

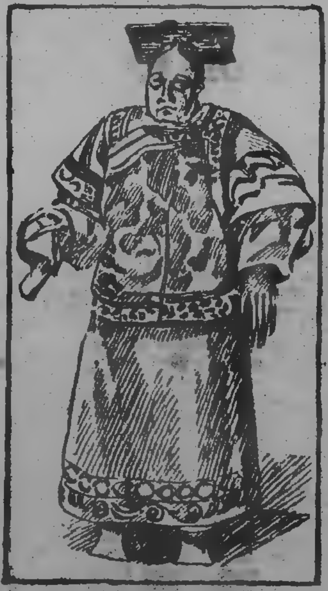
CHINESE RULER DEAD.

Report Says He Has Passed Away and Dowager Is Dying.

London, Nov. 14.—Advices from Pekin are contradictory as to the reported death of Emperor Kuang Hsu.

The Pekin correspondent of The London Times reports that two edicts have been issued from the palace, one appointing Prince Chun Regent ad interim and the other ordering his five-year-old son to the palace. The correspondent says it is the general opinion that this son of Prince Chun has been chosen by the Dowager-Empress as the heir to the throne. This selection involving another regency would be unpopular with the progressive party, which favors the appointment of Prince Pulun.



THE DOWAGER EMPRESS.

There is a second report, which says that the Empress was present at a meeting of the Grand Council in the palace, and that she swooned during the sitting. She is reported to be dying.

If the Emperor and the Dowager-Empress both have died at Pekin at practically the same time, China has lost two Manchu rulers, one nominal and the other actual, whose dynasty has endured for twelve generations. But unless the edicts of yesterday should be reversed the dynasty will be continued in the person of Prince Chun, a brother of the Emperor, and the prince's three-year-old son, Pu Wei.

Suffragettes In Church.

London, Nov. 14.—The suffragettes on Thursday night for the first time carried their campaign into a place of worship.

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, while addressing a meeting in favor of disestablishment at the City Temple, was subjected to disgraceful interruptions. Nearly a score of the adherents of the suffragette movement, men and women, were ejected from the building, amid uproarious scenes of struggling and violence.

The earnest appeals of Secretary Birrell and the pastor of the Temple to the disturbers to respect the secred building, were without avail.

TWO WOMEN ATTACKED.

Cobalt Man Runs Amuck With Axe—One Victim May Die.

Cobalt, Nov. 14.—A Frenchman named J. Jouin visited the house of Ethel Crawford and Carrie Russell, one mile north of Cobalt on Thursday night.

Through some cause he became enraged and attacked the two women with a four-pound axe, cutting them badly about the head and neck.

The women sought refuge at a neighbor's house, one-half mile distant, which they reached by walking in their night-clothes and bare feet through three inches of snow.

Miss Russell is in a very critical condition in the Cobalt hospital, and is not expected to recover.

Miss Crawford, although receiving two cuts on the top of the head, is expected to survive.

Chief Calbeck has not been able to catch the man as yet.

NEW G.T.R. LINE.

Vice-President Wainwright Announces Kingston-Ottawa Branch.

Ottawa, Nov. 14.—William Wainwright, fourth vice-president of the Grand Trunk, said yesterday that the company has in view a direct line from Ottawa to Toronto. This will necessitate the construction of a line to Kingston, where the main line would be tapped.

He denied the report that the Grand Trunk Pacific at the coming session of Parliament will seek legislation bettering the terms of its contract with the Government. He declared that no such thing had been thought of.

Sings For Charity.

Quebec, Nov. 14.—The Sheffield Choir closed their Canadian tour here last night by a concert at the drill hall before an audience of 3,000 persons.

The choir donated half of the proceeds to be divided between local Catholic and Protestant charities.

Two Killed by Falling Tree.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 14.—James Duthuy was killed and Ed. Baker fatally injured on Thursday in an accident at Cardero Channel, a hundred miles north of here.

Twenty workmen were felling a huge stump when it started rolling down hill. All escaped but these two, Duthuy having his back broken.

Secretary Metcalf Resigns.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Secretary of the United States Navy, Victor H. Metcalf, yesterday tendered his resignation to President Roosevelt, to take effect Dec. 1, on account of ill-health.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry will be named as Mr. Metcalf's successor.

PROSECUTOR ATTACKED IN COURT BY AN EX-CONVICT

During Third Trial of Boss Ruef For Bribery, Former Juryman, Against Whom Heney Had Proven Term, Puts Bullet Into Lawyer's Head.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—Francis J. Heney, the leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in San Francisco, was shot and seriously injured at 4.22 o'clock yesterday in Judge Lawlor's courtroom by Morris Haas, a Jewish saloon-keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial of Abraham Ruef and afterwards removed, it having been shown in court by Heney that Haas was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a venireman.

The shooting of Heney occurred in the presence of many persons in the court room during a recess on the trial of Abraham Ruef, on trial for the third time on the charge of bribery. At 6 o'clock last night Mr. Heney, who regained consciousness and will likely recover, said on the operating table: "I will live to prosecute Haas and Ruef."

The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that the assistant district attorney would live.

It was during a ten minutes' recess of court, and while the jury was out of the court-room that Haas came forward from among the spectators. He approached Heney, and placing a revolver against Heney's right cheek, fired.

Instantly the court-room was the scene of the greatest excitement. Several bystanders seized Haas, while others hastened to the relief of Heney.

Haas made the following statement: "I am the wronged man. I do not care what becomes of me now. I have sacrificed myself, not for my own honor, but for the honor of those who are situated like myself. I would not have brought my four children into the world to bear such a brand if I had known the fact that I was a former convict would become known. Heney ruined me. That is why I shot him."

CONSULT OUR OPTICIAN

The eye is such a delicate organ that it should never be trifled with.

This is why our optician has followed the teachings of only recognized authorities on the eye.

Many opticians take half a dozen or more correspondent courses, costing from $7.50 to $25 each. With this limited knowledg it is little wonder that so many are wearing glasses that do not suit them—others who do not require them.

If you have eye trouble you should only consult an optician who has a thorough knowledge of every branch of the optical business.

Such a man is our Mr. Taylor.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rambling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE WORST ACCIDENT IN THE HISTORY OF ONTARIO NORTH

Mr. W. O'Brien, of Mattawa, Writes Graphic Account of the Disaster to the Steamer Temiscaming—Five Persons Were Killed and Eleven Injured.

Mr. W. O'Brien, principal of the Separate School, Mattawa, and son of Mr. M. O'Brien, Gilmour street, inspector of separate schools for Ontario, writes to the Review as follows concerning the blowing up of the steamer "Temiskaming."

The most terrible accident that has ever occurred in this district took place last Tuesday evening about forty miles north of here, in which the boiler of the steamer "Temiskaming" one of the largest vessels owned by the Temiskaming Navigation Company blew up, as a result of which five men are dead and eleven others badly injured.

The "Temiskaming" which makes three trips a week from Haileybury to Temiskaming was about five miles from the latter place when the accident happened. A larger passenger crowd than usual was returning from the northern points, the majority of whom were seated about the second deck in the centre of which is the open space, occupied by the engines and boiler. When the explosion which could be distinctly heard for several miles occurred, scenes of the wildest disorder prevailed. Half dressed men rushed frantically to the doors of the staterooms where they were met with a scorching current of steam, others fought on the second deck for positions as near the railing as possible and one American sport who had been moose hunting in the north jumped overboard and was drowned.

The manager of the Navigation Co. Mr. J. A. Larochelle, had presence of mind to direct the pilot to turn the bow shoreward where the vessel was beached.

Had the accident occurred a few hours earlier such a course would have been impossible as the point at which the steamer ran on shore, is called the "Narrows" and the water is quite shallow at this point.

The work of removing the dead firemen and attending to the terrible injuries of the wounded was promptly begun and in this the crew and passengers to a man showed the greatest unselfishness. The small boats were manned by eager volunteers, including several seriously scalded, and the dead and injured were removed to Temiskaming, where the villagers did their best to assist the sufferers. As many doctors and nurses as could be reached were detailed to the latter place by special train from Mattawa, and several young ladies from that town went along as volunteer nurses. One of the men injured in the accident walked five miles to the station, had his wounds dressed and was removed to Mattawa General Hospital, but the unfortunate young fellow died the following morning.

The hospital here is overcrowded with the patients and so grave is the situation that visitors have been denied admittance. It is feared that at least three more will not recover, and many may suffer the loss of sight or other disfigurement as a result of the calamity.

LAYMEN'S BANQUET WILL BE HELD HERE ON DEC. 8TH

Large Gathering of Clergy and Laymen in Y.M.C.A Last Evening—All the Churches Represented—Committee Appointed.

A very large gathering was held in the YMCA parlors last night in the interests of the men's missionary movemeent. Representatives were present from the city churches as follows:

Baptist—Murray street and Park street

Church of England—St. John's, St. Luke's, and All Saint.'

Presbyterian—St. Paul's, St. Andrew's and Knox.

Bethany Tabernacle and the Gospel Hall.

Mr D. W. Dumble was elected chairman, and Mr. Wilson, of All Saints,' secretary. He was afterwards made the permanent secretary.

The representatives who attended the immense banquet in Toronto made their report and the meeting last night decided that it would be in the interests of the local movement to hold such a function here.

There was considerable discussion in regard to the form of the gathering but it was finally decided to hold a laymen's missionary banquet on or about December 8th. The speakers suggested for the occasion were;

H. Hoyles, KC. Toronto; N W Rowell and S J. Moore, president of the Dominion Bank and President of the Carter-Crume Co. The committee will choose two of the three.

A strong committee composed of the folowing was appointed to make all arrangements; J C Shook, Harry Long D W Dumble, James Connell, R J Kidd and Wilson

The place of meeting will be left entirely in the hands of the committee. Places will be provided for three hundred guests and these will be divided among the churches according to their membership.

Activities Are Now in Full Swing—Every Room in the Building Busy Last Evening.

The activities of the Young Men's Christian Association are now in full swing. Last night saw every room in the building in use for one or other of the many departments of the Association's work.

In the basement the bowling alleys were taxed to their utmost to accommodate the "would be" bowlers. The rooms adjoining the bowling alleys were used for wrestling and boxing respectively, and of course, the dressing rooms and baths were scenes of activity

On the main floor all evening men were coming and going. In the parlor early in the evening some few met for prayer, remembering the topics outlined for the day by the International committee, this being the week of prayer for men thoughout the world. Following this was held in the parlor a meeting of representatives from the various churches to discuss the Laymen's missionary movement.

In the club room to the rear of the parlor was a meeting of older boys which was the result of the Boys' conference. This was to organise a club of older boys for their social and moral improvement.

The game room was kept in continual use while the entrance to the Secretary's office was the scene of men coming and going to and from interviews with the Secretary relative to the different phases of the Association's work.

The reading room had men in it from early in the evening right to closing time at 10 pm.

The gymnasium had its quota of members all evening where basketball games were played and class was held, in which the men participating were better qualified for the duties of life because their physical being had been improved by vigorous exercise followed by nature's best tonic—a bath.

No place in the whole building is more popular with the men than the physical director's office, for there is in it between classes and basketball matches, the genial physical director, who is fast making friends among the men and boys.

On the second floor all was brightness and activity.

In the boys' game room all the tables were in use all the evening, by boys who were getting their amusement and spending their leisure hours in the midst of wholesome environment.

In the reading room many boys found the papers and magazines of value and interest.

In the board room the class of young men spending their evenings, after working all day, in preparation for matriculation put in two good hours of study and instruction by one of the Collegiate Institute teachers.

In the Boys' parlor was a meeting of the Alexandra Dramatic Club, which is in process of organization.

THUGS OF NEW YORK WHO COMMIT CRIMES FOR HIRE

Shocking Lawlessness in the Great East Side—Murders Are Performed at so Much a Homicide—The Offscourings of the Metropolis.

New York, Nov. 14—Organized ruffianism is a phase of life in this great new world metropolis and the congested East Side teems with outlaws, who will commit any crime in the catalogue for a stipulated sum. According to former Chief of Police Devery, who knows as much about the predatory elements of New York life as any man living, you may have an enemy beaten, mutilated or even killed provided you furnish the required cash. The regular charges are said to be $10 for administering a sound beating, including discoloration of the eyes and perhaps the loosening of teeth; $50 for breaking the subject's nose or execating him; $100 for preparing him for delivery at an hospital and $500 for murdering him outright.

The gangs engaged in this shocking business comprise the vilest offscourings of the criminal population, their members ranging in age and degree of disreputability from superannuated porch climbers, bank burglars and highway robbers, through many grades of crapulous blacklegs, jail birds and juvenile malefactors to the human vermin that crawl at the back doors of the brothels, the "cadets" of the "Red Light District." Lacking the courage essential to an open criminal career, faint of heart when uninflamed by alcohol, perpetrating their crime under cover of darkness and the protection of members they drag out a foul and iniquitous existence and die in squalid hiding places, in prison or the electric chair, or are killed in drunken feuds among themselves. No sorrier nor more despicable, and at the same time no more pitiable, a crew may be conjured up by the most ribald imagination.

The habitat of the great bulk of the gang membership is the Bowery and its purlieus. From Canal street to Bayard on the west side of the thoroughfare, every building is a cheap lodging house and from Chatham square to Cooper Union they alternate with almost every other building on both sides of the street. These lodging houses are from four to six stories high. Ten or fifteen cents is the price of a bed, and they are as close together on each floor as they can be placed. Here these besotted outlaws sleep. In Chinatown, at the Chatham square end of the Bowery, and in the tumbledown rookeries of the adjacent streets, others are housed all the year around awaiting the beck of the ward heeler, and meanwhile making a bare sustenance from sporadic crime.

These are the knaves who will maim or murder for money. The unidentified dead found in the streets of New York, or taken out of the rivers, average nearly one per day, but how many of these come to death by violence it is impossible to ascertain. Clemens, the criminologist, has compiled statistics showing that an average of 240 known murders are committed annually in this city and he estimates that at least 25 that are never heard of occur each year. Frequently when unidentified bodies are taken from the water or found in the streets here there are on them marks of weapons and some of these cases are known to be the result of homicide, but in most instances the manner in which the injuries have been inflicted is never ascertained. Without the identification of a body there is little chance of tracing a crime, and in how many instances the victims are those of the gangs there is no means of estimating.

Of course murder is the least frequent of the crimes committed by the members of the gangs and employment in the assault and maiming lines is precarious. The members may be found throughout the year "cadging" in the lower class saloons for drinks, which carry them the privileges of the free lunch counter, and occasionally a kind hearted bartender will afford them the opportunity of going through the pockets of an inebriated stranger in the back room of a "dive."

The glory of the gangs has, however, departed since former days. They no longer have their regular meeting places, for a few years ago the police began the practice of visiting them whenever they got together and driving them into the streets with night sticks. As a consequence, while the gangs remain a menace to life and property, the members are forced to skulk under cover. The last big demonstration of the gangs took place in 1903. On this occasion they held the public thoroughfares between the Bowery and Water street and Houston and Delaney streets from nine o'clock until three in the morning. They took possession of the saloons by force of arms like western cowboys on the rampage, and drove the residents of the vicinity of their various battle grounds into the houses, actually closing the streets to respectable citizens. Two killed outright, three or four fatally injured, and a dozen sent to the hospitals was the public record for that night, but the number of wounded who reached shelter without falling into the hands of the ambulance surgeons or the police and who may have died afterwards, has never been made known.

A quarter of a century ago the gangs that overran New York, on both the East and West Sides, were as serious a problem for the police as the so-called "Black Hand" has become since. During that period the ruffians were able to terrorize whole districts from which they exacted tribute, and to defy the police. Scarcely a night passed on the Bowery or along the water front without a shooting or cutting affray affray among these outlaws and their conspiracy of silence was as potent as the "omerta" of the Mafia in preventing convictions for crimes.

CHOIR CONCERT WAS SUCCESS AT LINDSAY

Lindsay, Nov. 13—That the concert given by the Sheffield Choir yesterday afternoon at the skating rink was a huge success financially is shown by the statement below;—

Total receipts, $953.00.

Expenses, $150.00.

The choir received $589, and the Ross Hospital, under whose auspices the concert was held, received $214. The Hospital Committee in charge of the entertainment were: Messrs. J. D. Flavelle (chairman), W. E. Reesor, Ed. Gregory, H. B. Black, T. Brady, C. C. Forsythe, G. H. Hopkins, and Mayor Begg.

Only tender, budding leaves grown at an elevation of 5,000 feet are used in "Salada." The rest of the preparation is done by ingenious, cleanin machines; hence the purity and strength of "Salada" Tea.

Chas. Croft's barns, near Maxwell, were burned and six head of cattle lost.

Hon. R. Dandurnad is mentioned as the Government leader in the Senate.

LITTLE DOLLY DIMPLES.

"Little Dolly Dimples," with its merry music, big chorus, and abundance of mirth and jollity, was the attraction at the Grand Opera House last night, and a big audience thoroughly enjoyed the performance. The Cameron Opera Company were the presenters of the piece, and Grace Cameron, in the title role made a big hit. The chief fun-maker of the bunch was Mr. Bewley as Hiram Skinner. He was recalled repeatedly in his character songs and parodies, some of which were remarkably clever. The other members of the company were excellent and the work of the chorus was much above the average. The song hits were the "Naughty Kid Song," "Goodbye Jenny Jones," "Goodbye Dear Old Home," and "My Alsatian Maid." Emma Kidd did some Russian and Cossack dances that were really good, and the singin got the quartette and the numbers of the Shubert quartette were a delight.

The story of this merry comedy, which, by the way, is now in its second year, is told in two acts and the scenes are laid in and about New York City. In the first act Miss Cameron is seen as a street waif. She wanders away to Paris, receives an education through a good friend, who discovers that she is a great singer, and presents her to one of the leading managers in Paris, who stars her in his opera, and while playing some of the smaller towns the company gets stranded. She returns to Paris and secures a position as French maid in order to return to America, her old home which she left in despair six years before. On her arrival she is introduced to many of her old friends, of former years, but none of them seem to recognise her as the former waif. Dolly Dimples. In time she makes known to her old friend, Robert Horaine her visit to Paris, etc. This knowledge puts him on to a scheme whereby he secures for her the money and property left to her many years before by the death of her uncle; and in the second act of the play, she, as a witch, forces a confession from Mayne Green and Alexander Comstock, a lawyer with a shady reputation, that they have robbed her of the estate by false representations. And before she finishes with them, they are glad to turn the entire estate over to her without any trouble. All goes well and Dollie is made happy with the knowledge of love that Mr. Robert Loraine has shown her during her troubles.

To-night the Cameron Opera Co. will present a new musical comedy, "M'me Julie," or "A Trip to Egypt." It was a big success in New York and should draw a packed house tonight.

SLEEPLESS BABIES ARE SICKLY BABIES
When babies are restless and sleepless it is the surest possible sign of illness. Well babies sleep soundly and wake up brightly. Sleeplessness is generally due to some derangement of the stomach or bowels or to teething troubles. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets will put the little one right and make it sleep naturally and soundly. Mothers need not be afraid of this medicine as it is guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiate or narcotic. Mrs. Louis Reville, Gawas. Ont., says;—"I am never without Baby's Own Tablets in the house. I have used this medicine for my children as occasion required, for the last five years and have found it superior to all other medicines in curing the ills of childhood." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RETURN WITH MANY DEER

Three Parties Returned to the City Last Night --- Had Splendid Luck

The hunters are returning home and the deer hunting season is over for another year. Two more parties arrived in the city early last evening.

The Gold Lake sportsmen consisting of Messrs. Wm. Snowden, A. Blade and J. T. Stinson, brought with them six deer. They had a most enjoyable outing and return well satisfied with their luck. They report the deer as being very plentiful and the sport this year was better than it has been for several seasons.

Seventeen was the number of deer the Rutherford-White party brought home with them. Only eleven were brought to the city, the other six being taken by the Lindsay members of the club. They hunted within a few miles of Algoma Park in Northern Ontario. Those from the city in this party were Messrs. Herb Kendrey, Thos. Rutherford, Frank White, Charles Nixon and J. Hoolihan.

Mr. R. J. Soden has returned to the city after two weeks' hunting with a Midland party. The members of it were Messrs. D. Horel, J. G. Marshall, C. Baker, C. Hartman, W. J. Beattie, J. Wallis, B. Anderson, J. Soden, of Midland and R. J. Soden of this city. The party hunted seventy miles north of Parry Sound in the vicinity of the Magnetewan river. They were successful in getting fourteen deer, nine of which were bucks all averaging over two hundred pounds. Mr. Anderson also shot a bear weighing 175 pounds.

WOMAN ASSAULTED.

Toronto Lady Is Beaten and Robbed by Two Brutes.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—As Mrs. J. Hesson, 82 Beach avenue, was going down Woodbine avenue at 9 o'clock last night she was accosted by a man who struck her a heavy blow. He then dragged her across the road into the Woodbine grounds and into a stable, where another man was waiting. There, while both men held her and muffled her screams, she was brutally treated and criminally assaulted and robbed of a sum of money. She staggered into the street and was found by passers-by.

Patrol Sergeant Lydiatt got two men from the beats and surrounding the stable, secured Reginald M. Harte, 24 years, a horse wiper, living at 1876 East Queen street. He was taken before the woman, who positively identified him as one of the men—the one who had dragged her to the stable.

Weather Forecasts.

The first attempt at scientific forecasting of the weather was the result of a storm which during the Crimean war, Nov. 14, 1854, almost destroyed the fleets of France and England. As a storm had raged several days earlier in France, Vaillant, the French minister of war, directed that investigations be made to see if the two storms were the same and if the progress of the disturbances could have been foretold. It was demonstrated that the two were in reality one storm and that its path could have been ascertained and the fleet forewarned in ample time to reach safety.

THE DOCTORS SAID "THERE MUST BE AN OPERATION"

"Fruit-a-tives" Saved Mrs. McCready Untold Suffering and Almost Certain Death.

"Publish this for humanity's sake," writes Mr. C. McCready, of Putnam, Ont., in his letter to the owners of "Fruit-a-tives." Physicians said that only an operation could save his wife's life. But again "Fruit-a-tives" proved its wonderful powers. The doctors were wrong—Mrs. McCready is to-day well and strong—and "Fruit-a-tives" have made friends of every one for miles around Putnam.

"Dear Sirs,—My wife suffered for over a year from Indigestion and Bowel trouble. Several doctors treated her for this trouble and advised her that only an operation would save her life, as they stated it was a tumor that was causing the trouble. The operation was to cost $200.00 and, while she was debating in her own mind about being operated on, she was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives," which I procured for her from our local merchant. From the first box she improved, and after having taken four boxes she is completely cured and is now as well as ever.

I decided then that "Fruit-a-tives" was the most wonderful remedy in the world and it certainly saved my wife's life. She still takes one tablet every night, we also give them to the children with excellent results, and they have to thank "Fruit-a-tives" for the fact that their mother is now with them, they fully expected she would be in her grave. Publish this for humanity's sake."

(Sgd.) C. McCready.

For Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Constipation and Billousness—for all troubles due to defective action of Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, "Fruit-a-tives" is a certain cure. These tablets are made of fruit juices and tonics, are pleasant to take and quick to act. Trial size, 25c—regular size, 50c a box or 6 for $2.50.

At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FORCED THE PLAY.

The Scene Illustrata of Rome tells this story of the first Napoleon as a dramatic writer. He had seen a performance of "The Cid," which impressed him so forcibly that he decided to write a classic drama. Within a short time he had finished nearly four acts of a play, which he entitled "Hector." Then came his election as a brigadier general, and the manuscript was thrown into a desk, where he found it again by chance in 1805. Napoleon then sent for Luce de Lancival, gave him the manuscript and directed him to finish the play. This was done, but the players refused to accept it. When Napoleon returned to Paris from the coronation at Naples he learned of the contemptuous manner in which his work had been treated. He demanded the manuscript and wrote across it: "The players of the Comedie Francaise will produce the tragedy which in their stupidity they rejected. Napoleon." Two hours later the work was accepted. In three weeks it was produced before a brilliant audience, declared a success, and the alleged author was decorated with the grand cross of the Legion of Honor.

"Bogies" In Business.

"You'd be surprised if you knew what a part superstition plays in business," he said. "I know two partners who are very lucky in their speculations. Well, they never made a single plunge without consulting a certain medium as to their chances of success.

"Another man once told me he had a 'familiar spirit' whom he consulted quite frequently and whose advice he had always found reliable.

"One of the most daring manipulators in stock has a fine tiger skin spread as a rug on his study floor. In an expansive moment he once informed a friend that not only did he seek advice from clairvoyants and spiritualists, but when about to carry out one of his bold schemes he would lie on his rug and stroke the paw to get 'influence,' though why and how this plan works I don't know."—London Throne.

SPORTING NEWS

EDMONTON CAN GET STRONG TEAM FOR THE CUP GAMES

Ottawa, Nov. 14— Edmonton evidently intends to gather a crack team to play Wanderers for the Stanley Cup.

At least that is what is to be inferred from a telegram received yesterday by Ald. Foran, Stanley Cup trustee. Mr. Foran received a wire from the managers of the Edmonton team, asking what restrictions were to be put on Edmonton in the coming series. To this he replied that only those who took part in Stanley Cup matches last year would be ineligible. This means that Tom Phillips, Roxy Beaudro, Griffiths, the Patrick brothers and others whom Edmonton have been after will be allowed to play should they sign with the prairie champions. None of the Maple Leaf, Ottawa Victoria, or Toronto players will be eligible but the decision gives the challengers a pretty wide scope.

Alderman Foran, discussing the Edmonton enquiry said that while it was difficult to keep the teams strictly within the rules owing to the manner in which players were being bought and sold, some restrictions had to be placed on challenging clubs. There was some talk of several of last year's Maple Leafs coming East with the Edmonton team, but they will not be allowed to play.

Edmonton are trying to arrange dates with the Wanderers and will probably play for the cup early in January.

At Saturday's meeting of the Eastern Canada Hockey Association, at Montreal, the Ottawas will move in favor of drawing up a double schedule, that is, providing Quebec and Victoria drop out, and the Torontos do not get in. Ottawas are doubtful as to whether the Montreal clubs, Wanderers, Montreal and Shamrocks, would support the application of the Torontos, so in the event of the league being continued with four clubs only. Ottawas will fight for a double schedule, which would mean most games in Ottawa than in previous years. Wanderers, Montreal and Shamrocks will all have crack teams, and the Ottawas figure out that they would draw record crowds to each of their games in the Capital.

ART EDMUNDS TRAINING HARD

That Eugene Tremblay's sore knee is all right for the bout a week tonight with Art Edmunds at Riverdale roller rink is no "stall" of his manager, George Kennedy, is proven by the fact that Tremblay meets Cyclone Mack, the Irish lightweight, at Sohmer park, Montreal, tonight. Mack is the fastest thing that Ireland has produced in grapplers for some years. The Montreal crack will have to be there forty ways to beat him.

It looks like a grand go and Riverdale rink should be crowded for it. Edmunds did ten miles on the road this morning and is fast rounding into condition.—Toronto News.

NAT RAY THROWN FROM HIS SULKY

Because Prairie Oyster made a swerving break in the second heat of Class A. race at Dufferin Park on Thursday, Nat Ray, driving Walter S., was thrown from the sulky to the ground. Although a trailing horse stepped on him, he was not seriously hurt, and finished the race.—Toronto News.

WRESTLING

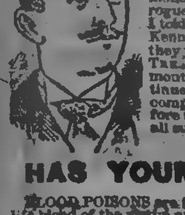
London, Nov. 14.—Frank Gotch, the American wrestler, and George Hackenschmidt, the Russian, met in London this afternoon and agreed upon a match. The exact date has not yet been fixed, but it will not be before March. A committee of representatives of the sporting press was appointed to arrange the details.

Jacob Obernesser, a Hamilton hotel-keeper, is charged with harboring a policeman and obstructing Sergeant Finch.

VARICOCELE CURED

☞ NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.



"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $15 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never lose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment. HENRY C. LOCUST.

Principle and Practice of Industrial and Comercial Co-Operation—A matter of Interest to Local Business Men and Merchants.

In view of the spirited discussion at the recent banquet of the Retail merchants association the following article by Judge Gary in the Iron Age, will be read with interest by merchants as well as customers:

At the dinner given in London by the Iron and Steel Institute on September 11th, to Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation the principal topic of discussion was the maintaining of prices at a remunerative level by international co-operation. Judge Gary's remarks were in part as follows:

"The nations of the earth are being brought nearer together. Steam electricity and other forces are enabling us to travel and to communicate with each other more speedily and with less difficulty, by land and sea and sky. And soon, it is to be hoped, we shall have a common language. The day is approaching when among the nations there will be less diplomacy and more fraternity. God speed the day. We should be striving with, and for, one another, each nation endeavoring to help itself by helping all others. Weapons of war, should be converted into implements of agriculture, and every question of difference determined by intelligent and honest discussion and equitable conclusion. As applied to the present, these ideas may notb e wholly practicable. The people are not ready to avail themselves of their opportunities. Feelings of distrust and doubt and envy more or less predominate. In the future, however distant, there is hope and confidence. But, as applied to some of the prominent lines of business, including iron and steel, the doctrine of conciliation and co-operation are practicable, even now. If so, and we are ready to take advantage of the fact, who can estimate the benefit to be derived.

AN AMERICAN DEMONSTRATION OF CO-OPERATION

"It has been demonstrated in America during the last year that the idea is practicable. In the month of October of 1907 we were visited by a financial cyclone. It was the culmination of many unfavorable and uncontrollable currents, not necessary to detail at present. At the beginning no one could accurately forecast the future. The possibilities of a prolonged and disastrous business depression were in the minds of all. The danger related to the iron and steel trade, perhaps, more than to any other; and that has been considered the barometer of trade conditions. Most of the jobbers throughout the country had purchased large stocks at the prices prevailing when conditions were favorable, which were undisposed of. Pending contracts for construction which involved large purchases of iron and steel, extended to every locality. Contracts for new furnaces, mills, and equipment, and for raw and semi-finished materail, had been made by large numbers of manufacturers. An immediate and radical reduction in prices would have meant bankruptcy to multitudes of concerns that had been successful and were considered substantial. And this would, perhaps, have precitated trouble in many, if not all, other lines. These conditions were realized by bankers and financiers generally and certainly by the manufacturers of iron and steel. They recognized their responsibility and rose to the occasion.

"Early in November an invitation was extended to the leading men connected with this industry, including about 60 in number, to meet in conference and without exception the invitation met with an affirmative and cordial response. Conditions were favorable to the cause. The United States Steel Corporation, one of the largest concerns, has a finance committee composed of nine gentlemen of great experience and intelligence and connected in various ways with nearly all other prominent lines of industry, who determine the policy of the corporation. Then the officers of the corporation and all its subsidiary companies are efficient and energetic, and always loyal to the policies determined by the committee. They can be relied upon to promptly carry to a successful conclusion any campaign determined upon. Besides and better still, the manufacturer of iron and steel in the United States as a whole is in the hands of men who cannot be surpassed in excellency. They are intelligent, honest, broad-minded and sincere.

"At the first meeting, after each one present expressed his opinion that the conditions and dangers were as I have previously stated, the doctrine of conciliation and co-operation was suggested. In some respects at least it was novel. In times gone by, when business prosperity was interrupted by a financial depression, or by doubt and distrust, however, provoked it had been customary for each one to consider and to endeavor to protect his own interests, regardless of all others. Each sold his own products wherever he could and at whatever prices he could obtain. Demoralization, panic and prolonged failure followed. It was customary to urge that the action was inevitable, that the law of supply and demand must control; that natural conditions cannot be exchanged. Parenthetically, I may say, I have my own definitions of these well worn expressions but will not stop to name them. nAd so last November at first there were some who were more or less skeptical. They had doubts as to the movement. But a large majority had confidence, and all were willing to make a trial.

"The suggestions which were made and finally adopted were simple. It was proposed to appoint a General Committee of Seven, with power to appoint subcommittees, connected with special lines. To the subcommittees any one interested in a particular line might apply for information and advice. And to the General Committee the respective chairmen of subcommittees or any individual might apply for information and advice. Without going into detail, it suffices to say these committees kept fully informed in regard to the affairs of all, and freely advised individuals with respect to conditions, generally or in detail. While they were given no power, their advice was usually followed. No agreement to maintain prices, restrict output or divide territory or any other agreement was made. It seemed clear, however, that the result would be the same if the movement was to be successful; for how otherwise could any benefit be derived. Why meet together and keep one another fully informed unless each could recognize the rights and interests of all others. Each one was acquainted with the producing capacity of the others, of the territory naturally tributary to their furnaces and mills, of the customers of the others and of the prices charged. If any one proposed to change his prices or increase his output, or sell in a new territory, he would, as a matter of honesty and fairness, inform the committee. Without going further into detail, it is important to say the effort has been successful. It was to be expected there would be some mistakes by subordinates, and that, to some extent, there would be transactions beyond the bounds of propriety and fairness; but the total result has been a great benefit. Of course from time to time manufacturers were imposed upon by proposed purchasers, who made the usual misrepresentation that other manufacturers were selling at a reduced price. This caused more or less anxiety, and the services of the committees were required to straighten out the trouble. The tricks of the trade are too well known to make it necessary to discuss them at the present time.

"It was not long before the movement secured the approval and hearty co-operation of all concerned. Prices have generally been maintained, demoralization and insolvency prevented and greater profits realized. The benefit to general business conditions and the influence in aiding restoration of business prosperity are testified to by financiers and by the press generally. Perhaps the most prominent good which has resulted is found in the feeling of friendship which exists among the members of the industry. This will be of great pleasure and profit to all in the long future. Frequent meetings are held at which each one present expresses with great freedom and frankness his views concerning all questions that are involved, and all have confidence in one another. The business is well in hand. The manufacturers are running their own business for their own gain, and yet at the same time they have injured no others. On the contrary they have advanced the interests of their customers, their employees and the public generally.

MANUFACTURERS IN ALL COUNTRIES SHOULD WORK TOGETHER

"I wish to emphasize the idea this evening that practical co-operation should be extended in our line of business particularly. The manufacturers of iron and steel in all countries should be working together with and for one another. If we have the intelligence and disposition to take advantage of our opportunities we can be of great benefit to ourselves and to all others. While success cannot be reached without effort, perseverance and patience, above all, confidence in one another, it may be reached if we are determined.

"Human nature is about the same the world over. We are selfish, conceited and suspicious. We are inclined to look through a glass that magnifies our own importance and rights and minimize those of all others. We wrap around ourselves the coat of self-righteousness; but the good Lord looks down upon us and sees very little difference. When removed from temptation we are saints; but when it comes to business transactions with one another we are apt to be common sinners. We need to occupy a high plane where our vision is clear and unobstructed; where we can see the rights and interests of all others. We need to recognize the fact that by helping others we help ourselves, and that by injuring others we injure ourselves.

"I do not advocate anything that is antagonistic to the laws or to the public welfare. What I propose is the utilization of all our opportunities for the advancement of all our interests. A closer connection, a better understanding, a complete confidence, a full and free interchange of ideas, information conveyed by one to another concerning all the business in question and an organized committee composed of men whose advice should always be followed; these thoughts amplified and formulated, should bring to all of us the largest measure of success."

ONE WOMAN'S STATEMENT

Tells Her Suffering Sisters to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills

They Proved a Blessing to Her When Her Pains and Weakness Were Almost More Than She Could Bear.

St. George, Man., Nov. 13—Special—(Hoping to save her sister women in the West from pains and aches which come at the critical times in a woman's life, Mrs. Arsene Vinet of this place has given the following statement for publication;

"I have brought up a large family and have always enjoyed good health until the last two years. I am fifty-four years of age and at the critical time of life that comes to every woman, I had pains in my right hip and shoulder. I could not lie down two minutes at a time without suffering the greatest agony. Sometimes I awakened with a feeling as if some one had laid a piece of ice on my head. Another time it would be a burning pain under the right shoulder.

"I took many medicines but could get no relief, till reading of cures of similar cases to my own by Dodd's Kidney Pills, led me to try them. They did wonders for me.

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. The woman who has sound Kidneys is safeguarded against nine-tenths of the suffering that makes life a burden to the women of Canada.

Womens Suffrage

Editor of the Review

Sir,—I am glad to see the Review is fair to women and their suffrage as it is called. Surely we are entitled to as much consideration as most men are. The chief argument of our opponents is that we will not vote. How many men vote unless bribed? I think I can promise you that women will vote just as well as men.

Yours, etc.,
WELLWISHER.

Editor of the Review.

Sir,—It's all nonsense this idea of women wanting to vote. Their extreme nervousness and illogicalness makes it important that they should remain at home, where there is plenty work for them to do, and I hope, Mr. Editor, you will say no more, about the question, but let it die,

Yours, etc.,

By "FOOTLIGHTS."

Glau and his overweight chorus from the "Aeroplane" company have returned to New York in what may be described as greatly reduced circumstances. Not as to finances, let it be said, nor yet in numbers, glory be, but in avoirdupois—that is to say, gross flesh. The entire galaxy has lost out in this respect, much to its advantage.

It seems the people out west will support slim ballerinos, and no other and our famous "balloon chorus," carried, so to speak, no weight with them. They treated that prize collection of fat New York beauties with an unprecedented coldness. Consequently, Glau faced the problem of reducing the entire front and rear rows at once, or shipping them back —excess" baggage. It was a terrific job, as all who saw the "Aeroplane" before it left this tolerant town will admit, but our ingenious townsman tackled it and succeeded— broke all records, in fact. And thereby hangs a tale worthy of any fat lady's attention.

Glau didn't rehearse his flock into shape, nor worry them into line, nor yet worry them verbally, into shadows. He paid salaries regularly and let them eat and drink as they listed He simply hung up a new rule in the dressing rooms, to the effect that every lady less than five foot seven who weighed in excess of 150 pounds, must take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime, (or about where her bedtime ought to be of the following; One-half ounce Marmola, 3-4 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 4 3-4 ounces Peppermint Water.

They did it and in a month averaged a loss of a pound a day apiece. "That's a dandy receipt." says Glau. "Simple, pleasing, harmless and a worker from the word go." Wish I could get a railroad rate reducer half as good."

Bishop Dowling and the Hamilton Roman Catholic clergy tendered a reception to Hon. J. M. Gibson last night.

HOSPITALITY APPRECIATED

Orillia Boys Well Pleased With Their Reception at Peterboro'

At the Y.M.C.A. Older Boys' Conference at Peterborough this week the local association was represented by the General Secretary and seventeen members this being the second largest delegation in attendance. The boys report a pleasant and helpful time, and speak highly of the hospitality of the Peterborough Association and people. A number of the boys assisted in the programme, including an excellent paper by Stanley Watson on the needs of the store or sales boy. An invitation was extended to the Conference to meet in Orillia next fall.—Orillia News-Letter.

FINE SPORT IN THE NORTH

The Grant-Crowe party, camping between Jack's and Eel's Creek. Stony Lake, got three fine deer, two bucks and a doe last Wednesday. They are having good luck.

The Miller-Charlton party at Rock Lake, in North Harvey, have a bear and one deer.

The Drain party Koshabog, has 7 or 8 fine deer.

PRESCRIPTION FILLED OFTEN

Many Persons Here Benefitted by Home Prescription and Druggists are Kept Busy

That the readers of this paper appreciate advice when given in good faith is plainly demonstrated by the fact that one well-known local pharmacy supplied the ingredients for the "vegetable prescription" many times within the past two weeks. The announcement of this simple, harmless mixture has certainly accomplished much in reducing the great many cases of kidney complaint and rheumatism here, relieving pain and misery, especially among the older population, who are always suffering more or less with bladder and urinary troubles, backache and partichlarly rheumatism.

Another well-known druggist asks us to continue the announcement of the prescription. It is doing so much real good here, he continues, that it would be a crime not to do so. It can not be repeated to often, and further states many cases of remarkable cures wrought.

The following is the prescription, of simple ingredients, making a harmless, inexpensive compound, which any person can prepare by shaking well in a bottle; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarcaparilla, three ounces. Any first-class drug store will sell this small amount of each ingredient, and the dose for adults is one teaspoonful to be taken after each meal and again at bedtime. There is enough here to last for one week, if taken according to directions. Good results will be apparent from the first few doses.

Chair Hitching.

"The chair hitcher," says a business man, "is the greatest nuisance that an office man is compelled to endure.

"The hitcher is always deeply interested in the matter he has come to talk over, and the more he talks the closer he draws his chair, and with every additional point he makes he gives his chair another bunch in your direction, and by the time he has fairly entered on his subject he has his feet on the rounds of your chair, his elbow on your desk and is dropping the ashes from his cigar on your coat sleeve. It would be just as easy for him to make his speech or preach his sermon three or four feet away, but he never learns that fact and damages his own cause by dragging his chair over your carpet and puffing his breath in your face.

"I know one office man in town who got so tired of having cigar ashes on his clothes and smoke poured into his face that he called a carpenter, took the rollers off one chair, placed it in a convenient position at the end of his desk, then had the man nail it to the floor. But it didn't do a particle of good. The first hitcher that came in was a big, strong 200 pounder, who began his talk and, growing earnest, just pulled the chair up by the roots, dragged it toward the desk and never noticed that anything was wrong."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

His Mean Trick.

"There certainly are differences in feelings," said the woman who sometimes philosophizes, "or at least different ways of expressing them.

"A few days ago a shocking incident occurred in the apartment house where I live. The janitor, who was an unusually good looking man, about thirty-five years old, killed himself for some wholly inadequate reason, some difference with his employer. Of course everybody in the house was much upset by the tragedy, and I, with other tenants, went down to the basement to see his wife and offer aid.

"'Would you ever think such a fine man would do such a mean trick?' she exclaimed."

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

Just about six weeks' time in which to prepare for the Christmas festivities. How many of us have thought of the short time we have to do the immense amount of purchasing the Christmas season call for? Whether extensive or not, the buying should be done early, and now when the goods are fresh and the stock full, is beyond a question the time to buy.

Many women look ahead and at the present time have several articles stored away. Some of these have more than likely been picked up at bargain prices and will go a long way in cutting down the expenses of gift-giving. However, there are more than a few women that never think of such things as purchasing early and figuring at the last moment. As for the men, Christmas eve they begin to think of buying, very seldom do they ever think of it before If one could only realize how early shopping would assist in lessening labour for both merchant and clerks probably more of it would be done. Let the clerks feel that you are doing your share by starting now, and it is a foregone conclusion that you will receive the best possible attention, as well as a wide range of goods to choose from.

Many of the stores and shopping places have already taken on the holiday aspect and toydom in its unchildish glory is agog with anticipation of the pleasure it is sure to bestow on the little folks of near and far.

For the wee girl's dolly there is every article of dress, whether it be fancy or plain—and all in the latest fashion, too. Long gloves, rubbers, parasols, slippers, fancy dresses, fans and the very newest ideas in doll's hats are just a few of the many articles that every child who owns a doll yearns for.

For those older in years the shops display many new ideas in neckwear. The full, wide, pleated chiffon ruffles with edging of lace are favorites. Then there are gloves, veilings, handkerchiefs, belts, and innumerable other articles which every woman loves.

The jewellery stores, perhaps the most popular for the Christmas trade —have new and inexpensive novelties all of which are sure to be appreciated by the recipient. Collar pins of gold with engraved monogram are always useful and one cannot be overstocked with them. By the way, those contemplating buying gifts which are to be engraved, will be wise to order them as early as possible to be sure of having them when wanted, for in a short time the engravers will have to leave the engraving till after the holiday season.

Several of the tailoring stores are busy mounting vests which thoughtful friends have knitted. Some of the stores have orders to make up fancy ones, and what man is there who does not appreciate this article of wearing apparel. The array of neckwear, handkerchiefs, scarfs and gloves in the gent's furnishing stores is at its best. Never were the neckwear patterns so handsome and the range so complete, and in a month's time—well, the stock will be somewhat diminished.

A Christmas gift should always be of such a character that the one who receives it can appreciate it. No matter how small or of what value if the articles is at all useful it will be appreciated. Many people are in the habit of giving articles that are fitted for neither ornamental or useful purposes and generally the cost of them is high. Choose gifts carefully, and before purchasing just think of the recipient's likes and dislikes, and as far as possible cater to each and everyone's individual taste.

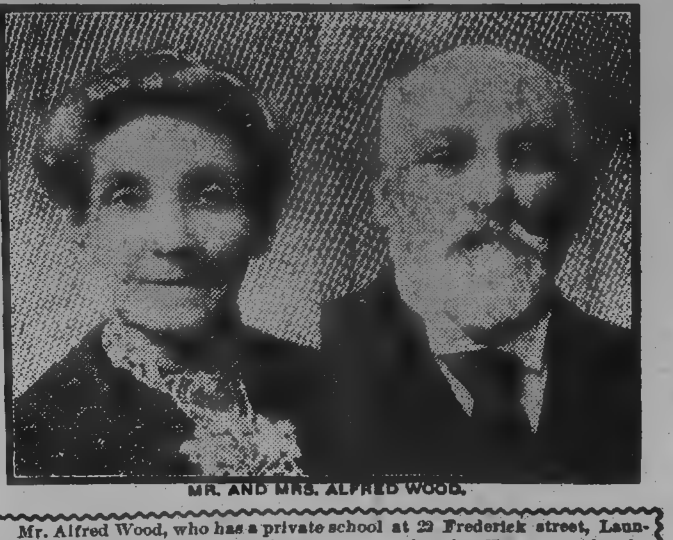
PE-RU-NA PROMPTLY RELIEVES

A Case of Dreadful Suffering Which Had Continued For Months.

An Account of a Remarkable Recovery Given By Mr. Alfred Wood, Teacher of a Private School at Launceston, Tasmania.



MR. AND MRS. ALFRED WOOD.

Mr. Alfred Wood, who has a private school at 22 Frederick street, Launceston, Tasmania (Australia), has been a teacher for 37 years under the Educational Department of Tasmania. He writes, concerning his wife's case, as follows:

"My wife was suffering for months from gastro-enteritis, and was given up by her medical attendant.

"By good fortune I was induced to try Peruna in her case, and I can truthfully state that from the first dose her dreadful suffering ceased; and after taking five bottles she is permanently cured."

By simply arousing the forces of Nature to throw off the diseased action.

Peruna contains no magic and does not operate in any mysterious way, but it does help Nature to combat disease, and thus many times comes to the rescue of the patient in some important crisis.

There is always a time in the course of any disease when a little help goes a great way.

Just as the scales are beginning to descend, when one ounce more would determine the fate of the patient, a little lift will turn the scales in favor of the patient.

Peruna is a handy medicine to have in the household.

As a tonic or catarrh remedy, its reputation is well established all over the world.

As a remedy for stomach and bowel disease, the fame of Peruna is undoubtedly destined to become greater than that of any other medicine in the world.

Pe-ru-na For Indigestion.

Mr. Donald Robb, Jr., 16 Wrights Ave., Halifax, Nova Scotia, member Independent Order of Forresters, writes:

"While on a visit to Boston, I must have eaten something that did not agree with my stomach, as a terrible case of indigestion followed.

"Peruna was recommended to me and after using three bottles I was entirely cured.

"I therefore recommend Peruna to any one suffering with stomach trouble."

Mr. Chas. Brown, Rogersville, Tenn., writes:

"A friend advised me to take Peruna for indigestion and it cured me in a short time."

Have You Ever Figured

WHAT AN IMMENSE AMOUNT OF WORK YOUR EYES HAVE TO DO?

Every moment you are awake you use them steadily and those who read much or sew a great deal, or whose duties require close application of the eyes, are almost sure to stand in need of an Optician sooner or later.

To wait until a more convenient time is an injustice, as the trouble is being increased every day. Decide right now to see us about the matter. We tell many persons that they need not wear glasses, and will tell you if we find your eyes not under strain. Even if you need glasses you may get them where you like and when you like.

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT. 1907. BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

"We chased volcanoes. There was theory under it all. He believed at volcanic emanations are caused y a mighty and uncomprehended ener-y, something that achieves results scribable neither to explosions nor eat, some eternal, inner source. Radium, if you choose, only he didn't call that. Radium, as known to our odern sc ntists, he regarded as the armless plaything of people with time nging heavy on their hands. He asn't after force in pin point quantities—he wanted results. Yet I believe hat, after all, what he sought was a rt of higher power of radium. The henomena were related. And he had me of that concentrated essence of tchblende in the chest when we start-. Oh, not much, say about $20,000 orth. Maybe thirty. For use? No. ather for comparison, I judge.

"Yes, we chased volcanoes. I beame used to camping between samle hells of all known varieties. I got that the fumes of a sulphur match emed like a draft of pure, fresh ir. Wherever any of the earth's pimles showed signs of coming to a head were we, taking part in the ouble. By and by the doctor got so oroughly poisoned that he had to y off. Back to Philadelphia we came. here an aged seafaring person, temrarily stranded, mulcted the professr of a dollar—an undertaking that reuired no art—and in the course of his [illegible] touched upon yonder little cesspol of infernal iniquities. An uncharted volcanic island—one that he ould have all for his own. You may ess whether Dr. Schermerhorn was terested.

"'That iss for which we hat long vain sought, Percy,' he said to me his quaint, link chain style of eech. 'A leedle prifate volcano labotory to ourselves to have. Totally nknown, undescribed, not on the hart to be found. Tomorrow we start. make a list of the things to get.'

"He began his list, as I remember, ith three dozen undershirts, a gallon f pennyroyal for insect bites, a box of sorted fishhooks, thirty pounds of a and a case of carpet tacks. When hadn't anything else to worry over, I sed to lie awake at night and specue on the purpose of those carpet cks. He had something in mind. If here was anything on which he prid himself, it was his practical bent. ut the list never got any further. It eased short of one page in the ledger, you may have noticed. I outfitted telegraph on the way across the tinent.

"The doctor didn't ask me whether d go. He took it for granted. That's obably why I didn't back out. Nor I tell him that the three life insurnce companies which had foolishly nd trustingly accepted me as a risk erely on the strength of a good contitution were making frantic efforts compromise on the policies. They elt hurt, those companies. My ealthy condition had ceased to apal to them. What's a good constitution between earthquakes? No, there as no use telling the doctor. It ould only have worried him. Besides, I didn't believe that the island as there. I thought it was a myth of hat stranded ancient mariner's imagnation. When it rose to sight at the oper spot, none were more astounded than the bad risk who now addresses you.

"Yet I must say for the island that came handsomely up to specifications. Down [illegible] you were Slade, ou didn't get a [illegible] insight into its isposition. [illegible] there as an [illegible] —geysers, hell spouts, fuming fissures, cunning little craterlets with alf portions of molten lava ready to serve hot, more gases than you could reate in all the world's chemical laboratories—in fact, everything to make e place a paradise for Old Nick and r. Schermerhorn. He brought along his precious chest besides the radium some sort of raw material; also near as I could make out a sort of [illegible] or guardianship scheme for his ncentrated essence of cussedness [illegible] he should get it out of the volano.

"In the first seven months he put[illegible] around the little fumers, with an [illegible]sional excursion up to the main rater. It was my duty to follow on [illegible] drag him away when he fell unconscious. Sometimes I would try to [illegible] him before he was quite gone. [illegible] he would become indignant and [illegible] me. Perhaps that helped to lose [illegible] his confidence. More and more he withdrew into [illegible]. There were days when he spoke no word to me. It was lonely. Do you know why I used to visit you at the beach, Slade? I suppose you thought I was keeping watch on you. It wasn't that; it was loneliness. In a way it hurt me, too, for one couldn't help but be fond of the old boy, and at times it seemed as if he weren't quite himself. Pardon me if I may trouble you for the matches. Thanks.

"Matters went very wrong at times. The doctor fumed like his little craters, growled out long winded, exhaustive German imprecations; wouldn't even eat. Then, again, the demon of work would drive him with thong and spur. He would rush to his craters, to his laboratories, to his ledger, for the purpose of entering unintelligible commentaries. He had some peculiar contrivance, like a misshapen retort, with which he collected gases from the craterlets. Whenever I'd hear one of those smash I knew it was a bad day. Meantime the volcano also became—well, what you might call temperamental.

"It got to be a year and a quarter—a year and a half. I wondered whether we should ever get away. My tobacco was running short, and the bearing of the men was becoming fidgety. My visits to the beach became quite interesting—to me. One day the doctor came running out of his laboratory with so bright a face that I ventured to ask him about departure.

"'Not so long now, Percy,' he said in his old, kind manner. 'Not so long. The first real success. It iss made. We have yet under entire control to bring it, but it iss made.'

"'And about time, sir,' said I. 'If we don't do something soon we may have trouble with the men.'

"'So?' said he in surprise. 'But they could do nothing—nothing.' He wagged his great head confidently. 'We are armed.'

"'Oh, yes, armed. So are they.'

"'We are armed,' he repeated obstinately. 'Such as no man was ever armed are we armed.'

"He checked himself abruptly and walked away. Well, I've since wondered what would have happened had the men attacked us. It would have been worth seeing and—and surprising. Yes; I'm quite certain it would have been surprising. Perhaps, too, I might have learned more of the great secret, and yet I don't know. It's all dark—a hint here, theory, mere glints of light. Where did I put— Ah, thank you!"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

FOR some moments Darrow sat, gazing fixedly at the table before him. His cigarette tip glowed and failed. Some one suggested drinks. The captain asked Darrow what he would have, but the question went unnoted.

"How I passed the next six months I could hardly tell you," he began again, quite abruptly. "At times I was bored—fearfully bored. Yet the element of mystery, of uncertainty, of underlying peril, gave a certain zest to the affair. In the periods of dullness I found some amusement in visiting the lower camp and baiting the nigger. Slade will have told you about him. He possessed quite a fund of voodooism. He possessed more before I got through with him. Yes; if he had lived to return to his country I fancy he would have added considerably to Afro-American witchlore. You remember the vampire bats, Slade? And the devil fires? Naturally I didn't mention to you that the devil fire business wasn't altogether as clear to me as I pretended. It wasn't, though. But at the time it served very well as an amusement. All the while I realized that my self entertainment was not without its element of danger too. I remember glances not altogether friendly, but always a little doubtful, a little awed. Even Handy Solomon, practical as he was, had a scruple or two of superstition in his makeup on which one might work. Only Hagen—Slade, I mean—was beyond me there. You puzzled me not a little in those days, Slade. Well—

"Did I say that I was sometimes annoyed by the doctor's attitude? Yes. It seemed that he might have given me a little more of his confidence, but one can't judge such a man as he was. Among the ordinary affairs of life he had relied on me for every detail. Now he was independent of me. Independent! I doubt if he remembered my existence at times. Even in his blackest moods of depression he was sufficient unto himself. It was strange. How he did rage the day the chemicals from Washington went wrong! I was washing my shirt in the hot water spring when he came bolting out of the laboratory and keeled me over. I came out pretty indignant. Apologize? Not at all. He just sputtered. His nearest approach to coherence seemed to indicate a desire that I should go back to Washington at once and destroy a perfectly reputable firm of chemists. Finally he calmed down and took it out in entering it in his daily record. He was quite proud of that daily record and remembered to write in it on an average of once a week.

"Then the chest went wrong. Whether it had rusted a bit or whether the chemicals had got in their work on the hinges I don't know, but one day the professor, of his own initiative, recognized my existence by lugging his box out in the open and asking me to fix it. Previously he had emptied it. It was rather a complicated thing, with an inner compartment over which was a hollow cover, opening along one rim. That I conjectured was designed to hold some chemical compound or salt. There were many minor openings, too, each guarded by a similar hollow door. My business was with the heavy top cover.

"'It should shut and open softly, gently,' explained the professor. 'So. Not with-a-grating-sound-to-be-accompanied,' he added, with his curious effect of linked phraseology.

"Half a day's work fixed it. The lid would stand open of itself until tipped at a considerable angle, when it would fall and lock. Only on the outer shell was there a lock. That one was a good bit of craftsmanship.

"'So, Percy, my boy,' said the doctor kindly, 'that will with sufficient safety guard our treasure. When we obtain it, Percy. When it entirely finished and completed shall be.'

"'And when will that be?' I asked.

"'God knows,' he said cheerfully. 'It progresses.'

"Whenever I went strolling at night he would produce his curious lights.

Sometimes they were fairly startling. One fact I made out by accident looking down from a high place. They did not project from the laboratory. He always worked in the open when the light was to be produced. Once the experiment took a serious turn. The lights had flickered and gone. Dr. Schermerhorn had returned to his laboratory. I came up the arroyo as he flung the door open and rushed out. He was a grotesque figure, clad in an undershirt and a worn pair of troucers fastened with an old bit of tarred rope in lieu of his suspenders, which I had been repairing. About his waist flickered a sort of aura of radiance which was extinguished as he flung himself headforemost into the cold spring. I hauled him out. He seemed dazed. To my questions he replied only by mumblings, the burden of which was:

"'I do not understand. It is a not to be comprehended accident.' It appears that he didn't quite know why he had taken to the water, or if he did be didn't want to tell.

"Next day he was as good as new, just as silent as before, but it was a smiling, satisfied silence. So it went for weeks, for months, with the accesses of depression and anger always rarer. Then came an afternoon when returning from a stalk after sheep I heard strange and shocking noises from the laboratory. Strict as was the embargo which kept me outside the door, I burst in, only to be seized in a suffocating grip. Of a sudden I realized that I was being embraced. The doctor flourished a hand above my head and jigged with ponderous steps. The dismal noises continued to emanate from his mouth. He was singing. I wish I could give you a notion of the amazement, the paralyzing wonder with which— No, you did not know Dr. Schermerhorn. You would not understand.

"We polkaed into the open. There he cast me loose. He stopped singing and burst into a rhapsody of disjointed words. Mostly German, it was a wondrous jumble of the scientific and poetic. 'Eureka' occurred at intervals. Then he would leap in the air. It was weird; it was distressing. Crazy? Oh, quite! For the time, you understand. If any of us should suddenly become the most potent individual in the world, wouldn't he be apt to lose balance temporarily? One must make allowances. There was excuse for the doctor. He had reached the goal.

"'Percy, you shall be rewarded,' he said. 'You haf like a trump card stuck by me. You shall haf riches, gold, what you will. You are young; your blood runs red. With such riches nothing is beyond you. You could the ancient tombs of Egypt explore. It is open to you such collections as have never been gathered to make. What shall it be—scarabs, missals, prehistoric implements? Amuse yourself, mein kind. We shall be able the bills with usurious interest to pay. What will you haf?'

"I said I'd like a vacation if convenient.

"'Presently,' he replied. 'There yet remains the guardianship to be perfected. Then to a world astonished and respectful we return. Tonight we celebrate. I play you a rubber of pinochle.'

"We played. With the greatest secret of science resting at our elbows we played. The doctor won. My mind was not strictly on the game. In the morning the doctor sang once more. I shall never hear its like again. Was it a week or a month after that? I cannot remember. I fancy I was excited. Then, too, there was something in the atmosphere about the laboratory. I don't know; imagination possibly. Once we had a little manifestation—the night that the nigger and Slade were terrified by the rock fires. Days of excitement and pleasant work, with the little valcano grumbling more sulkily all the time. I have spent worse days.

"Such indifference as the doctor displayed toward the volcano I have never known. If I ventured to warn him he would assure me that there was no cause for alarm. I think he regarded that little hell's kitchen as merely a feed spout for his vast enterprise. He felt a sort of affection toward it. He was tolerant of its petty fits of temper. That he completed his work before the destruction came was sheer luck—nothing else. The day before the outburst he came to me with a tiny vial of complicated design.

"'Percy, I will at a reasonable price sell this to you,' he said.

"'How much?' I inquired, responding to his playfulness.

"'A bargain!' he cried gaily. 'Five millions dollars! No! Shall I upon a needy friend hard press? Never! One million! One little million dollars!'

"'I haven't that amount with me,' I began.

"'Of no account,' he declared airily. 'Soon we shall haf many more times as that. Gif me your C. O. D.'

"'My I O U?' I inquired.

"'It makes no matter. See! I will gif it to you gratis.'

"He handed me the metal contrivance. It was closed.

"'Inside iss a little, such a very little. Not yet iss it arranged the motive power to give forth. One more change to be made that shall require. But the other phenomena are all in this little half grain comprised. Later I shall tell you more. Take it. It iss without price.' He laid his hand on my shoulder. 'Like the love of friends,' he said gently."

Feeling in his upper waistcoat pocket, Darrow brought out a vial, so tiny that it rolled in the palm of his hand. He contemplated it, lost in thought.

"Radium?" queried Barnett, with the keen interest of the scientist.

"God knows what it is!" said Darrow, rousing himself. "Not the perfected product. The doctor said that when he gave it to me. If I could remember one-tenth of what he told me that night! It is like a disordered dream, a phantasmagoria of monstrous powers, lit up with an intolerable, almost an infernal radiance. This much I did gather—that Dr. Schermerhorn had achieved what the greatest minds before him had barely outlined. Yes, and more. Becquerel, the Curies, Rutherford—they were playing with the letters of the Greek alphabet, Alphas, Gammas and Rhos, while the simple, gentle old boy that I served had read the secret. From the molten eruptions of the racked earth he had taken gases and potencies that are nameless. By what methods of combination and refining I do not know, he produced something that was to be the final word of power. Control—control—that was all that lacked.

"Reduced to its simplest terms it meant this: The doctor had something as much greater than radium as radium is greater than the pitchblende of which a thousand tons are melted down to the one ounce of extract. And the incredible energies of this he proposed to divide into departments of activity. One manifestation should be light—a light that would illuminate the world. Another was to make motive power so cheap that the work of the world could be done in an hour out of the day. Some idea he had of healing properties. Yes. He was to cure mankind; or kill, kill as no man had ever killed, did he choose. The armies and navies of the powers would be at his mercy. Magnetism was to be his slave. Aerial navigation, transmutation of metals, the screening of gravity—does this sound like delirium? Sometimes I think it was.

A MIND READER.

His Analysis of the Character of the New Boarder.

"I can tell you all about yourself," said the boarding house Sherlock Holmes to the new boarder after the landlady had introduced them across the roast mutton.

The boarding house sleuth prided himself on his keen observation of human nature and his ability to make deductions therefrom.

"You're a mind reader, are you?" asked the new boarder.

"To a great extent," replied the sleuth. "For instance, I never met you before, but I know you are from the east."

"Good guess," said the new boarder.

"You come from a family of extraordinary ability and good antecedents, although none of your family possesses great wealth."

The new boarder smiled his approval.

"A peculiar thing about you is that your beard is of remarkable toughness. Your face, on the contrary, is very tender, so that you experience great difficulty in shaving. Few razors are made of fine enough steel to overcome the texture of your beard."

"True again," said the new boarder, "although I don't know how you guessed it, but my beard is the toughest I have ever encountered."

"Also you are a rough and ready humorist, able to snap out a funny remark in almost any situation that can arise."

"Say," said the new boarder, "you make me feel uncanny. How do you do this stunt of character reading?"

"It's this way," he elucidated. "Simple enough when explained, like all really great detective work. I knew you were from the east by the way you worked the salt shaker. Westerners pick up the salt shaker with the right hand and plunge it at the food. Easterners seize the shaker with the left hand, invert it and tap it briskly on the bottom with the right hand."

"I knew you came from a remarkable family because that's the kind we all come from. I concluded your relatives were not overburdened with wealth or you wouldn't be living in this hashery. I knew your whiskers were remarkably tough, for every man living thinks he has the toughest whiskers going. The barber tells him so. Somehow or other a man takes it as a high compliment to be told his whiskers are the toughest the barber ever tackled. Then it helps reconcile the victim to having his face torn off.

"Lastly, I knew you were a humorist on the same broad and general principle. Every American thinks he is a second Bill Nye with additions and improvements. The small boy at the ball game yells 'Get a basket!' when a ball is fumbled. When the street car conductor says, 'Plenty of room up in front!' half a dozen wits reply, 'Plenty of room, but it's all taken.' When you find a citizen of this great republic who doesn't think he's a jolly wag, you've discovered something."

Crocodile Worship.

It was in the very ferocity and terribleness of the crocodile that the Egyptians found the inspiration for the cult they devoted to him. They were mightily afraid of the monster and therefore instituted in his honor the supposedly appeasing worship as though they had said, "Be good enough not to eat us and we will build temples to you and bow down to you as to a god." The students of early history have clearly proved that the earliest worships of every sort took the shape of offerings intended to appease the elementary forces of nature, or the real or imaginary beings of whom men were afraid.

Curious Russian Law.

Russia has a law which to outside observers seems almost to put a premium on theft by which stolen goods become the property of the thief if he can prove that he has had possession of them for over five years. In the thieves' market—which is, of course, licensed by the police—goods that admittedly have been stolen (more than five years before) are openly offered for sale, and the place is a veritable Mecca for the light fingered gentry and their enterprising friends, as also for the more honest members of society, who secure many a tempting bargain.

Constant Squeezing.

"Now, Algernon," said Miss Fussanfeather, as she was tightly held in the embrace of her fiance, "they tell me that men get tired of squeezing after they are married. Will you promise me not to give it up after we are man and wife?"

"Oh, I assure you it is not necessary to make any such promises," replied the young man. "I guarantee you'll have all the squeezing you want to do to get along on $7 a week."—Exchange.

Flattered Him.

Magistrate (about to commit for trial)—You certainly effected the robbery in a remarkably ingenious way—in fact, with quite exceptional cunning. Prisoner (deprecatingly)—No flattery, yer honor; no flattery, I begs on yer.—London Fun.

Unruffled.

Master—Mary, I wish you would be more careful. I'm sorry to hear my wife has to scold you so often. Mary—Oh, it's all right, sir. I seldom takes any notice of her.—London Telegraph.

The Voyder.

The voyder was a large dish in which were collected the broken victuals which were removed from the table with a large knife with a broad, flat blade, called the voyder knife, from vider, to empty, clear or make void.

"The Boke of Nurture," by Hugh Rhodes, the date of which is 1577, one of the curious set of handbooks of manners and etiquette reproduced by the Early English Text society, speaks of these vessels as follows: "See ye have voyders ready for to void the morsels that they doe leave on their trenchers. Then with your trencher knyfe take off such fragments and put them in your voyder and then sette them downe cleane agayne."

Few silver ones remain, but some large brass voyders or dishes which have probably been so used may still be seen, of the history of which nothing is known by their present owners. —"Old English Plate," by W. J. Cripps.

Types of Female Beauty.

In northern Europe, among the Teutonic races, there are distinct types of beauty to be met with in Sweden, Poland, Saxony and Austria. The Swedish type, however, lacks animation, but the mold and figure to some extent atone for this, says the London Globe. The Austrian women possess a composite beauty in which are united the charms of three or four races. Vienna ladies are tall and stately, with great harmony and proportion in feature and figure. The Tyrolese maiden often lacks a good figure, but her face and manner possess all that is most bewitching in the two races of which she is composed, Latin and Germanic.

B. SHORTLY 373 GEORGE ST. The Sign of the Horse

THE WOOING OF ROSYBEL.

By KATHARINE K. CROSBY.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Farmer John considered him a most ungodly young man and forbade him to enter the yard. He also forbade his daughter, Rosybel, to leave the yard, except on Sundays, when she could go to church under his eagle eye.

It may be that Farmer John's ideals were rather exacting. Rosybel thought them so anyway. To her there was nothing absolutely wicked about a pipe of tobacco, especially if the pipe were of the rakish type affected by young men who had been to college.

Dick Melton had been to college. Indeed his A. B. was barely a fortnight old. Now he was touring the country after a fashion all his own in the search of amusement.

He told his father that he wanted to see something of life before entering upon that glorious political career which his doting parent saw stretching before his eldest born.

Now, touring suggests a gay and festive motor car, all red enamel and staring brass work, but Dick had eschewed such vanities as all too commonplace. He was touring in a hayrack.

Besides Dick there was in the hayrack a variety of commodities—a pile of boards of assorted sizes, for instance; a couple of canvas contraptions which when you gave them a chance evolved into a cot bed and a lounging chair; a nickel plated pail, which could be transformed by some miracle into a complete chafing dish outfit; a small table and, most important of all, a camp organ of the sort carried about by wandering evangelists.

When Farmer John issued his edict that the young man who had dropped into church from nowhere at all and walked home from the meeting with his daughter Rosybel should not enter his premises on pain of death—via bulldog Towser—Dick was rather pleased than otherwise.

His vacation bade fair to furnish more entertainment than he had anticipated. Moreover, he was really very much taken with Rosybel, who was not only the prettiest girl whom he had met with in his travels, but was also blessed with a sense of humor. This is an adorable combination, hard to resist.

The afore mentioned edict was pronounced on Sunday evening, when Dick again presented himself to see Rosybel home from meeting. On Monday morning the hayrack drove into the field which was bordered in part by the neat white palings of Farmer John's homestead fence.

The field did not belong to Farmer John. Quite near the fence, in the shade of a big elm tree, the young man proceeded to assemble the boards which he had taken from the hayrack.

It happened that Rosybel's garden had run sadly to weeds over Sunday, and she was obliged to spend considerable time out there on Monday morning in consequence.

As the garden was between the house and that particular part of the fence where the elm tree stood, she could not help seeing what the young man was about. For one thing, he was smoking, except at times when he removed the pipe and sang a bacchanalian ditty about a stein on a table, which Rosybel was glad her father did not hear, for he always voted no license.

For another thing, the young man was building a house, which in her part of the country is not often gone about so casually. There was, however, neither pounding of nails nor noise of saw. The birds sang undisturbed in the branches of the elm tree, and the hang bird in her nest watched him without alarm.

When Farmer John came in from the fields at noon he snorted at the sight of his new neighbor. By this time the house was nearly done. Dick was hanging the front door, and there remained only the piazza steps to be put in place.

When Farmer John came in from the fields at night the camp organ was hard at work on the piazza. Later many couples came strolling by, on the lookout to see Rosie's new fellow.

They came to see and remained to dance. The grass had been clipped short, and the strains from the organ invited to "Portland Fancy," "Lady of the Lake" and kindred measures.

When they had gone, Rosybel stole down to the fence from the place among the shadows where she had been watching the scene. Dick got to the fence first, and there was neither pipe nor song in his lips.

By the shine of his eyes you might have guessed that there was a whole cycle of songs in his heart, all having for chorus the refrain, "Rosybel, daughter of John!" It was not long, however, before they were interrupted by the voice of this same John calling loudly for Rosie.

It now became the favorite pastime for lovers, young and old, married and courting, to go down to the Old Mill road to watch the wooing of Rosybel. Usually there were music and dancing, but once they had a grand candy pull after the chafing dish had been unlimbered and brought into action.

On this occasion Rosybel came down from her place among the shadows and "pulled" with Dick over the fence. That was the gayest evening of them all, for Farmer John was attending a grange meeting over the mountain and no sound of revelry could reach him.

"This has been going on for a week and tomorrow is Sunday," said the young man when the rest had gone and his heart was singing songs against the white paling fence. "Tomorrow is Sunday, and I should like to walk home from church with you, Rosybel."

"But you can't," provoked Rosybel, "because dad will be there."

"And three's a crowd, I've noticed. Do you happen to know, belovedest, what is wrong about your little Dick?"

"We'll show dad his little mistake. Some one said he was short handed for the haying next week. Is that so?"

"Yes. He can hardly get help, but what"— The sound of approaching wheels threatened Farmer John's arrival, and her question was not finished.

Early Monday morning a stranger applied to Farmer John for work. He wore heavy, silver rimmed spectacles, and his hair was slicked down over his forehead in a bang. His clothes were all that a farm hand's should be, from torn straw hat to sullied shoes.

Farmer John was nearsighted and never interested in matters of personality. He chuckled afterward over the good bargain he had made, for in addition to the horse and hayrack which the man offered along with his services he would furnish his own meals.

He realized that this was unusual, the stranger said, but he had indigestion and could only eat his own cooking. Farmer John was delighted, and Rosybel, listening around the corner, did not know whether to laugh or be glad at her lover's sense of honor which prevented his eating forbidden salt.

Every evening after that they met under the elm tree, and Dick showed her the new callous spots which the day had brought forth, the while he boasted of his prowess in the field. Rosybel listened eagerly and let her eyes tell him what she thought of him, which was very pleasant for Dick and made life altogether worth living.

By Saturday the hay was well in except from a choice patch of clover which the farmer had been obliged to leave out overnight. It was all seasoned and cocked and ready for the fork. The weather had been fine all the week, and when the men turned into their beds at an early hour there was still no threat of change.

In the middle of the night, however, Dick was wakened by a low rumble of thunder. The young man's first thought was of those haycocks over in the west mowing; his next was to get there before the rain. Stopping only for trousers and shoes, he rushed out to where his horse was picketed. The moon gave light enough between gathering clouds for him to see his way to the field, where he put in a half hour of such work as he had never known, even in football season.

The hayrack was loaded and under way for the barn before the rain struck. Farmer John met him in the farmyard with a lantern as he drove up in a hurry and stared at him in astonishment.

"Open that barn door, you loafer!" Dick yelled in his excitement, quite forgetting that he was addressing the father of Rosybel. Farmer John was not used to being called a loafer, but when he came to understand the situation he rather liked it.

When the hay was safely housed and the barn door padlocked he invited the young man into the house to dry off. There he bustled about and built a fire in the kitchen stove, and while Dick was toasting his feet in the oven the old man surveyed him thoughtfully. Presently he inquired mildly:

"What do you do for a living, young fellow?"

"Going into politics," Dick responded modestly.

"Grange or capital?" demanded Farmer John. It was a crucial question.

"I'll stand for the farmers every time," Dick assured him, and that settled it. The two were earnestly discussing the ownership of wild lands when the sitting room door opened and Rosybel appeared.

"Do I understand," asked Farmer John, "that you're talking of getting Rosybel to finish your education for ye?"

"With your consent, yes," replied Dick politely.

"She can teach ye a lot. Women folks mostly can. Well, seeing as you've the makings of a farmer if politics fail, she can have the job if she wants it."

A little gasp from the girl brought them both to their feet. Dick's interest in the farm versus capital was for the moment in abeyance as he crossed quickly to her side.

"When does school open, Rosybel?" he demanded tenderly. Farmer John picked up a candle and stumped toward the back hall door.

"Usually begins 'bout September round these parts," he grumbled as he went out. He foresaw that on the next day, which was Sunday, he would walk home from church alone.

"But it's you who will be the teacher," corrected Rosybel some time later, and Dick, after the way of men, was not at too many pains to set her right.

ADJOURNMENT TO-DAY.

Quebec, Nov. 14.—It is likely that the investigation in the Marine and Fisheries agency of this city will be adjourned to-day, to be resumed again at some future date. Mr. Watson, K.C., intimated the possibility of this to Mr. Justice Cassels last evening before the adjournment at 6.30 p.m. He said that the court had heard the greater part of the testimony prepared, and he hoped to close for the present to-day, leaving open the question as to whether the court would again convene at Quebec. The proceedings yesterday were not quite so interesting as on the previous days, and now that Mr. J. U. Gregory has made his statement the attendance was not so large. Mr. Gregory, in keeping with the declaration he made Thursday in open court, did not put in an appearance yesterday. Nevertheless, he was represented by his legal adviser, Senator Choquette.

MILNER REPORTS.

Says There Is No Prejudice Against Englishmen In Canada.

London, Nov. 14.—(C. A. P.)—Lord Milner, interviewed here, said he had not discovered any prejudice against English immigrants in Canada.

Regarding the preference there was universal feeling in its favor, but he thought the movement had receded slightly since the present Government took office.

Lord Milner added that while all Canadians would oppose emphatically annexation to the United States there were many silent, unconscious influences at work which may bring them to the verge of annexation before they realize it.

He is unrestrained in his enthusiasm for Canada, her resources and potentialities.

Prince of Wales Now a Chief.

Ohsweken, Brant Indian Reserve, Ont., Nov. 14.—The following interesting telegram was received by the chiefs of the Six Nations in council assembled on the King's birthday, from the Governor-General:

"Ottawa, Nov. 8, 1908.—To Chief J. S. Johnson, deputy speaker of the Six Nations, Onondago:

"His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has been graciously pleased to accept the chieftainship, Turtle Clan; a letter will follow.—Signed, Sir J. Hanbury Williams, Governor-General's secretary."

Two Hurt In Explosion.

Toronto, Nov. 14.—Two men were injured and the Savoy Resturant and Candy Store, at Yonge and Adelaide streets, somewhat shaken by the explosion of a 15-gallon water boiler in the basement of the building at 11.35 yesterday morning.

Peter Sims, 73 Nelson street, was struck in the wrist and groin by flying pieces of the bursted boiler. He, with John Lewis, a negro porter, who was struck on the side of the head, was taken to St. Michael's Hospital. Neither is seriously injured.

Found In an Asylum.

New York, Nov. 14.—Prof. W. Harrington, chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau under President Harrison and a well known scientific man, who disappeared from his home in Mount Vernon, N.Y., nearly ten years ago, and for whom his wife and son have been seeking ever since, it was reported yesterday, is an inmate at the New Jersey Asylum. He was found wandering about the streets of Trenton over a year ago, and was unable to give his name or any details about himself.

Another Tercentenary.

Montpelier, Vermont, Nov. 14.—The celebration of the tercentennial anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain and surrounding territory, will take place on July 4 to 10 next year.

WAITING FOR ANOTHER.

How a Borrower Expects to Square a Debt.

The impecunious man got the attention of a group of friends long enough to tell them a little joke on himself. At first they regarded him with deep suspicion, most of them having suffered more or less from his sorry habit of borrowing. When he had convinced them that he had no designs on their pocketbooks they consented to listen to his story.

"Well," he began, "I have a very dear friend whom I long hesitated to borrow from because of my regrettable absentmindedness in such matters. [Heavy sighs from the assemblage.] However, being in desperate straits one day, I mustered up courage to 'touch' him for a five spot. Guess he hadn't heard much about me, for he went right down into his pocket and dug up the requested sum.

"'All right, old chap,' said he. 'Any time I can help you out in a pinch I'll be glad to do so.'

"That was some three weeks ago, and of course I had tried to forget it, not having managed to gather the amount of the loan meanwhile. The other morning my friend approached me with a genuinely serious air.

"'Say,' he said, 'I had a funny dream last night, and you were in it.'

"'That so?' said I. 'What was I doing—returning money that I had borrowed?'

"'That's just what you were doing in part of the dream,' replied my friend. 'We were at a social gathering, and I could plainly see you hand me the five—by the way,' he broke off, 'have you really paid me that five?'

"'No,' I responded, and I could have kicked myself the moment the word escaped my lips.

"'Well,' said my friend, 'that dream made so strong an impression upon me that I was half convinced you had really paid me, and if you had said you did I would not have doubted your word.'

"I took very little interest in the remainder of the dream," said the impecunious man sadly.

"Have you paid him yet?" one of the listeners asked.

"No," was the reply. "I am waiting for him to have another dream."—Detroit Free Press.

Hardships of the Very Poor.

Little Marion, having few real playmates, has supplied herself with several imaginary ones, with whom she has many surprising experiences. Her mother recently overheard her playing with her large family of dolls and entertaining a visionary caller.

"Yes, Mrs. Smif," she said, heaving a deep sigh, "we are poor—terribly poor. We are so poor that I have to spank my babies to keep them warm."—Woman's Home Companion.

For the Meek Man.

"I buy all of John's shirts," said the tall, firm jawed woman, "and I don't allow him to wear loud colors. Show me some subdued shirts."

"Yes, ma'am," hastened the witty clerk. "Just step this way. Here are some subdued shirts for subdued husbands."—Detroit Tribune.

TEN CENTS PER WEEK

VALUABLE GOODS STOLEN FROM THE VERANDAH OF BROCK-ST. RESIDENCE

Delivered When no One Was at Home.

Thieves of a new species are at work in Peterborough. Perhaps they should not be described as of a new type, but at any rate not much has been heard about them lately.

On Friday evening a delivery waggon from a local store called at a house on Brock street to deliver a web of velvet that had been ordered. There was no one at home so the driver placed the parcel on the verandah and went away. A few minutes later a delivery waggon from another store called with a parcel of dry goods and also left it on the verandah. It is understood that the web of velvet was valued at sixty dollars, while the parcel from the other store contained goods valued at about seven dollars.

It appears that some person or persons saw the parcels on the verandah and stole them. When the lady of the house returned there were no parcels awaiting and it was not long before it developed that they had been delivered and disappeared.

It is understood that the police have been notified, but find it difficult to secure a clue that will be of any value. They are working on the matter, however, and hope to apprehend the guilty party or parties.

It is also reported that a gentleman's suit was left on the verandah by a delivery boy a short time ago, there being no one at home. It was also stolen and there was considerable trouble in getting the matter settled, as the suit was not recovered.

Apparently some persons are making a business of carrying off parcels from verandahs and are watching for opportunities to make a haul in this direction.

Residents of the western part of the city frequently make complaints about police protection, claiming that the western portion of Peterborough is not sufficiently patrolled at night. It is not known whether or not there is cause for such complaint.

FOLLOWS RULING

Given by Judge Weller--"Blacklist" Man Fined

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 16.—At the police court on Friday last before Magistrate Matthison, one of the citizens of the town, whose name had been placed on what is called the "Indian list," was fined $10 and costs, and forced to tell where he procured the liquor. The hotelkeeper was then brought before the justice and fined $20 also.

WERE HIT BY TRAIN

Father, Mother and Daughter Killed Near London.

London, Nov. 16.—David Lougheed, his wife and little daughter, were killed near Kingscourt Junction yesterday afternoon by Grand Trunk passenger train No. 3, in charge of Conductor Neil. The train left London at 11.23 a.m.

Mr. Lougheed was driving home from church and was crossing the track when the train suddenly came into view. Before he could get the rig over the track the engine struck it.

The three occupants of the buggy and the horse were instantly killed.

Dr. Chappel, coroner of Kingscourt, took charge of the bodies and had them removed to the stricken home. He will hold an inquest to-day.

DECLINE IN THE BUILDING TRADE

Few Permits Being Issued at Clerk's Office

There appears to be a decline in local building operations. For the past week there has only been one building permit taken out at the city clerk's office, whereas six or seven per week was the number previously. The coming of the snow, is responsible largely for the falling off in the building trade.

GRIM TRAGEDY IN KENTUCKY

Mother Apparently Killed Herself and Two Little Children

Frankfort, Ky., -- 16.—Lying in pools of blood with their throats cut, Mrs. Agnes Lidner and her two children, aged four and five years respectively, were found in their home yesterday. A razor was found in the clenched hand of the mother. The cause of the tragedy is a mystery.

ONLY NINE PRISONERS

There are only nine prisoners in the gaol at the present time. They are all males. This is the smallest number of prisoners for a long time, in fact, it constitutes a record for recent years. It is not unusual to have twenty boarders at Castle Nesbitt, so it will be seen that there has been a big falling off in the number of convictions. All but two of the inmates at the present time were sentenced on vagrancy charges.

HUNTERS RETURN WITH LESS DEER THAN LAST SEASON

The Deer Scarce This Year in North of Peterborough County—Parties Arrived Home Saturday Evening—Had Fine Weather and Good Time

The hunters are home and are busy relating stories of the chase to their friends. The hunting season of 1908 is over and the sportsmen with their memories fresh with the joyful events of the past two weeks, are now looking forward with pleasureable anticipations to next year.

Saturday saw the return of most of the parties from this city. Those who hunted in Peterborough county got home about six o'clock Saturday evening. While everyone reports having had a good time it is generally admitted that the deer this season, especially in this county are not so plentiful as in past years. The number of deer shot by local parties is much less than last fall. Various reasons have been suggested as the cause of this scarcity. It is said that during the winter months the deer all come together in a herd for protection.

The snow is so deep that they are tied to their yard as it were, and it is stated that the farmers in the back country kill them off, as shooting them in their imprisoned condition is a very easy matter. In this way the number of deer is annually becoming smaller. Another reason advanced that the disturbance made by lumbermen are scaring the deer and driving them to the more unsettled parts.

KETCHECUM LAKE PARTY.

The Ketcheeum Hunt Club is one of the oldest parties in Peterborough. They arrived home Saturday night all having had a fine time. Their luck was not so good as in previous years. Nine deer was all they brought with them, whereas last fall they returned with twenty. The members of this party were Messrs. H. C. Winch, captain, J. J. Lundy, President, H. Morrow, R. Stuart, Chicago, Jas. Andrews, Eckern, Ohio, Laird, General Manager, Bank of Commerce, Toronto, Walter Davidson, W. T. Hall, R. J. Munroe, M. Comstock, R. Gibbs, E. F. Mason, V. Eastwood, George Morrow, Archie Jackson, (chef), and Theodore Simpson, guide.

The deer they got were fine specimens, all averaging over two hundred pounds.

EAGLE LAKE CLUB.

This party were a little more fortunate, they having brought home with them eleven deer. They had a good time and no accidents happened to mar the pleasure of the outing. Those who composed the club are; Captain J. J. Cottingham, Geo. Fitzgerald, C. Gunsolus, H. Evans, W. White, O. Dumble, R. Sheehy, Felix Brownscombe, H. Lovekin, C. Gunn, Mark Dobson, John Gibbs, T. Parker,

BOTTLE LAKE PARTY.

The Bottle Lake Hunt Club were successful in getting ten deer, five bucks and five does. They had one of the best outings in the history of the club, but they also report that the deer were scarce this year, the number they got being much smaller than last season. One member of the party stated this morning that during the first week all the deer they were able to get was two. The deer did not seem to come to the lake, only two being caught on the water. The others were shot in the woods.

The members of the Bottle Lake party were:—Messrs. Gus Corcoran, M. O'Brien, Arthur Head, G. Fitzgerald, M. Blewett, Philip Wesley, Jas. Stabler and Dr. Amys.

WOMAN CHOKED TO DEATH WHILE TAKING MEDICINE

While attempting to swallow a spoonful of liquid for medicinal purposes, Mrs. Johnson Greer, 9 Hilliard street, choked to death on Saturday evening about ten o'clock. The late Mrs Greer had been ailing with an attack of quinsy, and her throat was so badly swollen that when taking the medicine she was unable to swallow and choked. Before medical aid could be summoned she passed away. She was 46 years of age, widely known and highly esteemed for her many sterling qualities. She was a member of the George street Methodist church.

Her husband, five daughters and one son are left to mourn her loss. The daughters are Mrs. R. McClellan, Albany, N.Y.; Mrs. Harry Bates, Campbellford, and Myrtle, Reta and Alma, residing at home. The son is Arthur, of this city.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, from the family residence, to the Little Lake cemetery.

THE BERLIN VISIT IS OFF KING'S REBUFF TO KAISER

New York, Nov. 16.—The Herald has the following from London:

The cat is out of the bag at last. It was Sir Rowland Blennerhassett who is the author of the interview with Kaiser Wilhelm which appeared in The Daily Telegraph, and the price paid for it was $2,000.

There are some who have said that King Edward was inclined to be amused at these further indiscretions of his impulsive nephew, but that is far from being the case, for the King was very seriously annoyed, particularly at the part which referred to the plan for the conduct of the South African campaign. His Majesty is showing his displeasure in a very marked way, for all plans for the proposed forthcoming visit of the King and Queen to Berlin have been stopped, much to the surprise of court circles. The King has not given any reasons for this, but while other reasons of a less contentious character will be put forward officially for the abandonment, or at least the postponing, of the visit to the German capital, the real reason is, of course, the recent disclosures.

PRISONERS SUSPECTED OF HAVING SMALLPOX

Two Englishmen, who had just come from the back country, were arrested last evening for being drunk. P.C. Adams heard that smallpox was prevalent in the camp out of which these men had come. He thought that marks on the face of one of them looked like smallpox, and he immediately went after Dr. Bingham. This was about four o'clock this morning. The doctor went down and, after an examination of the prisoners, was of the opinion that there was no sign of smallpox. The police station and cells were thoroughly fumigated this morning.

WRECK BEING CLEARED AWAY AND NEW RAILS BEING LAID

With the steam crane from Toronto and the auxiliary from Havelock working the debris from the wreck on the C.P.R. is pretty well cleared up. A gang of Italians are laying new rails quite a stretch of the rails of the track being badly bent and twisted and thereby rendered useless as a result of the wreck.

The tender of the wrecked engine was placed on the track last night and it was expected that the engine would be put back this afternoon. After it is it will be taken to Havelock where the upper portion of it will probably be reduced to scrap iron but the small wheels may be utilized again.

Engineer Clarke and Fireman Haggarty, who were on the engine at the time of the wreck are at their homes in Havelock and their injuries are not at all serious although they are considerably cut around the head and face. Brakeman Abbey who was in the van of the freight that the engine crashed into is lying in St. Joseph's Hospital severely, but not dangerously injured. The Review learned from the hospital to-day that he has good chances of recovery.

CATHOLICS IN SESSION

Missionary Extension Movement Being Held in Chicago---Many Are in Attendance.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—The first Catholic Missionary Congress ever held in America opened here yesterday morning in the Holy Name Cathedral. The Congress, which will continue until the 18th instant, has brought together a very large number of prelates, priests and prominent laymen from all parts of Canada and the United States. Among those taking part are Right Hon. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada; Archbishop McEvay of Toronto and Rev. Dr. Burke, president of the Canadian Church Extension Society. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick was the principal speaker at a banquet tendered the visiting prelates in the Auditorium Hotel in the afternoon by the Four Degree Knights of Columbus of the Northern Illinois jurisdiction. Archbishop McEvay was the preacher at Pontificial Vespers in the cathedral last evening. Rev. Dr. Burke and Rev. F. Kidd, secretary of the arch-diocese of Toronto, were the deacons of honor, Dr. Burke read a paper at the session of the congress this morning on mission colleges.

SIR CHAS. FITZPATRICK.

The avowed object of the congress, as set forth in its program, is "to mark the change of the Church in North America from missionary conditions to its full share in the efforts of the church universal by striking the note of the unselfishness clearly and forcefully. To crystallize the missionary sentiment now being awakened in the Catholic clergy and people, to the end that all may realize their common duty of preserving and extending the Church of Jesus Christ. To study missionary conditions, especially in America and the colonies of the United States, and plan for their improvement.

COUNTY COUNCIL

Has Been Called to Meet at Court House Next Tuesday Nov. 24th.

The fall session of the Peterborough county council called at the instance of the Warden, has been summoned to meet at the court house here on Tuesday, November 17th.

There is considerable business for the county legislators to transact and the session will last two or three days. It will be the last meeting of the year, unless something should turn up to require a special session.

Belleville, Nov. 16 — The police of this city are looking for two Greek peanut men, Larman Farnacos and Thomas Harrase who acted as bankers for fellow Greeks, and have skipped out with about $650 of the latter's money. The alleged thieves went West.

THE TAX COLLECTOR IS BUSY

City Tax Collector Green is a busy man to-day. On account of Nov. 15th—the last day for paying the second installment of taxes—coming on Sunday, it was decided to receive the second instalment payments up to four o'clock to-day. From the congestion at the tax collector's office it looks as if half the ratepayers had put off the payment of their taxes till the last hour.

After to-day five per cent. extra will be added.

MAURICE HAAS KILLS HIMSELF LAWYER'S ASSAILANT IS DEAD

San Francisco Saloonkeeper Who Tried to Kill Graft Prosecutor in Court Room Commits Suicide With Weapon Smuggled Into Jail.

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—Maurice Haas, who on Friday attempted to assassinate Francis J. Heney, committed suicide Saturday night by shooting himself in the head with a pistol he had concealed in his person.

Haas wore gaiters with elastic sides which made this possible. After he shot Heney, Haas was searched twice. He went to bed Friday night with his shoes on and again Saturday night, and when asked why he did this he said he would rather sleep with them on. The opinion was expressed that the pistol was passed to Haas after he was taken into custody.

Haas' wife called at the jail Saturday to see him, and two stories are told as to where the interview took place. One says that Haas talked to his wife through his cell door, and the other that they were allowed to go into another room. The conflicting stories could not be reconciled yesterday. A rigid investigation is being made by the authorities.

Heney will recover unless unforeseen complications set in

The vicinity of the court room will in future be patrolled and a large force of police will be held in reserve.

Mr. Heney and his family were the recipients of many messages of sympathy and cheer during the day. The messages came from all sections of the United States, and some from Europe. One telegram that brought a smile from the pain-drawn face of the prosecutor was a message from President Roosevelt to Mrs. Heney.

ANOTHER "BLACK LIST" MAN GUILTY OF BEING DRUNK

John Swanston was charged with with a breach of the liquor license act, he being on the "black list" and having been drunk on Sunday. He pleaded guilty to being drunk. Inspector Stewart gave evidence as to Swanston being on the "black list."

Swanston was put in the box and swore that he did not know where the liquor was bought. He got it from a man on George street whose name he did not know but who said that he lived fourteen miles from the city.

His Worship reserved judgment for a week.

GRAFT INQUIRY ADJOURNED NO MORE EVIDENCE READY

Quebec, Nov. 16.—Rather unexpectedly and quite suddenly the investigation into the affairs of the Quebec agency of the Department of Marine and Fisheries was adjourned at noon on Saturday.

Prior to the adjournment, a few witnesses were heard, the most interesting piece of evidence having probably been that given by Mr. Mercier, a grocer, who had dealings amounting to about $5,000 with the Department during three years.

He had paid the usual 5 per cent. to Mr. Gregory, solely, he said, because he wanted money. The total amount paid Mr. Gregory was about $500.

Other witnesses had shrugged their shoulders and given no reason for not entering the details of such payments on their books.

This witness, when asked why he had not done so, replied that Mr. Gregory had warned him not to do so. He kept a memo. of the amounts so paid, and at the end of the year included them in the profit and loss item.

MILLER PARTY SHOT A BEAR

Also Got Three Deer---Hunted in Harvey Township

A fine black bear was seen at the Munro House today, it having been brought to the city by Mr. Wm. Miller, of Warsaw. The bear is not a large one, only weighing one hundred and fifty pounds. But it has beautiful fur and is quite fat, Messrs. Wm. and Robt. Miller and Wm Charlton of Warsaw, were deer hunting in Harvey township where Mr. Wm. Miller happened to sight the bear and fired at it. They were successful in securing three deer.

TO HAVE RECORD OF THE PUPILS

System Has Been Adopted in Public Schools of Havelock

Special to the Review

Havelock, Nov. 16.—Monthly report cards have been prepared and issued to the school children of town, on which their standing for every month in the year will appear. The cards will form a most complete record of each pupil's standing in every subject, and will show absence from school, and conduct. The report will be signed by the parents of the pupils and school, who will thus have an opportunity of ascertaining the progress of their children.

REV. MR. POGUE IS INDISPOSED

Owing to illness, Rev. Robt. Pogue was unable to preach at St. Paul's church yesterday and the pulpit was occupied in the morning by Rev. H. J. Keith and in the evening by Mr. Hassard secretary of the YMCA. Mr. Hassard conducted the service at Knox church in the morning.

Two Liberals have been elected by acclamation in Charlottetown for the P.E.I. Legislature.

INTERESTING CLASSES AT THE Y.W.C.A.

Dr. Greer's Class and Christmas Box Class on Tuesday Evening

Dr. Greer's class in First Aid and Home nursing meets tomorrow evening at eight o'clock.

The first lecture was given last Tuesday evening and was most interesting and profitable.

The Christmas box class is also held on Tuesday evening. It will pay you to spend this hour with the class if you are looking for new ideas in the way of small gifts for Christmas. Each member of the class is asked to bring any new ideas in the shape of made up fancy articles they may have.

CHINAMEN NOT GRIEVED

To Hear of Death of the Dowager Empress of Their Native Land

Peterborough Chinamen were not much grieved to hear of the death of the Dowager Empress of India. When spoken to by the Review to-day one of the local colony stated that it was a good thing for China that she was dead. He stated that the Empress was a strong and consistent opponent of the reform movement in the celestial empire and did everything in her power to keep out western improvements. It is believed that her death removed one of the chief obstacles in the path of the reform movement in China.

CHINA'S EMPEROR AND EMPRESS BOTH DEAD THREE-YEAR-OLD NOW ON THE THRONE

Foul Play is Hinted at in Emperor's Case.

Prince Pui Yi, Son of Prince Chun, Now Ruler of Celestial Kingdom.

Pekin, Nov. 16.—Tsze Hsi An, Dowager-Empress of China, the autocratic head of the Government, which she directed without successful interference since 1861, died at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The announcement of her death was official, and followed closely upon the announcement that Kuang Hsu, the Emperor, died Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, but it is believed that the deaths of the Emperor and the Dowager Empress occurred considerably before the time set down in the official statements.

An edict issued at 8 o'clock yesterday morning placed upon the throne Prince Pu Yi, the three-year-old son of Prince Chun, the Regent of the Empire, in accordance with a promise given by the Dowager Empress soon after the marriage of Prince Chun in 1903. An edict issued on Friday made Pu Yi heir-presumptive.

The foreign legations were notified yesterday morning by the Foreign Board of the death of the Emperor and the succession of Prince Pu Yi. Troops have been in readiness for several days to quell any disorders that might arise on the death of Kuang Hsu, and the possibility of uprisings was made greater because the death of the Dowager Empress was known to be close at hand. Two divisions of troops have been held in reserve and these are now stationed in various quarters of the city. Twenty gendarmes were despatched to guard the approaches to the legations, but up to the present the duties of the forces have been slight. It was announced that the legation guards were ordered out at "the special call of the legations owing to the Emperor's death."

Prince Chun, the Regent, has ordered the viceroys and governors to take precautions for the continuation of the administration of the provinces as heretofore, and he has ordered a hundred days of mourning. The court will go into mourning for three years.

London, Nov. 16.—A special to The London Times from Pekin says the death of the Empress-Dowager occurred yesterday, and following so closely upon the death of the Emperor on Saturday arouses suspicions of foul play. The new Empress-Dowager, it is added, is a complete nonentity. Neurasthenia was the direct cause of the Emperor's death. His Majesty refused to allow himself, when the end was approaching, to be removed to the Pavilion of Peaceful Longevity, thus violating the precedents which prescribe the place of death of the rulers of China. Eventually he expired without having donned the robes proper to the occasion.

AN EMILY PIONEER

Death of Christopher Lowes--Lifelong Resident of That Township

One of the pioneers of Emily township in the person of Mr. Christopher Lowes passed away yesterday morning at his home, lot 21, concession 7. He was seventy-four years of age and had been in failing health for some time. Two years ago he underwent an operation and never fully recovered from the effects of it.

The late Mr. Lowes was born in Emily township a short distance from the farm where he died. He was a man of sterling character which had won for him a large number of friends throughout the district. He was well known in Peterborough and his death will be heard of here with sincere regret.

He was postmaster of Frankhill postoffice for the past twenty years and in this connection became acquainted with a large number of people

The late Mr. Lowes is survived by his wife, two sons, Joseph, of Ennismore, and John, of Emily, on the homestead. Four sisters and two brothers also survive, Mrs. Switzer, of Brock township, Mrs. Mills, of Winnipeg, Mrs. Walton of Dakota and Mrs. Jacob Lowes, of Emily, Mr Julius Lowes, of Emily, and Mr. Joseph Lowes, of Moosimin, Sask. An adopted niece resides in Peterborough.

Mr Lowes was a member of Bethel Methodist church and a consistent Christian. He was a life long Conservative.

The funeral will take place, tomorrow (Tuesday) afternoon at one o'clock from his late residence to Emily cemetery.

A GREAT STRUGGLE

Standard Oil has nearly reached its limit. It has been abundantly proven that the chief manipulator for it, first of all, sent a handsome cheque to the party managers and then a letter recommending the appointment of certain men as judges of the supreme courts. It represents in its machinations the world wide struggle now going on between materialism minus morals and morals minus materialism. Which shall conquer? It is very interesting to note the accompanying struggle of the quasi-religio-materialists to hold to their religious professions and at the same time endorse Standard Oil and what it in other forms represents. Puck is not a malignant spirit according to the dramatists but he must have enjoyed himself more than ever in uttering his well known ejaculation, "What fools these mortals be."

A GEM

London, Nov. 5.—An extraordinary story of the sale of a wife was told at Dunmow police court yesterday, when Samuel Lee, a market gardener, aged 50, was charged with neglecting his three illegitimate children, aged respectively, 8, 7 and 5 years.

Mary Cuttrick, a middle-aged woman, said she had lived with Lee for twenty-two years, and there had been twelve children.

Her first husband sold her to Lee for $25. Three months ago Lee turned her out with the two youngest children, and she had sought a temporary home with a married daughter.

Lee was committed for trial.

Some effort ought to be made to perpetuate this man's suitability to utilitarian surroundings. We are all said to be the product of our environment. What sort of environment produced this?

MR. FOSTER

There can be no doubt that a man must "get after" his accusers or stand condemned hence Mr. Foster's action in taking proceedings is universally regarded as the only proper one. The following clipping seems to express general public opinion:

The London Free Press, a staunch Conservative paper, says that Hon. George E. Foster must press his libel suits, vindicate himself or relieve the Conservative party of his weight. "It is necessary to insist," says that journal, "that Mr. Foster shall make good in his libel actions the Toronto Globe and the editor. If he fails he ought in justice to his party and leader retire from public life. It must not be lost sight of that Mr. Foster has been an able and honest public servant. He is just such a man as a Government inclined toward wrong would gladly, me put out of the political way. He is therefore entitled to fair play. He has brought his action against the Globe at a time when politics are least likely to affect the result. He goes into court backed by a strongly sympathetic vote from his own constituency, and if the Globe as the mouthpiece of Liberalism, has dealt with him unjustly, he should [illegible]. His fitness for public life and service must shortly be determined."—Saturday Night.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Surely there is no need of such papers as the Calgary Eye-Opener anywhere. They owe their popularity largely to their suggestiveness."

The Monetary Times says that the Quebec Bridge Company ceases to exist on January 1st next, when the Dominion Government assumes full charge of it, as a part of the G.T.P. railway.

At last a man of physical and moral courage equal to the occasion is rising up in the Governor of Tennessee to put a stop to night-riding, which has become the entertainment of the banditti.

Necessity and thrift have driven French workingmen to general co-operation in the means of subsistence. If it becomes universal a part of the problem will be solved. Why it has failed heretofore has been a mystery.

The French, who, by the way, are the dramatic critics, par excellence say that America, by which, of course, is always meant the United States, does not appreciate the drama. It is the actresses the Americans like.

There has been no sudden impulse given to industrial activity by the settlement of the fate of the Laurier administration. We still keep on going down hill in every department. In the U.S., however, there has been a tremendous, if sudden, advance.

The marine enquiry at Quebec shows what an admirable (!) system of spending the people's money, the Dominion Administration has had. It is a strange thing that only when the tank of corruption overflows, does the Government take measures to stop it—from overflowing. How many drones are living on the fruits of ill-gotten governmental gains in this Canada of ours anyway!

At the moment of writing it looks as if the irrepressible German Emperor had got the better of our imperial war office in this South African squabble. It seems that he himself turnished us with the only map of S. Africa available for war purposes at the time of the Boer war. He has allowed this to leak out at a carefully calculated moment, apparently.

Mr. Parkhurst, the well-known musical critic of the Globe, sums up the Ontario tour of the Sheffield Choir by saying that nothing was left undone, either in the manner of handling their luggage or the housing and feeding of them to make the lives of its members miserable at Toronto, Hamilton and London. Dr. Coward remarked that the reserve force of at least 5 per cent., which the choir should have to do itself justice, was consumed in the nervous irritation so aroused, and the choir was seriously handicapped.

The scope of this encyclopaedia is immense. The editor says that it will embrace the whole range of theology and philosophy, together with the relevant portions of anthropology, mythology, folk-lore, biology, psychology, economics and sociology. He amazes us by saying that the limits of the field are clearly defined, and that only once or twice throughout the course of this volume has the question been raised whether a particular article should be included or not. We confess we have not grasped the principle of demarcation, though we hope to do so as the encyclopaedia appears."—British Weekly.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rambling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

PETERBORO' CLERGYMAN GAVE ADDRESS

At Anniversary Services at Havelock—Church News From the Railroad Town

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 16—The annual anniversary dinner and entertainment of the Presbyterian church took place on Wednesday evening and was attended by a large number. The dinner, which was all to be desired and which throws much credit on the ladies of the church was held in the basement of the church from five to seven o'clock. Commencing at eight o'clock, a fine programme of songs, solos, duets, etc., delighted in the large numbers that gathered in the auditorium of the church. Rev. H. J. Keith of Peterborough and Rev. P. B. Thornton of Colborne were present and delivered interesting addresses as well as the resident clergymen. This annual entertainment is always a great success and was especially so this year.

Another social was held in the basement of the church on the following evening when there was a good attendance.

On Sunday, November 22nd, the Methodist church will hold their anniversary services and Rev. Mr. Strike of Napanee will conduct both services that day. On the 23rd a concert will be held in the church when Mr. Strike will deliver his humorous and witty address, "Look over my shoulder." Besides first class local talent, the choir of the church will supply special music.

HOW BLUEJACKETS SAVE

BRITAIN'S SAILORS ARE THRIFTY FELLOWS AFTER ALL.

Members of the Naval Force Will Save Greater Part of his Pay on a Cruise Because of the Few Chances of Spending Money—A Handy Tailor Could Once Earn a Good Deal by Plying His Trade.

That "Jack" is not unthrifty is evident from the fact that at the present time £390,000 stands to the credit of 30,000 depositors in the ship, dockyard, and marine banks. As a rule, sailors in the navy prefer to deposit their money in the ship's bank, which is managed by the paymaster, and which pays interest at the rate of 3 3-4 per cent., while in the other banks the usual 2 1-2 per cent. only is allowed.

Another advantage which the ship's bank has over the dockyard bank is that while on foreign service money can be withdrawn with little trouble by merely giving seven days' notice. If, however, a sailor has deposited all his savings in the dockyard bank and wishes to "draw out" while serving abroad, he usually has to wait about three weeks before an "order to pay" is received from the cashier of the dockyard.

"Jack's" savings are derived from a variety of sources. When on a three or four years' commission he usually manages to save the greater part of his pay, for there are not a great many opportunities afforded him, when on foreign service, of spending money. Moreover, if he does not mind working in his spare time, there are several ways in which he can augment his pay to a considerable extent.

Before certain new regulations came into force a year or so ago, which compel a sailor to buy his clothes ready-made from the paymaster, it was no uncommon thing for "Jack" to earn £4 or £5 per month extra by tailoring. A sailor, of course, has to provide his own clothes, and a suit consisting of trousers and jumper (loose jacket) obtained from the paymaster will cost him about half a guinea. He is obliged, however, to take the nearest fit, and, as this was not always to his liking, he much preferred to buy the material, which cost him 1s. 3d. a yard, and make the clothes himself, or, if he was not handy with the needle or scissors, get a messmate to make them for him.

The latter usually charged 5s. for making a pair of trousers and a jumper, the work being done with a hand sewing-machine. Some sailors stitched their own clothes by hand; but this being a rather long task, "Jack" usually found the purchase of a sewing-machine a good investment, for with its aid he was sometimes able to make seven or eight suits a week. But now, of course, that source of income is stopped.

Even more profitable at times, however, is laundry work. Twopence per article, big or little, bar blankets, for which sixpence is charged, is the price which "Jack" has to pay for his washing, if he does not do it himself. On an average, a sailor's washing costs him about one shilling per week, and, as one man will sometimes wash for thirty or forty of his shipmates, he more than doubles and in some cases trebles his pay.

The money is well-earned, however. The washing and ironing of the clothes is no small task, and taking care of the articles while they are drying is sometimes a harder job still. There are always mischievous souls aboard ready to cut down the line on which the clothes may be hanging, for a joke, necessitating a double washing, while, if the laundryman does not keep his eyes open, some of the articles may be missing, in which case he has to replace them. And, as one ship's laundryman significantly remarked to the writer recently, when an article has been down in the stokehold for a day or two it is scarcely recognizable.

Barbering is a profitable business aboard, and many a sailor earns from 10s. to 15s. a week by shaving his shipmates for a penny or cutting their hair for twopence. Then, again, "Jack" is a handy man when it comes to making fancy articles, such as woollen shawls, photo-frames, models, etc. Generally, however, he gives most of these away to his relatives and friends, although he sells them now and again to his shipmates, or visitors who come aboard.

Although moneylending is strictly prohibited on board His Majesty's ships, it is, nevertheless, somewhat extensively practised in secret. Interest is usually charged at the rate of 20 per cent. a month, so that if "Jack" wants to borrow a sovereign from the "professional" moneylender on his ship he pays 24s. for it. Perhaps at the end of that time he is unable to pay back the loan, in which case, of course, he pays the 4s. interest. Instances have been known of sailors paying the interest on a sovereign for twelve months, and, of course, they still owed the pound at the end of that time, although they had paid 48s. for the loan of 20s.

Another reprehensible practice in which some sailors indulge is that of touting for "bookies." Betting on horse-races is becoming very common in the navy, in spite of the attempts of the authorities to stop it. A "bookie" will pay a sailor 20 and sometimes 30 per cent. commission for all bets received aboard. Not only, however, does he have to run the risk of being severely punished if found out, but the mess to which the tout belongs may turn against him, for, if discovered, he brings discredit on the whole mess, who are suspected of aiding and abetting.

HUCKLEBERRY FARMING.

Agriculture With a Match in the Timber Regions.

"It may seem incredible to those who have never lived in or traveled much through timber districts where the huckleberry is indigenous," said a native of such district, "but it is a fact that there is a tribe of shiftless persons in all such regions who systematically and without regard to law, property or life set fire to woods or cut over land adjacent to woods simply to increase the area of huckleberry bushes.

"There is only one way in which huckelberries can be cultivated, and the huckleberry farmer does not need to own an inch of land. If he has the title to one simple lucifer match he can put thousands of acres under cultivation in a very short time.

"He has only to light the match and touch it to the dry leaves and branches on the ground, either in early spring or late fall, and his cultivation is soon under way. No matter what grew on the ground before fire swept it bare, huckleberry bushes will never fail to spring up luxuriantly from the ashes and scorched soil. They will be in abundant bearing the next season. What the result may have been in loss of life or property does not concern the persons who reap the benefit.

"Many of the fires that devastate our forests every year may be traced to this reckless and deliberate making or improving of huckleberry patches. I remember one instance particularly where the setting fire to the brush on a huckleberry barren in northern Pennsylvania resulted in a forest fire that swept over a 10,000 acre timber tract, doing incalculable damage to the standing timber and reducing to ashes 50,000 feet of logs and lumber and 30,000 cords of tanbark, representing a money value of nearly $750,000. Twenty persons were burned to death and thirty so badly burned that seven of them died from their injuries. The huckleberry crop gathered from this cultivation of that barren waste perhaps realized $200 to the cultivators.

PROVED HIS SPELLING.

An Incident in the Career of Stephen A. Douglas.

An amusing incident occurred in McLean county, Ill., at the first court which Stephen A. Douglas, the famous politican, attended after his election as prosecuting attorney. There were many indictments to be drawn, writes Professor Allen Johnson in his life of Douglas, and the new prosecuting attorney in his haste wrote the name of the county M'Clean instead of McLean. His professional brethren were greatly amused at this evidence of inexperience and made merry over the blunder.

Finally John T. Stuart, subsequently Douglas' political rival, moved that all the indictments be quashed. Judge Logan looked at the discomfited youth and asked what he had to say to support the indictments.

Smarting under the gibes of Stuart, Douglas replied obstinately that he had nothing to say, as he supposed the court would not quash the indictments until the point had been proved. This answer caused more merriment, but the judge decided that the court could not rule upon the matter until the precise spelling in the statute creating the county had been ascertained.

No one doubted what the result would be, but at least Douglas had the satisfaction of causing his critics some delay, for the statutes had to be procured from an adjoining county.

To the astonishment of court and bar and of Douglas himself it appeared that he had spelled the name correctly. To the indescribable chagrin of the learned Stuart the court promptly sustained all the indictments. The young attorney was in high feather and made the most of his triumph. The incident taught him a useful lesson—henceforth he would admit nothing and require his opponents to prove everything that bore upon the case in hand.

His Curiosity Satisfied.

A wealthy tradesman who had been drinking the waters of Bath, England, took a fancy to try those of Bristol. Armed with a letter of introduction from his Bath physician to a professional brother at Bristol, the old gentleman set off on his journey. On the way he said to himself, "I wonder what Dr. Blank has advised the Bristol physician in regard to my case?" and, giving way to curiosity, he opened the letter and read:

Dear Doctor—The bearer is a fat Wiltshire clothier; make the most of him.
Yours professionally, J. BLANK.

Pelican and Flamingo.

The hook of the pelican's bill is red, and undoubtedly the fable that the pelican feeds its young with blood from its own breast originated in the bird's habit of pressing the bill upon the breast in order to more easily empty the pouch, when the red tip might be mistaken for blood. Another explanation is that the pelican became confused with the flamingo, which discharges into the mouth of its young a secretion which in color resembles blood.

All His Doing.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells, with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention.

In such cases the one sure remedy which speedily removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. J. A. Laliberte, of 34 Artillerie Street, Quebec, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For six years I have been doctoring for female weakness, heart and nerves, liver and kidney trouble, but in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I can safely say I have found a cure.

"I was continually bothered with the most distressing backaches, headaches, and bearing down pains, and I kept growing more and more nervous.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of all these distressing symptoms and made me a well woman. I would advise all suffering women, young or old, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

OF INTEREST

According to Major-General Sir Alf. Turner, who for several years before and after the Boer war was Director-General of the British auxiliary forces, and who attended regularly the German Army manoeuvres, and came in contact with high-placed officials in Germany, the only new point in the Kaiser's statement is that the German plan for the Boer campaign was communicated direct by the Emperor to Queen Victoria. "I am personally aware," he said, "that a plan was drawn up and written out by the German General Staff, and I know that it was communicated to the British Government. It is the practice of the German General Staff to formulate a plan of campaign for every war, big or little, that breaks out in any part of the globe, and they could not devote more trouble in the preparation if the war were their own. The plan for the Boer campaign was drawn up at the very beginning of the war. It was communicated to me at the time, and proposed in effect that the British forces should at once penetrate into the Boer country, and take the risks of a Boer raid into Natal, the German view being that the movement they suggested would have the effect of drawing away the enemy from the British Colony. To do him justice, Gen. Buller made a similar proposal, but he was overruled on account of political considerations. The German plan was communicated to the British Government long before Lord Roberts went out, but I am not in a position to know whether he ever saw it, or, if he did, whether it influenced him in the measures he adopted. The conditions had altered considerably in the interval, but apart from the relief work that had to be done, the plan that was followed did not differ very materially from the one which the German General Staff proposed."—(The People.)

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Viscount Kills Guide.

Kenora, Nov. 16.—An unfortunate shooting accident, with fatal result, occurred on Friday, the victim being William Prettie, aged 32, a hunter and trapper of this district.

A shooting party consisting of Maj. Hon. Jeffrey Vereker, his nephew, Viscount Gort, with William Prettie and George Gilbert, guides, left on Thursday to go moose hunting. While following the trail, Viscount Gort slipped on a large stone and fell, the rifle going off, the bullet entering Prettie's leg and going right through. He was brought to the Jubilee Hospital here, but died Saturday.

Viscount Gort is the eldest son of Lord Gort, and came to Canada to visit his uncle a few weeks ago and to hunt large game.

Killed by Buzz-Saw.

Chatham, Nov. 16.—Benson Sterling, aged 34, a young married man, met a horrible death while taking part in a "sawing bee" at the farm of William Stevens at Scotland Saturday. His coat came in contact with a revolving saw, and his right arm was drawn into the spinning circle and severed from the body. The saw also cut terrible gashes in his side and hip. Mr. Sterling staggered about ten feet from the death-dealing machine, when he collapsed and died. His last words were: "I am going home to mother."

A widow and child survive.

Prominent Clergyman Killed.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 16.—Rev. Dr. G. Brinley Morgan, rector of Christ's Episcopal Church, and one of the most prominent clergymen in the diocese of Connecticut, was struck down by an automobile driven by Samuel Campbell Saturday afternoon, and died early yesterday morning. The minister was crossing the street in front of his church at the time.

Grand Duke Alexis Dead.

Paris, Nov. 16.—Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, an uncle of Emperor Nicholas, died in this city on Saturday of pneumonia. The grand duke has lived in Paris almost continuously since his retirement from the position of Russian Minister of Marine, which he held 24 years.

Suicide by Shooting.

Montreal, Aug. 16.—Fred B. Mellor, whose body was found in Mount Royal Saturday with a bullet in his head, is supposed to have represented a Toronto thread firm. Alongside the body was a rifle and a box of cartridges. Mellor has lived in Montreal about a year.

Killed by a Fall.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—Charles Godbout, a carpenter, died in St. Luke's Hospital on Sunday as the result of injuries sustained in falling from a scaffold at the Geological Survey Museum on Saturday afternoon. He fractured his skull and both legs.

Dead Indian Identified.

Brantford, Nov. 16.—The Indian who was run down and killed by a Grand Trunk train near Mount Vernon Friday night has been identified as David Staats, aged 70 years, formerly of the local reserve.

Will Spend $10,000,000.

Pittsburg, Nov. 16.—Arrangements for spending about $10,000,000 on new mills and improvement of old mills in the Pittsburg district were completed by officials of the United States Steel Corporation here Saurday. Before leaving for the east last night President W. Ellis Corey of the Steel Corporation, said:

"We are now working 60 per cent. of our capacity, and I look for a gradual improvement until about the middle of next summer, when business will reach a normal and healthful stage. I do not expect any boom, but only healthful business."

"Tag-Day" Disappointing.

Toronto, Nov. 16.—Nine thousand dollars will be the limit of Saturday's collections, as a result of the Y.W.C. Guild "Tag Day," early in the evening, with the money fairly rolling in it was estimated that upwards of $38,000 would be gathered. This was based upon the assumption that each girl would average $25, and that there were 1,500 girls in the field. The "big" boxes were coming in from the downtown district at that time, and they were coming in fast.

As a matter of fact, the average was less than $19, and there were only about 500 girls at work.

Canadian Gets Windfall.

Owen Sound, Nov. 16.—John Milne, a former resident of the Township of Sydenham, now living at Stockton, Man., has been advised that he is one of the heirs of the wealthy Bernie estate in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, worth $8,000,000. His uncle, the head of the Bernie family, died last spring without a will. The estate will probably be divided between the five brothers and sisters of the deceased, and Mr. Milne, who is a son of one of the Bernie sisters, will come in for his share, to be about $300,000.

Franco-Canadian Treaty.

London, Nov. 16.—The Morning Post thinks Canada might yet abandon the Franco-Canadian treaty if there was an early prospect of obtaining reciprocity here. It emphasizes the strenuous efforts of the German commercial classes to obtain a similar treaty.

The News urges capital, labor and the Board of Trade here to study the Lemieux act as a model.

Evanturel Is Dead.

Montreal, Nov. 16.—Word was telephoned here yesterday of the death of Hon. F. E. A. Evanturel, clerk of the Canadian Senate, and formerly M.P.P. for Prescott and Speaker of the Ontario Legislature. Death was due to pneumonia.

Mr. Evanturel leaves a son and a daughter. He died at the residence of his son in care of Dr. Lebreque of Alfred, Ont.

HOPE IN RURAL ROUTES.

U. S. Postmaster-General Says They Would Wipe Out Deficits.

Washington, Nov. 16.—In his annual report to Congress Postmaster-General Meyer will say that he is "firmly convinced that the establishment of a special local parcel post confined to rural routes would tend to wipe out the postal deficit, and would finally make the rural delivery self-sustaining, besides being of convenience to the farmer and a boon to the retail country merchant."

There are now in operation more than 39,000 rural routes, he said, serving a population of about eighteen million people, and should an average of fifty-five pounds of merchandise be carried by the rural carrier on each trip throughout the year, it is estimated that $15,000,000 would be realized.

The rate would be five cents for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound up to eleven pounds, the maximum weight of a package.

CANADIAN CAMP EATS LION.

Man-Eater Has Fine Flavor But Is Rather Tough.

New York, Nov. 16.—A man-eating lion from Tsavo (at least so the menu said) was the contrepiece of the dinner on Friday night of the Canadian Camp. Everything played up to the lion and back again. Those who ate the man-eater declared the flavor was fine, but the meat tough. There were several opinions, expressed that the beast had been too great an athlete in his day, and that a less muscular specimen, after a few years of idleness and travel with a first-class circus, would be preferable. There were also lily bulbs, and potatoes from Moose Camp.

It was the sixth dinner of the camp, and was held at the Hotel Astor. At the guests' table were Will Carleton, Prof. H. C. Bumpus, Dr. Geo. L. Porter, John Achorn, Gilbert Evans, Dr. Elwood Worcester, D. W. Huntington, W. I. Carroll and L. F. Brown.

Plotted to Kill Mother.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 16.—Charged with a cold-blooded plot to murder her mother for her life insurance, Miss May L. Otis, 640 East 46th place, was arrested by central office detectives and locked up.

The daughter, who is 36 years old, had contracted with three men for $2,500 to kill her mother some time within the next three or four days, according to the police. The booty was to have been a $6,000 life insurance policy which the mother had taken out in favor of her daughter.

Miss Otis paid $100 down on the murder contract on Friday and finished all preparations for carrying out the deed, it is said. Then she was arrested and discovered that she had been bargaining with two city detectives and the head of a private detective agency who had been detailed to watch her and learn the plot.

Mother Wants to Pay.

Toronto, Nov. 16.—A woman in Colorado has written for the second time to the Bank of Toronto officials asking for particulars concerning the passing by her son on a Toronto bank of a bogus check for $250. She wants to make amends. None of the city banks have any record of the loss, though the offence is said to have occurred last May, in which month the woman's first letter was received.

Indian Church Burned.

Kingston, Nov. 15.—St. Andrew's Church on Tendinaga Indian Reserve, near Deseronto, has been destroyed by fire, entailing serious loss. An insurance of $1,000 was carried. It looks as though the building has been set on fire. The church was built in 1828, and has been served by divinity students of Queen's during the past years.

Wife's Charge Against Husband.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 16.—Alfred Taylor appeared before the police magistrate to be bound over to keep the peace as a result of threats against his wife, was charged by her with seducing her at the age of 15 and with killing a child of their illicit union. Taylor came here from San Francisco ten years ago.

Actor Farnum Divorced.

New York, Nov. 16.—A decree of absolute divorce was granted Saturday by Justice Bischoff to Mrs. A. Johnstone Farnum from Dustin Farnum, the actor. Farnum was named as co-respondent by Howard Gould in his answer to a suit brought against him recently by Katherine C. Gould.

Re-Elected Head of Douma.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 16.—Nikolai Khomykoff was on Saturday re-elected president of the Douma by 316 votes to 34. Vice-Presidents Volkonsky and Meyerdorff and Secretary Sasonoff also were re-elected.

From Lawyer to Day Laborer.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—Relatives from Stratford, Ont., have claimed the body of John N. Duggan, who collapsed in the plant of the Detroit Copper and Brass Rolling Mills.

Duggan was once a well-known Toronto attorney. He met with reverses and came to Detroit, working in the rolling mills as a day laborer.

Rails For India.

Made $60,000 Commission.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—A write for $60,000 has been taken out against A. E Brunet, supreme controller of L'Union St. Joseph Society of Montreal, by Leon Decoeur of Ottawa, on behalf of the members of the society.

The claim is that as supreme controller of the society, having charge of financial dealings, he bought debentures on the municipalities about Montreal and sold them to the society, with a profit which, with interest, amounted to $60,000.

The action is to prevent A. E. Brunet from holding any office in the society and to compel him to pay $60,000 to the society.

Canada-German Line.

London, Nov. 16.—(C. A. P.)—With reference to the proposed German steamship lines to Canada, it is generally thought Buelow's cleverness has again scored.

It is undoubted that the Canadian Pacific intended putting its own vessels on the route, until threatened by continental competition.

There are rumors of a joint Cunard and Grand Trunk Railway service when the latter's system is completed. Meantime it is possible a temporary arrangement may be made.

Miss Elkins Not Engaged.

Washington, Nov. 16.—U. S. Senator Stephen B. Elkins last night made the emphatic announcement that no engagement exists between his daughter, Miss Katherine Elkins, and the Duke de Abruzzi of the Italian navy.

The statement was made with the knowledge of Miss Elkins.

DYNAMITE KILLS FOUR.

Campbellton, N.B., Nov. 16.—Information was received here Saturday from Paspebiac, Que., of a most disastrous explosion which occurred at Port Daniel, Que., a short distance below Paspebiac, on the line of the Atlantic & Lake Superior road, in which four men were killed outright and three were seriously injured. The names of the victims were not learned. There were three crews working on the new tunnel which is being cut at Port Daniel, and at 12 o'clock on Wednesday night, just as the night crew were coming to work, a blast was being set off. The man in charge had taken some dynamite from a box and made the charge ready, After which he threw the box on the ground, thinking it to be empty. An explosion followed almost instantly, blowing four men who were near at the time to atoms. Three of the men killed are said to have belonged to Paspebiac and one to St. Godfrey.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The Bishop of Stepney has been appointed Archbishop of York.

A bylaw will be submitted in Belleville for the erection of a Collegiate Institute to cost $40,000 to $50,000.

Miss Pearl Campbell, teacher at Belleville, has accepted a position on the staff of the Deaf and Dumb Institute.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth will leave about Jan. 1 for Vienna to remain as long as may be necessary to restore his hearing, which has been defective for some time.

Daniel Barr, 59 Sussex place, Toronto, a coachman, drank a considerable quantity of soured ink and carbolic acid in his room Sunday morning. It is expected he will recover.

Gomez Is Victorious.

Havana, Nov. 16.—Practically complete returns of Saturday's election show that the Liberal victory was even more decisive than supposed.

Official returns from 1,390 of a total of 1,498 polling places show that Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez received 183,833 votes against 118,329 for Gen. Marie Menocal, the Conservative candidate.

The Liberals carried every province in the island. Havana Province went Liberal by 25,000 and the city by 13,000.

Austrian Cabinet.

Vienna, Nov. 16.—Baron Richard von Bienerth, Minister of the Interior, in accordance with instructions from the Emperor, has formed a new Cabinet, himself taking the office of premier.

The Austrian Cabinet resigned on Nov. 7, on account of dissensions between the German and Czech Ministers, following the recent racial conflicts in Prague and other Bohemian towns.

In the new Cabinet Baron von Haerdtle has been appointed Minister of Interior and Herr F. von Georgi, Minister for National Defence. The other Ministerial offices have been entrusted to the present Departmental chiefs.

Arrested For Assault.

Toronto, Nov. 16.—Word was conveyed to the police yesterday that the companion of Reginald M. Ross in the attack on Mrs. Ruby Henson Friday night was Patrick Connelly, a porter at the Woodbine Hotel. He was immediately arrested and charged with the crime. Mrs. Henson identified him as the second man.

WERE GUESTS AT THE TEA ROOM

Mr. W. Harold Cluxton Entertained a Number of Friends on Saturday

The King's Daughters' tea rooms in the old Bank of Montreal building looked especially attractive on Saturday afternoon. The decorations were exceedingly beautiful, yellow and white crysanthemums being the flowers used. Mr. Harold W. Cluxton entertained a number of friends at the tea rooms on Saturday. A very enjoyable half hour was spent and the kind hospitality of Mr. Cluxton was greatly appreciated by those who were his guests.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

TEMPERANCE PEOPLE ARE WORKING HARD

Local Optionists Putting up Strong Fight at Havelock—Expect to Win

Havelock, Nov. 16.—On Sunday last Rev. Wm. Kettlewell, a very able and convincing speaker, and who is secretary of the Dominion Alliance, preached at the Presbyterian church in the morning on "Temperance." In the evening he preached on the same subject in the Methodist church and in the afternoon addressed the children of both the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools.

He also preached at a public meeting of citizens in the Opera House on Monday evening when a large number of ladies and several men were present and the local option temperance movement in Havelock was organized. Besides getting a large number to sign the petition, those interested are working hard to carry local option in this town on January 4th next.

TRAINS WERE BEHIND TIME

Owing to Engine Being Derailed at Central Ont. Jct.

Owing to an engine jumping the track at Central Ontario Junction early Sunday morning the C.P.R. early trains from Montreal and Ottawa were delayed three hours. The engine was derailed and it was not until an auxiliary arrived from Havelock that it was again on the track and able to proceed.

THE WEATHER

Last November at this late in the month everything was frozen up and the "soft" weather came in the earlier part of the month. The roads at the present are very muddy and sloppy in most parts of the country the falling snow and the thawing mud combining make them in that condition. The travelling, however, is not heavy as the roads are pretty hard beneath the surface of mud.

THE MISTAKE OF CHURCHES

Do Not Recognize the Foreigners They Convert When They Come to This Country

Dr Edward Judson, pastor of Judson Memorial Baptist church, New York, addressed the Baptist Ministers Convention in that city and sounded a note of warning after this fashion:

"The Protestant Church is neglecting a great opportunity in this city. The rich and well to do are eagerly looked for but the poor are shunned and left to drift anywhere except to Christian moorings. It makes me mad when I think the church has deserted the poor in the crowded districts in lower Manhattan and removed to fashionable uptown centers where they are used only once a week and all the rest of the time are attended by mice, silence and gloom.

"The vast neglected population of lower New York particularly that section of the city above City Hall to Houston street and to the two rivers, provides a rich field for the institutional church. In those districts of lower Manhattan where children swarm like rabbits in burrow the Protestant church is dying out.

"Men and money are sent to foreign lands for missionary work, but when the foreigner comes to these shores, we shun him. The Italian when he comes here appears to lose the picturesqueness that appeals to the missionary in Italy. The churches flee from the congested environments instead of subduing and using this material. This policy is fatal to Christianity in this city. The church should cling to old fields, no matter how discouraging, hopeless and repulsive the conditions might become. The masses down town need the churches.

"They build fine churches in rich districts. If I had my way I would build the most beautiful churches in the midst of the poor where the masses would find the joy and happiness denied them in the squalor of their crowded homes. Don't however, in appealing to the masses, make the mistake of telling them that they need the church. Make them believe that the church needs them. The workingman will not be patronized."

SHORTAGE OF CARS KEEPS BACK THE WESTERN WHEAT

The reports received this week from the agents of the Interior Department in the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan are, with the exception of Regina, a continued complaint of the lack of transportation facilities along the line of the Canadian Pacific railway.

In some places the shortage of cars is more pronounced than in others. Moose Jaw is bad. At Calgary the grain moving is blocked in the southern district, owing to shortage of cars. The market for cattle is good, at Medicine Hat, but cars are wanted to ship the stock. At Macleod the elevators are full, and in consequence of the shortage of cars the marketing of wheat is impeded.

Cars are badly needed also at Leduc and Herbert, where the complaint of car shortage seems to have become chronic, aggravated by the fact that there is no coal in the place, and unless cars are furnished before the winter sets in, trouble will result. Lethbridge is seriously prevented from shipping wheat.

At Yorkton, where the elevators are filled, farmers have been compelled to haul their grain home again.

From Manitoba, with the exception of Swan River, where it is reported farmers have been waiting three weeks for cars and without success, the transportation conditions are declared satisfactory.

The farmers are busy plowing once more. In the Lethbridge district the winter wheat is very promising, and in many parts of the province a most luxuriant growth is reported.

HAPPENINGS AT HAVELOCK

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 16—A large gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Knox on Friday evening, to bid farewell to their old friends and neighbor, Mrs. A. Knerwasser, before her departure for Ottawa and to present her with a beautiful silver fruit dish, a handsomely carved silver cake dish and a pearl handed butter knife accompanied by the following address, read by Mrs. Chas. Roberts.

Dear Mrs. Knerwasser;

We, a few of your friends and neighbors, of some years' standing, knowing that in the order of Divine Providence you are about to sever your connection with the village and people of Havelock, cannot allow the opportunity to pass without expressing to you the esteem in which we hold you and all the members of your family. We have always found you among the truest of our friends and the kindest and best of our neighbors, every good work has has your sympathy and support according to your ability.

We regret very much your contemplated departure from our midst and hereby express our best wishes for your future prosperity and happiness. Please accept these pieces of silver as a small token of our esteem and a pledge that we will ever pray that heaven's choicest blessings may rest upon you all.

Signed.—
MRS. JOS. KNOX
MRS. J. E. KELSEY.

Miss Nellie Griffith has returned from visiting friends in Detroit.

Mr. Jos. Thompson, of Athens, spent Sunday and Monday last the guest of his brother, Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P.

Mr Wm. Fairman has been transferred to the Toronto-Owen Sound division left last week for West Toronto where he will reside in the future. His many friends here will regret very much his departure from town, but will wish him every success in his new home.

MODERATING STAGE LANGUAGE

The Toronto police are doing a good work in restricting the actors in the different theatres in Toronto in the use of their language and in making them eliminate all rough expressions from their stage vocabulary. This should be done in every city. There is nothing more disgusting or embarrassing to decent patrons of the theatre than to be forced to listen to expressions on the stage which the listeners would not use or countenance in every day life. The use of some language employed reflects much discredit on the judgment of the stage director in allowing it to be used and besides does much to discourage the attendance of people whose ideas of morality are, in anyway of a healthy nature.

Letters from the Chief of Police of Toronto have been flowing into the managers of one or two of the local theatres during the past few weeks. A great many theatre-goers seem still to be unaware of the fact that all Toronto theatres are under the supervision of the police department, who have power to stop any performance if in their judgment the language is unfit, or the costuming or action amenable to the code.

As an instance of the working of the law, Manager Cowan of the Grand was obliged to ask the manager of "The Straight Road" company to see that all "swear words" whether they expressed the equivalent of perdition or the milder inference that one is merely under "condemnation," be erased from the dialogue. Presumably other managers in the city received the same missive, for there was a scampering of brains at several of the local houses to sweep the lines free of anything worse than "Goodness gracious" or "Gadzooks."

The action of the chief is not as adversely criticised by the local managers as might be expected, though it gives the companies occasional trouble. The burlesque houses are "up against" the most stringent end of the censorship, for the companies which play their houses come from a United States circuit on which liberties of language are freely allowed. Curbing them in Toronto is made, therefore, a matter of difficulty.

OLD REGISTRAR PASSES AWAY

Death of Mr. Stephen Gibson of Napanee

Special to the Review.

Napanee, Ont., Nov. 16.—Stephen Gibson, aged 80 years, registrar of Lennox and Addington, for about fifteen years, died in a hospital in Montreal on Saturday, after a three weeks' illness. Mr. Gibson was taken to Montreal for an operation for gall stones, and he had chances of recovery, but pneumonia set in and carried him away. He was manager of the Cartwright Estate for years and then was appointed registrar.

COMPARING TWO CHOIRS

How does the Sheffield Choir compare with the Mendelssohn. I had no thought of comparing them even before they came. From time to time I have had with me at concerts of the Mendelssohn Choir friends from England, one a native of Sheffield, and they have all agreed that Dr Vogt and his chorus were not to be called the best of an old order of choral singing, but a startling departure and, consequently, there could not be comparison. Dr. Coward has inspired his singers with the love of singing for its own sake, while Dr. Vogt has taken the best material he could find and by persistent adherence to an ideal has brought his choir to a state of perfection that makes comparison as futile as it would to try to compare volunteers and regulars. Each man and each choir are great in their own way, but the ways are widely different. I have never heard anything like the Mendelssohn, but I have heard a number of choruses like the Sheffield, although it stands in a class by itself. —Toronto Saturday Night.

THE BIBLE WAS PRESENTED

Interesting Sermon Preached by Rev. Mr. Keith at Knox Church

At Knox service at last evening's service the new Bible given to the congregation by the Ladies' Aid Society was formally presented. Rev. Mr. Keith preached an admirable sermon in connection with the event taking for his text the words, "Hold Forth the Word of God." It was an excellent discourse and was much appreciated by the large congregation.

A MIND READER.

His Analysis of the Character of the New Boarder.

"I can tell you all about yourself," said the boarding house Sherlock Holmes to the new boarder after the landlady had introduced them across the roast mutton.

The boarding house sleuth prided himself on his keen observation of human nature and his ability to make deductions therefrom.

"You're a mind reader, are you?" asked the new boarder.

"To a great extent," replied the sleuth. "For instance, I never met you before, but I know you are from the east."

"Good guess," said the new boarder.

The new boarder smiled his approval.

"A peculiar thing about you is that your beard is of remarkable toughness. Your face, on the contrary, is very tender, so that you experience great difficulty in shaving. Few razors are made of fine enough steel to overcome the texture of your beard."

"True again," said the new boarder, "although I don't know how you guessed it, but my beard is the toughest I have ever encountered."

"Also you are a rough and ready humorist, able to snap out a funny remark in almost any situation that can arise."

"Say," said the new boarder, "you make me feel uncanny. How do you do this stunt of character reading?"

"It's this way," he elucidated. "Simple enough when explained, like all really great detective work. I knew you were from the east by the way you worked the salt shaker. Westerners pick up the salt shaker with the right hand and plunge it at the food. Easterners seize the shaker with the left hand, invert it and tap it briskly on the bottom with the right hand."

"I knew you came from a remarkable family because that's the kind we all come from. I concluded your relatives were not overburdened with wealth or you wouldn't be living in this hashery. I knew your whiskers were remarkably tough, for every man living thinks he has the toughest whiskers going. The barber tells him so. Somehow or other a man takes it as a high compliment to be told his whiskers are the toughest the barber ever tackled. Then it helps reconcile the victim to having his face torn off.

"Lastly, I knew you were a humorist on the same broad and general principle. Every American thinks he is a second Bill Nye with additions and improvements. The small boy at the ball game yells 'Get a basket!' when a ball is fumbled. When the street car conductor says, 'Plenty of room up in front!' half a dozen wits reply, 'Plenty of room, but it's all taken.' When you find a citizen of this great republic who doesn't think he's a jolly wag, you've discovered something."

Crocodile Worship.

It was in the very ferocity and terribleness of the crocodile that the Egyptians found the inspiration for the cult they devoted to him. They were mightily afraid of the monster and therefore instituted in his honor the supposedly appeasing worship as though they had said, "Be good enough not to eat us and we will build temples to you and bow down to you as to a god." The students of early history have clearly proved that the earliest worships of every sort took the shape of offerings intended to appease the elementary forces of nature, or the real or imaginary beings of whom men were afraid.

Curious Russian Law.

Russia has a law which to outside observers seems almost to put a premium on theft by which stolen goods become the property of the thief if he can prove that he has had possession of them for over five years. In the thieves' market—which is, of course, licensed by the police—goods that admittedly have been stolen (more than five years before) are openly offered for sale, and the place is a veritable Mecca for the light fingered gentry and their enterprising friends, as also for the more honest members of society, who secure many a tempting bargain.

Constant Squeezing.

"Now, Algernon," said Miss Fussanfeather, as she was tightly held in the embrace of her fiance, "they tell me that men get tired of squeezing after they are married. Will you promise me not to give it up after we are man and wife?"

"Oh, I assure you it is not necessary to make any such promises," replied the young man. "I guarantee you'll have all the squeezing you want to do to get along on $7 a week."—Exchange.

Flattered Him.

Magistrate (about to commit for trial)—You certainly effected the robbery in a remarkably ingenious way—in fact, with quite exceptional cunning. Prisoner (deprecatingly)—No flattery, yer honor; no flattery, I begs on yer.—London Fun.

Unruffled.

Master—Mary, I wish you would be more careful. I'm sorry to hear my wife has to scold you so often. Mary—Oh, it's all right, sir. I seldom takes any notice of her.—London Telegraph.

The receipts of the Hamilton Home for the Friendless for the year were $4,364.31, and expenditures $3,943.32.

POLICE PROTECTION

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Will you give me space in your valuable paper to register a kick against the police system here. I am a taxpayer here, and was born in Peterborough, and alwyys considered I was entitled to police protection in case I ever had need to call on them for their services. Yesterday was the first time I had to appeal to them.

Saturday I had an article stolen out of my store, and although the article was not of great value, still I prised it as it was a keepsake. I always thought one of the duties of a policeman was to recover stolen property, so as soon as I discovered my loss I went immediately to the police station, and gave the necessary information, with the name of the party whom I was confident took it. I was informed by them that they were not a collecting agency.

Yours truly,
A TAXPAYER.

SPORTING TALK

Satisfactory progress is being made in the arrangements for the winter matinee of the Peterborough Turf Club which will be held at the Driving park on December 24th.

The great work of Ben Simpson was a feature of the Hamilton-Tigers Ottawa game in Kingston on Saturday for the championship of the senior Interprovincial Union, which the Tigers won by 11-9.

RUGBY

On Saturday Varsity III defeated Queen's III in the game for the junior inter-collegiate championship, Varsity winning the game by 17-8 and the round by 34-13. Ross Dobbin of Peterborough played on the Varsity wing line.

HOCKEY

Cobourg, Nov. 14.—At the annual meeting attended by many hockey enthusiasts, the officers of Cobourg Club were elected for the ensuing year as follows:—

Hon. President—E. W. Hargraft; Hon. Vice-Presidents, A. J. Gould B. McColl, M.P.; Mayor Manson, Chas. E. Speer, jr.; C. A. Arthur; President, Thomas McIntosh; Vice-President, A. L. Jex; Secretary, C. S. Webster; Treasurer, Percy Clarke; Manager (juniors) George Scott; Executive Committee, Ben Bell, S. Doheny, Leslie Wilson, Kent Payne, the president manager and captain. Representative to O.H.A., T. J. Turpin.

A meeting will be held next week to make arrangements for a town league. Cobourg will enter a junior team in the O.H.A., and possibly an intermediate.

Chair Hitching.

"The chair hitcher," says a business man, "is the greatest nuisance that an office man is compelled to endure.

"The hitcher is always deeply interested in the matter he has come to talk over, and the more he talks the closer he draws his chair, and with every additional point he makes he gives his chair another hunch in your direction, and by the time he has fairly entered on his subject he has his feet on the rounds of your chair, his elbow on your desk and is dropping the ashes from his cigar on your coat sleeve. It would be just as easy for him to make his speech or preach his sermon three or four feet away, but he never learns that fact and damages his own cause by dragging his chair over your carpet and puffing his breath in your face.

"I know one office man in town who got so tired of having cigar ashes on his clothes and smoke poured into his face that he called a carpenter, took the rollers off one chair, placed it in a convenient position at the end of his desk, then had the man nail it to the floor. But it didn't do a particle of good. The first hitcher that came in was a big, strong 200 pounder, who began his talk and, growing earnest, just pulled the chair up by the roots, dragged it toward the desk and never noticed that anything was wrong."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Canadian Engineers.

The building and maintenance of the Canadian Pacific Railway has presented so many engineering difficulties that some of the best known engineers on the American continent are now to be found on its staff. In locomotive construction, Mr. Vaughan, of the Angus shops at Montreal, has no equal. The solutions that the Canadian Pacific have found to many engineering problems have been taken as examples by other lines, not only in America, but also in Europe. Thus, for instance, on the new railway from Bergen to Christiania the Norwegian engineers have adopted Canadian Pacific models for their new snow sheds and snow plows. The Norwegians have to face an exceptionally severe winter, traffic in the mountain passes being almost impossible for eight months of the year.

Rare Bird.

"I had a parrot once," said the thin man, "who could repeat the first act of 'Hamlet' through without a break."

"I had a parrot once," said the fat man, "who could not speak a word."

"Huh! That is nothing."

"Wait a minute. He could talk in the dumb alphabet to perfection."—London Answers.

Two boys went out picking nuts and they wanted to divide them up equally between them, so they went over the fence into the cemetery towards evening and sat down among the tombstones to count the nuts. While going over the fence they dropped two nuts, but didn't stop to pick them up.

A man came along and heard them and stopped to listen and heard them saying, "One for you and one for me." "One for you and one for me," and he became badly frightened and ran away down the road, and met another man, who said;

"What's the matter?"

The first man said;—"The devil and the Lord and up in the cemetery dividing up the people," and the second man said; "Oh, no, that couldn't be!"

The first man said; "Yes, they are I heard them."

The two men went back to the fence to listen and heard them saying, "One for you and one for me." "One for you and one for me; now that's all; and the other boy said. "Except the two at the fence, and that will be one for you and one for me."

The two men both ran away as fast as they could.

Wilmer's Escape.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Lake Hammond penitentiary had been built on an island in the lake from which it took its name long before the campers discovered what a lovely place the lake was. At the time of its building Hammond had been fifty miles from the nearest town of any size, and only a spur track ran down to the shore of the lake, connecting with the flat bottomed boat that ferried the freight cars over to the island. Now the south shore fairly bristled with camps and huge hotels. Even on the north the beach and the numerous little islands were dotted with white tents and weather stained log huts.

The campers objected to the presence of the penitentiary, with its great gray barracks and its forbidding iron bars across the windows. That the penitentiary was there first did not alter the situation. The permanent campers wished the prison removed that they might enjoy their three months in camp unterrified by the thought of a possible jail delivery.

No stone walls surrounded the island. Only here and there a guard hut dotted the white expanse of the stone pier, which had been built entirely about the island, ready to shoot at any prisoner who might rashly try to escape. Few tried. It was a good two miles to the nearest shore, and in the winter the white expanse of ice made a background against which a convict would become a fair target for the guns.

Nancy Barlow liked to run her boat in close to the wall and wave her hand to the prisoners sullenly working on the new wing. They could not wave back, she knew, but she liked to believe that this sign from the world outside cheered them in their work. The guards all came to know her and the trim little racing motor boat. They presented arms with a grin as she sped past the wall, and Nancy had the feeling that they answered for the prisoners.

Her little motor was the fastest boat on the lake, and she spent her days speeding up and down the placid surface. She consumed vast quantities of petrol, but the outdoor life was bringing back the roses to her cheeks, and James Barlow would have run a pipe line to the lake if necessary to bring about that result. He had refused his consent to the marriage of Nancy and Fred Wilmer, but he felt vaguely troubled when he saw how the girl had drooped. She was all he had left in the world, and he could not lose her too. It was as much this as a tendency to wildness on Wilmer's part that had led to his refusal, and could he have found Wilmer he would have reconsidered his determination.

But Wilmer had dropped from sight, and none of his old acquaintances knew what had become of him.

Nancy had learned to handle a motor under his guidance on the lake the year before, and her devotion to the boat was in part due to that fact. As she guided the little craft among the channels he had shown her, she liked to dream day dreams of the time when they two should share a boat again. So real was the imagined presence at times that now, as Nancy puffed past the prison island and looked on the parade ground, she rubbed her eyes as she noticed the leader of a file of convicts making their way along the edge of the wall.

It did not seem possible that it could be Wilmer, but, as the little file came nearer, she was certain. Wilmer had never worn a mustache, and there was no mistaking the face. She even fancied that she caught a gleam of recognition in his eyes, as he passed with firm tread. She shut off the power and turned to look after the man in the striped suits. It came as a shock to her that Wilmer was wearing the stripes. She was certain that he had done nothing to deserve imprisonment. It must have been all a mistake, and he had been too proud to call upon his friends for aid. She turned her boat, determined to visit the prison office and find out something about the causes which had led to his incarceration.

As she did so there was a sudden commotion in the line. The even tread of the lockstep was broken, and Wilmer, with a sudden dash, had knocked down the keeper and sprang into the water.

A dozen of keepers rushed to the water wall and emptied their rifles after the escaping convict, while two of the prison boats which happened to be close at hand started in pursuit. Nancy was quicker yet. Throwing on full speed, she faced the fire from the sluice and from the first of the two boats. In a moment she was beside Wilmer, helping him into the launch. Then she sprang to the wheel again and headed for the mainland.

"Why didn't you let us know that you were in trouble?" she demanded as the boat, once more under control, hummed toward the shore. "We would have helped you out. You know that, Fred."

"Only got here yesterday," he explained. "I was going to look you up after my escape, but it is a case of business first."

"You know the little cave up on the mountain?" she asked. "Make for that, and I will bring you other clothes this afternoon."

"I don't care whether he does or not," said Nancy bravely. "You are in trouble, and he will have to see you out of it. He has a lot of political influence, and he can get you a pardon."

"Then you do care?" asked Wilmer eargerly. "He told me that you said that you no longer cared for me; that you had asked him to dismiss me."

"And that was why you stayed away?" she cried.

Wilmer nodded an assent. Nancy's pretty lips made a white line where they were compressed together. She had not a little of the Barlow stubbornness.

"I don't care if you are a convict," she said bravely. "I love you, and I am going to marry you. I didn't want a man who ran away from a negative and didn't hold on to fight for the girl he wanted, but this puts things in a different light. I don't care what you did."

The boat had reached the shore, and, without pausing to make reply, Wilmer leaped from the bow to the sand and rushed into the thicket. There was no word of farewell. Nancy's lips quivered in hurt surprise, but her face blanched as, a moment later, Wilmer strolled out of the thicket again just as the prison boats steamed up.

To Nancy's surprise men from the boats rushed toward Wilmer and began to talk excitedly. However, they made no effort to seize him, and the prison guards remained contentedly in the boat smoking cigarettes and joking among themselves. Wilmer detached himself from the group and came toward Nancy.

"I am afraid you will scold me for not explaining the trick, but I didn't want to waste a film and—I did want to be assured of your love. I am a convict only for today. Your father, among other pleasant things, reminded me of my idle life. To show that I could do something I put my abilities as an amateur actor to use as the stage manager for a motion picture concern."

"All except the part in the boat," was his reply. "That was not a part of the film as written. I did not dare dream of such an addition to the plot."

"To think of me trying to save you, and all the time you were laughing at me!"

"I was not laughing," assured Wilmer as he took her hand. "It was the bravest thing a woman ever did for the man she loved. You are not angry at me, are you, Nancy?"

Nancy looked into the earnest, pleading eyes.

"Did I act as though I were?" she demanded. "You play the rest of your little play and then we'll have a chat with father. I'll be present to see that he gets things right this time, but you mustn't make a motion picture of it," she added playfully.

"I should say not," assented Wilmer. "We'll let Cupid manage the stage this time. I'll just play my part."

Labor Saving Style.

Mr. Perkins did not often comment on his wife's dress or make suggestions, but one day he looked at her so long and thoughtfully that she inquired if there was anything he did not like about her new gown.

"No, my dear," said Mr. Perkins hastily, "certainly not. I was only thinking. That waist of yours seems to be so elaborate, with the lace and all. Why not have a simpler mode of dress?"

"Why not, indeed?" said Mrs. Perkins sweetly. "I suppose you've seen one that just pleased you. What was it like?"

"It was white," said her husband, "all white and perfectly plain, my dear; not a particle of lace or ruffling or what I think I have heard you call tucks, nothing of the sort. All there was, my dear, was a simple little braid in flower patterns of some sort. It covered the entire waist.

"I sat beside the lady for half an hour in the car, and I can assure you it was quite neat and attractive. Simmons, whom I spoke of it on the way up from the train. He said he should mention it to his wife."

"You poor ignorant creatures!" said Mrs. Perkins tenderly. "The days and days it must have taken to make that 'neat, simple, plain, little waist!'"—Youth's Companion.

The Short Cut.

By MARTHA COBB SANFORD.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

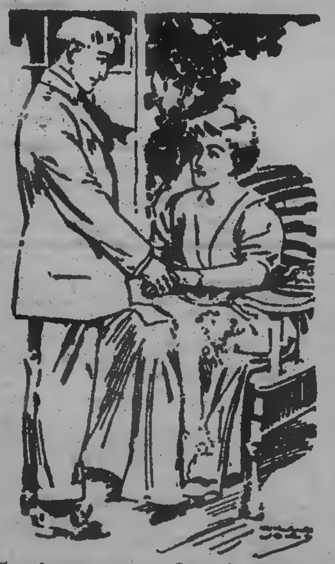
When Marjorie opened her sewing room window to let in the brisk morning breeze the picture she made in her white dress, framed by the climbing vines, was refreshing enough to make any passer by look up a second time. One did, though Marjorie was quite unaware of the fact.

Her thoughts were as far away as the shadowy mountains beyond which she had lived her old and happier life. For several years now Marjorie's world had been on this side of the hills, so she sighed, sat down by the open window and began sewing interminable yards of lace on strips of fine muslin. The stitches were microscopic, as befitted the trousseau of a "daughter of the rich."

Half an hour later a whistle as spontaneous as a bird's trill made her jump up and again look out of the window.

In the young man swinging down the road Marjorie recognized one of the summer guests. He opened the gate and came down the path toward her window.

In her haste to escape being caught in the very act of provincial curiosity Marjorie dropped her thimble. It struck a stone on the edge of the walk and, with a metallic ring, bounded off into the garden. The young man rescued it most gallantly.



"DON'T YOU LOVE ME? DON'T YOU WANT TO BE MY WIFE?"

"It isn't every day a young man finds thimbles growing in a garden," he said, significantly dropping the silver trifle into her hand.

Now, Marjorie understood perfectly well his reference to Peter Pan's calling kisses thimbles, but she feigned ignorance. Diverting as such audacity might be, she must not encourage it, wherefore she said "Thank you" with austere courtesy.

"You are Miss Marjorie Phillips, are you not?" asked the unperturbed young man. "I started out very early this morning to find you."

Marjorie glanced at the thimble, which unconsciously she had slipped on its proper finger.

"There's no denying the evidence," she said, with a pensive little smile which crept straight into the young man's heart.

"I have a message for you, Miss Phillips, from my cousin, or, rather," he corrected, smiling up at her, "a request to make. Julia—Miss Robbins—has a friend visiting her and wants to know at what time she may bring her down this afternoon to see the things you are making. There; I think I got that right. Does it sound rational?"

"Quite intelligent," laughed Marjorie. "Please tell Miss Bobbins that the exhibit will be ready any time after 2, which means"—

"Oh, I know," broke in the loquacious message bearer. "It means that I mustn't bother you any longer." Then he added mischievously: "I came by here an hour ago on my way to the postoffice, but was too scared to come in. It was lucky you dropped the thimble just when you"—

But at the word "thimble" Marjorie took flight.

"Well," called Julia Robbins as Overton reached the steps of the luxuriously appointed porch, "did you deliver my message to the village sewing girl?"

"Yes," he answered at length. "I gave your message to Miss Phillips, and she says you and Miss Morton may come any time after 2."

"Upon my word!" exclaimed the astonished Julia. "'We may come,' and 'Miss Phillips,' indeed!"

"Look here, Julia Robbins," returned Overton feelingly, "I think it's an outrage for a little flower of a girl like that to be sewing her eyes out for another girl who happens to have money and can"—

"Stop right there," commanded Julia. "Catherine here will think you're a hot headed Socialist. Would you have me sewing my own eyes out perchance, dear cousin?"

"Well, perhaps I am a bit hasty, Julia," admitted Overton good naturedly. "Forgive me and tell me what you know about this little Miss Phillips."

"Nothing romantic, Garret, I assure you. Her family used to come here summers, I believe. And after her father died a bankrupt the girl took in sewing for the summer folks. Does that fire your young imagination?"

"Why, I suppose so," answered Julia languidly.

Whereupon, with a careless "Well, goodby; I'm off for a day's fishing," Overton sauntered away with little comprehension of the feminine consternation he was leaving behind him.

Julia was the first to recover.

"Don't you care, Catherine," she said defiantly. "We'll nip that little romance in the bud."

Several days later, upon catching sight of Marjorie at the window, Overton swung open the little cottage gate and called out cheerily, "Lost any more thimbles, Miss Phillips?"

Marjorie, her color mounting high, pretended not to hear and continued sewing with nervous haste.

"You have another message from Miss Robbins?" she asked politely.

"Not on your life!" was the unexpected reply. "I came on my own account this time, Miss Phillips. I want to ask you some questions."

"I'm very busy, Mr. Overton."

Garret noted the knowledge of his name. He remembered that he had not mentioned it at their first interview. So she had been making inquiries about him! She was more interested than she appeared.

"Do all girls think these frippery things a—a necessary matrimonial asset?" he asked, indicating with a nod the piles of snowy thin stuff on the chairs about her.

"Your cousin and Miss Morton are not exceptions, I think."

As she mentioned the girl's name Marjorie watched Overton's face closely, but there was no betrayal of any personal interest.

"Do you make a specialty of trousseaux?" was his next question.

"It looks as though I should have to," Marjorie answered. "As soon as I have finished your cousin's there will be one to make for Miss Morton, I understand."

"Really!" was Overton's surprised exclamation. "Who's the man, may I ask? You have evidently been taken into confidence."

"Well, by Jupiter!" exclaimed Overton as the truth of the situation dawned upon him. "So that's the game!"

Every morning thereafter, rain or shine, Overton bade Marjorie "Good morrow" at her window, for he had discovered that through her garden lay a short cut to the village postoffice. Marjorie, on her part, failed to hang out a "No Trespassing" sign, though common sense told her that she ought to do so.

But one sunny morning Overton, impatient, threw discretion and conventions to the wind.

"Little Miss Marjorie," he said pleadingly, "do you suppose I could persuade you to make a trousseau for—for my wife to be?"

The color flashed rebelliously into Marjorie's cheeks, and tears gathered in her eyes. One daring little drop slipped over her lashes and fell upon Garret's hand.

"Why, what is this, dearest? You're not crying? Don't you love me? Don't you want to be my wife? I thought"—

For answer the tired girl dropped her head on his hands, which still held hers, and sobbed softly.

But Overton understood.

"Marjorie," he said lovingly, "look up at me, little one."

"I'm glad of it," Garret replied, with a laugh. "Do you think if I should come back tonight, sweetheart, that we could find any—thimbles—in the garden?"

"It will be pretty dark," she answered softly, "but—I'll help you."

Origin of the Cravat.

While every man wears a cravat, there is probably not one in a thousand who could in an offhand way tell you how it came about that men first placed such an ornament about their collars. The word cravat came into our language about 1636. Prior to that year a feature of the uniform of the Austrian cavalry was a wide band of coarse linen worn in folds around the neck under their short hussar jackets. This cavalry organization was called the Cravatte, its members being styled the Cravattes. Later in the seventeenth century France recruited a regiment of cavalry, adopting for it the uniform of the Austrian regiment recruited in Croatia, calling it the Royal Cravattes. Later in England the word cravat was applied to a neckerchief. After the battle of Steenkerke, in Flanders, in 1692, an English officer brought home the steamkirk, a long flowing neckscarf. The neckwear today is clearly traceable to the steamkirk and the modification it underwent.—Sartorial Art Journal.

FIRST CHEAP WATCH

The Story of the Famous Old Long Winding Waterbury.

SCHEME OF AN OLD COBBLER

How the Connecticut Shoemaker's Idea Was Taken Up and Worked Out—A Timepiece That Came to Be Known All Over the World.

In a small country town in Connecticut lived a cobbler. He was a poor man and a peculiar one. The boys called him a "gene," and some thought him crazy. But he kept on in the even tenor of his way, living his own life and thinking his own thoughts. One of these thoughts was that he could make a watch that would have only three wheels.

A watchmaker out of a job heard of the cobbler and called at his little shop. This was the beginning of the famous Waterbury watch, which was the first cheap watch to be manufactured. It is now a thing of the past. But its cheap price and its remarkably long "wind" (it was a stem winder) were known around the world.

The Waterbury was named for the town where it was made. It had more than the three wheels that the cobbler had planned, but the little old shoemaker's idea was the original germ from which was evolved the successful cheap watch.

Having got the idea, the purchaser of the cobbler's rights found that the first difficulty in his path was lack of money. He looked about for a man with money enough, nerve enough and imagination enough to lead him to render the financial aid without which no first step could be taken. He was found, because it was a Yankee with an indomitable will that was looking for him.

"How much money will it take and how long a time do you want before you can begin to make your watches in sufficient quantities to make the thing a success," he inquired.

"I will be frank with you," replied the inventor. "It will require $25,000, and I shall need eight months for preparation."

"Go ahead," said the daring capitalist.

He went ahead. He met unexpected difficulties and had spent $250,000 and used up twenty-eight months before he turned out a single watch. But the capitalist never faltered. Then the factory, for which every piece of machinery had to be invented and specially made, turned out its first thousand watches.

Not one of them would go! Among other things, it was found that the sheets of brass out of which were stamped the wheels of the watch had a grain somewhat like wood. The wheels cut out round would not stay round.

This difficulty being remedied, a second thousand watches were made. A large number of these went, but the percentage of "stoppers" (watches that refused to go) was still too large.

New study, new experiments, however, finally perfected the cheap little timekeepers to the point of perfection that only about 10 per cent were stoppers. The good watches were tested in six positions—lying on the face, on the back and in four positions on the edge. The maker of each part stamped his mark on the part he made, so that if fault was found in that part he must make it right.

Then came the question of selling the watches, and over $900,000 was spent in the years of its vogue in advertising the Waterbury watch. Some of the methods used were interesting.

A negro minstrel troupe were paid to open their show by saying, "We have come from Waterbury, the land of eternal spring," referring to the long time required to wind the Waterbury watch.

One day the owner of one of these timepieces was winding it on the train. Across the aisle a traveler noted that his neighbor was winding his watch. It caused no thought until a second look and then a third showed the winding still under way. Then the astonished man spoke. "Excuse me, sir, but are you winding a watch?"

"Yes," said the winding owner, "and I'm tired of it. You wind awhile, will you?" This led to explanations and resulted in the ordering by the stranger, who had never before seen a Waterbury, of 50,000 watches for the use of his business house in its China trade.

The great business went on, and large sums of money were made in it. All over the world people were buying these watches, so cheap were they. All over the world people laughed at the "long wind." The old backer of the enterprise had died, and one of his successors felt indignant because his son in traveling in some remote part of Hungary was asked if the Waterbury he came from was the place where the watch with a long wind was made.

"And," said the man, "I don't want the product of my factory laughed about all over the earth." But his ambition led him to try to make a good watch. The new field he soon found was by this time occupied by most successful competitors, and after getting into hopeless indebtedness the old Waterbury Watch company died in the house of those who should have been its friends.—John F. Simmons in New York Tribune.

Mrs. A. Graham, of 547 Water st., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"My back was so weak and tender that I could not turn in bed. A heavy, dull pain had settled across the small of it, and caused me almost constant suffering. I became weak and languid. I was run down generally and had little ambition to move around. Headaches were frequent and often accompanied by spells of dizziness. Spots would dazzle before my eye and I would be unable to see. I had tried numerous remedies without getting results. Booth's Kidney Pills were advertised at McDiarmid & Jury's pharmacy. I tried them and soon found relief. The kidneys were quickly regulated and each and every symptom of kidney trouble was quickly cured. I am glad to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills as I believe them to be the best and most reliable of all kidney remedies."

THE MYSTERY

By STEWART EDWARD WHITE
And SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

"That night he turned over to me the key of the large chest and his ledger. The latter he bade me read. It was a complete jumble. You have seen it. We were up a good part of the night with our pet volcano. It was suffering from internal disturbances. 'So,' the doctor would say indulgently, when a particularly active rock came bounding down our way. 'Little play-antics-to-exhibit now that the work iis finished.'

"In the morning he insisted on my leaving him alone and going down to give the orders. I took the ledger, intending to send it aboard. It saved my life possibly. Solomon's bullet deflected slightly, I think, in passing through the heavy paper. Slade has told you about my flight. I ought to have gone straight up the arroyo, yet I could hardly have made it. I did not see him again—the doctor. My last glimpse—the old man—I remember now how the gray had spread through his beard—he was growing old—it had been aging labor. He stood there at his laboratory door, and the mountain spouted and thundered behind.

"'We will a name to suit properly gif it,' he said as I left him. 'It shall make us as the gods. We will call it celestium.'

"I left him there smiling—smiling happily. The greatest force of his age—if he had lived. Very wise, very simple—a kind old child. May I trouble you for a light? Thanks.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"NOTHING remained but to search for his body. I was sure they had killed him and taken the chest. I had little expectation of finding him, dead or alive. None after I saw the stream of lava pouring into the sea. One saves his own life by instinct, I suppose. There I was. I had to live. It did not matter much, but I continued to do it by various shifts. That last day on the headland the fumes nearly got me. You may have noted the rather excited scrawl in the back of the ledger? Yes, I thought I was gone that time, but I got to the cave. It was low tide. Then the earthquake, and I was walled in. Mr. Barnett's very accurate explosives—Slade's insistence—your risking your lives as you did, mites on the crust of a redhot cheese—I hope you know how I feel about it all. One can't thank a man properly for the life—

"Oh, the pirates! Necessarily it must be a matter of theory, but I think we have it right. Slade and I built it up. For what it's worth here it is. Let me see, you sighted the glow on the night of the 2d. Next day came the deserted ship. It must have puzzled you outrageously."

"It did," said Captain Parkinson dryly.

"Not an easy problem even with all the data at hand. You, of course, had none. On Slade's showing, Handy Solomon and his worthy associates thought they had a chest full of riches when they got the doctor's treasure — believed they owned the machinery for making diamonds or gold or what not of ready to hand wealth. It's fair to assume a certain eagerness on their part. Disturbed weather keeps them busy until they're well out from the island. Then to the chest. Opening it isn't so easy. I had the key, you know." He brought a curious and delicately wrought skeleton from his pocket. "Tipped with platinum," he observed. "Rather a gem of a key, I think. You see, there must have been some action even through the keyhole or he wouldn't have used a metal of this kind. But the crew was rich in certain qualities, it seems, which I failed stupidly to recognize in my acquaintance with them. Both Puls and Perdosa appear to have been handy men where locks were concerned. First Puls sneaks down and has his turn at the chest. He gets it open. Small profit for him in that. The next we know of him he is scandalizing Handy Solomon by having a fit on the deck."

"If you recollect, I told you of the professor's plunge in the cold spring in a sort of paroxysm one day," said Darrow. "That was the physiological action of the celestium. At other times I have seen him come out and deliberately roll in the creek, head under. Once he explained that the medium he worked in caused a kind of uncontrollable longing for water, something having none of the qualities of burning or thirst, but an irresistible temporary mania. It worried him a good deal. He didn't understand it. That, then, was what ailed Puls. When he opened the chest there was, as I surmise, a trifling quantity of this stuff lying in the inner lid. It wasn't the celestium itself, as I imagine, but a sort of byproduct with the physiological and radiant effects of the real thing, and it had been set there on guard, a discouragement to the spirit of investigation, as it were. So when the top was lifted our little guardian gets in its work, producing the light phenomenon that so puzzled Slade and inspiring Puls with a passion for the rolling wave, which is only interrupted by Handy Solomon's tackling him. As he fled he must have pulled down the cover."

"He did," said Slade. "I heard the clang. But I saw the radiance on the clouds, and the whole thickness of a solid oak deck was in between the sky and the chest."

"Oh, a little thing like an oak deck wouldn't interrupt the kind of rays the doctor used. He had his own method of screening, you understand. However, this inconsiderable guardian affair must have used itself up, which true celestium wouldn't have done. So when Perdosa sets his genius for lock picking to the task the inner box, full of the genuine article, has no warning signpost, so to speak. Everything's peaceful until they raise the compound filled hollow layer of the inner cover, which serves to interrupt the action. Then comes the general exit and the superior fireworks."

"That's when the rays ran through the ship," said Slade. "It seemed to follow the deck lines."

"The stuff had a strange affinity for tar," said Darrow. "I told you of the circle of fire about Professor Schermerhorn's waist the day he gave me such a scare. That was the celestium working on the tarred rope he wore for a belt. It made a livid circle on his skin. Did I tell you of his experiments with pitch? It doesn't matter. Where was I?"

"At the place where we all jumped," said Slade.

"Oh, yes. And you dove into the small boat, trying to reach the water."

"Wait a bit," said Barnett. "If that was the exhibition of radiance we saw, it died out in a few minutes. How was that? Did they close the chest before they ran?"

"Probably not," replied Darrow. "Slade spoke of Puls taking to the maintop and being shaken out by the sudden shock of a wave. That may have been a volcanic billow. Whatever it was, it undoubtedly heeled the ship sufficiently to bring down both lids, which were rather delicately balanced."

"Yes, for Billy Edwards found the chest closed and locked," said Barnett.

"Of course. It was a spring lock. You sent Mr. Edwards and his men aboard. No such experts as Puls or Perdosa were in your crew. Consequently it took longer to get the chest open. When at length the lid was raised there was a repetition of the tragedy. Mr. Edwards and his men leaped. Probably they were paralyzed almost before they struck the water. Your bo's'n, whom Slade picked up, was the only one who had time even to grab a life preserver before the impulse toward water became irresistible. There was no element of fright, you understand—no desertion of their post. They were dragged as by the sweep of a tornado." Darrow spoke direct to Captain Parkinson. "If there is any feeling among you other than sorrow for their death, it is unjust and unworthy."

"Thank you, Mr. Darrow," returned the captain quietly.

"We found the chest closed again when the empty ship came back," observed Barnett.

"Being masterless, the schooner began to yaw," continued Darrow. "The first time she came about would have heeled her enough to shut the chest. Now came the turn of your other men."

"Ives and McGuire," said the captain as Darrow paused.

"The glow came again that night, and the next day we picked up Slade," said Barnett.

"You know what the glow meant for your companions," said Darrow.

"You are wrong there," said Darrow. "I have seen her."

In a common impulse the little circle leaned to him.

"Yes, I have seen her. I wish I had not. Let me bring my story back to the cave on the island. After the volcanic gases had driven me to the refuge I sat near the mouth of the cave, looking out into the darkness. That was the night of the 7th, the night you saw the last glow. It was very dark, except for occasional bursts of fire from the crater. Judge of my incredulous amazement when in an access of this illumination I saw plainly a schooner hardly a mile offshore, coming in under bare poles."

"Under bare poles?" cried Slade.

"The halliards must have disintegrated from some slow action of the celestium. It could be destructive, terrifically destructive. You shall judge. There was the schooner, naked as your hand. Possibly I might have thought it a hallucination but for what came after. Darkness fell again. I supposed then that Handy Solomon's crew were managing—or mismanaging—the Laughing Lass without the aid of their leader, whom I had satisfactorily buried. I hoped they would come ashore on the rocks. Yes, I was vengeful then.

"Of a sudden there sprang from the darkness a ship of light. You have all seen those great electric effects at expositions. Some one touches a button, you know. It was like that, only that the piercingly brilliant jeweled wonder of a ship was set in the midst of a swirl of varicolored radiance such as I can't begin to describe. You saw it from a distance. Imagine what it was, coming close upon you that way, dead on, out of the night—a living glory, a living terror."

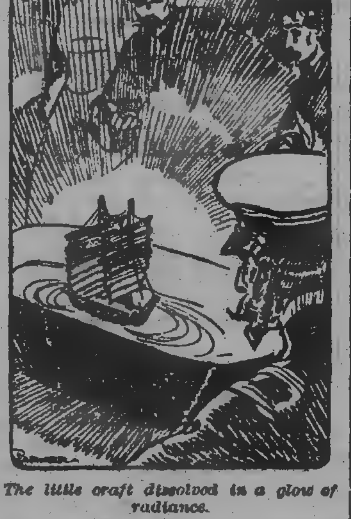
"It came on. A human figure, glowing like a diamond ablaze, leaped out from it; another shot down from the foremast. I don't know how many I saw go. It was like a theatric effect, unreal, unconvincing, incredible. The end fitted it."



The little craft dissolved in a glow of radiance.

Darrow's eye roved. It fell upon a quaintly modeled ship hung above the door.

"What's that?" he cried.

"Fool thing some Malay gave me," grunted Trendon. "Pretended to be grateful because I cut his foot off. No good. Go on with the story."

"No good? You don't care what happens to it?"

"Meant to heave it overboard before now," growled the other.

Some one handed it down to Darrow.

"If I had something to hold enough water," muttered he, "I'd like to float it. I'd like to see for myself how it worked out. I'd like to see that devil work in action."

He spoke feverishly.

"Boy, fill the portable rubber tub in Mr. Forsythe's cabin and bring it here," ordered the captain.

"That will do," said Darrow, recovering himself.

He floated the model in the tub.

"Now, I don't know how this will come out," he said. "Nor do I know why the Laughing Lass met her fate under Ives and McGuire and not before. Perhaps the chest lay open longer—long enough, anyway. We'll try it."

"Is that what Dr. Schermerhorn gave you?" asked Slade.

"Yes," said Darrow. He set it carefully inside the little model and slipped a lever. Slade quietly turned down the light.

A faint glow shot up. It grew bright and eddied in lovely variant colors. As if set to a powder train, it ran through the ship. The pale faces of the spectators shone ghastly in its radiance. From some one burst a sudden gasp.

"There is not enough for danger," said Darrow quietly.

"As a point of interest," grunted Trendon.

"My God!" cried Slade and covered his eyes for a moment.

He snatched away his hands as a suppressed cry went up from the others.

"As I expected," said Darrow quietly. The little craft opened out. It disintegrated. All that radiance dissolved, and with its going the substance upon which it shaped itself vanished. The last glow showed a formless pulp, spreading upon the water.

"So passed the Laughing Lass," said Darrow solemnly.

"And the chest is at the bottom of the sea," said Barnett.

"Good place for it," muttered Trendon.

"In all probability it closed as the ship dissolved around it," said Darrow. "Otherwise we should see the effects in the water."

"It might be recovered," cried Slade excitedly. "Could you chart it, Darrow? Think of the possibilities"—

"Let it lie," said the captain. "Has it not cost enough? Let it lie."

The water in the tub fumed and sparkled faintly and was still. Darkness fell except where Darrow's cigarette point glowed and faded.

THE END.

The Ordeal by Fire.

The really strong scene of the play had arrived and the amateur hero braced himself for the effort. The house into which the wily villain had entrapped him was on fire, and his thrilling escape from the burning structure was where he was going to bring down the house.

"I am choking!" he cried. "The smoke is overpowering me!"

That would have been all right except for the fact that there was no smoke, and it seems unreal to choke with smoke when there isn't any smoke to choke with.

"The flames!" he cried. "The flames—I feel them!"

But the flames were absent also. He glanced into the wings and realized what had happened. Some one had damped the red fire.

It was a moment of terrible strain. Nothing relieved the situation, and he lost his head and rambled on about the fire that no one could see. It was awful, and it was worse when a big brute in the gallery bellowed forth:

"Never mind the fire, guv'nor! Get on with your job!"

And then the actor laughed a wild, maniacal laugh, and the kindly curtain came down.—London Tit-Bits.

Free Mustard.

James Russell Lowell said, "All deacons are good, but there are odds in deacons," and it may be added that there are odds in other varieties of men.

Squire Blank was not only the richest man in his village, but the stingiest as well. Nothing gave him such keen delight as to get something for nothing. One day he and several of his neighbors had been in conference with a manufacturer who contemplated establishing a mill in the town. The conference was held in the one store of the village, and at its close the manufacturer stepped up to a showcase containing cigars and said:

"Have a cigar, gentlemen."

All the men selected a cigar except Squire Blank. He did not smoke. Therefore he said:

"Thank you, sir, but I don't smoke. But as the cigars are a dime apiece I'll take a dime's worth o' mustard if you say so."

Of course the astonished gentleman "said so," and the squire went home jubilant over "a hull half pound o' mustard that never cost me a red cent."

The Magic Paper.

This curious incident of travel in Africa is told by A. Henry Savage Landor: "I wished to buy a bag of grain, but the woman who owned it would on no account accept silver money for it nor any article which she saw in my camp. My Somali servant had a bright idea—the only one he had during the entire journey across Africa. He went to one of the boxes of provisions and tore off a highly colored label from a corned beef tin. Having licked it copiously, he stuck it in the middle of his forehead. Inquisitive, like a woman, the Carayu asked him what he did it for. The Somali said he had been seized with a violent headache and the colored paper was a certain cure. The Carayu at once offered the grain if the Somali would part with the magic paper. Her wish was satisfied without delay, and the woman departed happy."

ROBERT FULTON AS A LAD.

There are several anecdotes which relate to Robert Fulton's early interest in mechanics—the first steps of progress toward his later skill. In 1773, when he was eight years old, his mother, having previously taught him to read and write, sent him to a school kept by Mr. Caleb Johnson, a Quaker gentleman of pronounced Tory principles—so pronounced, in fact, that he narrowly escaped with his life during the Revolution. But Robert Fulton did not care for books, and he began at a very early age to search for problems never mastered and bound in print. This greatly distressed the Quaker teacher, who spared not the rod, and it is said that in administering such discipline on the hand of Robert Fulton he one day testily exclaimed, "There, that will make you do something!" to which Robert, with folded arms, replied, "Sir, I came to have something beaten into my brains and not into my knuckles." Without doubt he was a trial to his teacher.

He entered school one day very late, and when the master inquired the reason Robert, with frank interest, replied that he had been at Nicholas Miller's shop pounding out lead for a pencil. "It is the very best I ever had, sir," he affirmed as he displayed his product. The master, after an examination of the pencil, pronounced it excellent. When Robert's mother, who had been distressed by his lack of application to his studies, expressed to his teacher her pleasure at signs of improvement the latter confided to her that Robert had said to him, "My head is so full of original notions that there is no vacant chamber to stow away the contents of dusty books."

These incidents to the contrary, it is nevertheless true that Robert Fulton did absorb a good knowledge of the rudiments of education.—Century Magazine.

THE TRAPPED THIEF.

A Midnight Adventure With South American Desperadoes.

In describing certain experiences among the outlaws and desperadoes of South America an English traveler tells the following grisly story:

"One night a farmer was roused from sleep by hearing unusual and stealthy noises about the place. He got quietly out of bed and, after listening attentively, discovered that some people outside were cutting a hole through the door close to the bolt by which it was held.

"It did not require any great amount of detective talent to guess the object of the operation, and the best way to foil it was suggested by a thong of rawhide with a loop on it which hung from a hook on the inside of the door. Noiselessly removing the thong, he slipped the end of it through the loop, and there he stood armed with an impromptu lasso, ready for action.

"It was an anxious time while the farmer stood watching the hole in the door grow larger and larger until at last it was of sufficient size to effect the purpose for which it was made.

"The supreme moment arrived, and a hand was stealthily inserted not only through the hole, but also through the loop of the little lasso which hung skillfully around it. With a sudden jerk the loop was tightened around the wrist and the hand dragged in as far as the aperture would allow, while the thong was securely fastened to the hook on the back of the door.

"The robber was perfectly helpless. His companions came to his aid and, having ineffectually dragged at the imprisoned arm till they were tired, gave up the struggle and prepared to depart.

"But they were prudent men, and it occurred to them to save himself their companion might betray them. Dead men, they thought, tell no tales, so they killed him."—New York Mail.

A Maharajah's Revenge.

A maharanee of Nepaul committed suicide in horror at the disfigurement which an attack of smallpox had caused in her features. The maharajah, who was passionately attached to her, first wreaked his vengeance on the physicians who had attended her in her illness. Then he flew at higher game. Out of the great temple he brought the idols, placed loaded cannon before them and bade gunners fire. In terror at the proposed blasphemy, they refused. Thereupon the maharajah hanged several of them. The survivors then submitted, and the guns were fired and the idols blown to pieces.—Leipsic Missionsblatt.

The Coveted Hand.

The young man had gone to the heiress' father—always a ticklish job—but he took his courage with an iron grip.

"Sir," he blurted out, "I want to ask you for your daughter's hand."

The old man, not in the least disconcerted, said:

"Which hand? The one she signs checks with, I suppose?"

Hit Him Hard.

"I presume," said the lodger icily at the conclusion of the little dispute with his landlady—"I presume that you will allow me to take my belongings away with me?"

Shot Big Bear

While hunting in the vicinity of Black Creek one day last week, Mr. Alf. Holland, of Huntingdon, was successful in shooting a monster black bear, one of the largest seen here in a long time. When the pelt was taken from the carcass it measured seven feet from tip to tip and was four feet wide. Mr. Holland has been offered several tempting offers for the pelt.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario, are located the [illegible] saline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where tratments for nervous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

SPORTING NEWS

TREMBLAY HAD IT ALL OVER MUCH-TOUTED CYCLONE MACK

Tremblay, according to local expectations, came out on top in his match at Sohmer Park last night, defeating "Cyclone Mack," the Irish wrestler, two straight falls. The first was won by Tremblay in 38 1-2 minutes and the second in 17 minutes.

The match was fairly interesting after the first twenty minutes. In the first twenty there was nothing to the wrestling, and the crowd were inclined to consider the Irishman a false alarm. Starting with the third ten minute bout in the match, however, the wrestling was as keen as most lightweight matches at the park produce and and the pace was fast to the finish. Tremblay was always the better man, in the early stages by the reserve force that he showed, and towards the finish by brilliant, dashing attack, that left the Irishman almost helpless.

"Cyclone Mack" stepped on the mat last night at least four pounds heavier than Tremblay. He had the advantage of about six inches in height and really qualified for welterweight class under wrestling rules in vogue on this side of the Atlantic. The Canadian Athletic Club is considering a proposition to send the little Frenchman over to England next winter, and as most of the men he will meet there will weigh in at 140, the club was anxious to see how he would make out. Tremblay performed up to expectations, and if "Cyclone Mack" and Sommerville, who met him early in the season, represent the best class of lightweights on the other side, the little Frenchman should have a successful tour of it.

Meanwhile Tremblay is getting into shape for a finish match with Bothner, in New York, for what is said to be the largest purse ever offered in America for a lightweight match. So far Tremblay has refused to wrestle Bothner outside of Montreal.

The opening twenty minutes of the match last night proved dull wrestling, Tremblay kept on the defensive, and let Mack do all the leading. Mack at this stage of the match did not show much and never succeeded into getting Tremblay into serious trouble. After ten minutes rest following the second ten minute bout the match became interesting. Tremblay put more speed into his work and Mack was pretty constantly on the defensive to the finish. The final minutes of the bout were marked by smart wrestling, the Irishman, with his long arms and long legs, proving elusive to the little Frenchman when the finish of the bout seemed well in sight. Mack was finally down in a series of rolls, when Tremblay countered cleverly with a leg scissors and a half nelson, bringing his man to a standstill and then shifting his hold to a straight body scissors, which, with an arm hold, gave him the fall in 38 1-2 minutes.

Preceding the second fall there was none of the sparring that marked the opening of the first bout. The wrestlers got down to business at once, and after ten minutes had passed Tremblay began to show this true form and the Irishman was thrown entirely on the defensive. In the last five minutes he was picked up and slammed around in Tremblay's best style and never had a chance to win. A straight crotch hold finally gave the Frenchman the concluding fall, but most of the gathering of 2,500 fans were on their feet and ready to leave a couple of minutes before the actual finish came.

THE RUGBY CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Peterborough rugby club will be held next Monday night at the Y.M.C.A. parlors. The main matters will come up for discussion and action upon will be that of next year's team and a city league and the election of officers. The annual reports will also be presented.

The club has considered it best to get to work early and have everything in readiness when the season opens again.

HORSEMEN WANT THEIR MONEY FROM THE FAIR ASSOCIATION

Dr. Cowan, of Lindsay; Gerald Dunsford, of Toronto, and Dr. Leach, of Peterborough, the first and last mentioned the owners respectively of Harry K. and Holland B., and the other the manager of Hazel Belle, are apparently determined to get the money which they claim is due them as winnings at the races held at the Peterborough Fair last fall, and which was paid to Hodgins, of Orillia, the owner of Walter G., the horse that was complained of as being "crooked," and its owner neglected to prove its identity. Fines were placed against the owner driver and horse.

The Fair Association paid over the money to the owner of Walter G., which those mentioned above now claim as their's on account of the protest being lodged against the horse at the time the money was paid. Mr. Dunsford is in the city to-day looking after his share.

For Hazel Belle $50.
For Harry K. $30.
For Holland Boy $20.

ALFRED SHRUBB WILL APPEAR AT AUDITORIUM ROLLER RINK

Prof. Gemno, manager of the Auditorium roller rink, has booked Alfred Shrubb, the famous English distance runner, to run at the rink on December 1st, 2nd and 3rd. The man who is out after Longboat's scalp and who holds every world's record from one mile up to ten, would like to meet relays of local runners from one mile up. Any desiring to take part in the competition may leave their names with the sporting editor of the Review. Shrubb will also compete against roller skaters in handicap events.

Prof. Gemno has been negotiating for a long time to secure Shrubb's local appearance and has only been successful in getting his contract to do so by holding out substantial inducements, as the Englishman is in great demand.

There are a very large number of the general public in this city who would like to see Shrubb run and no doubt large audiences will attend to see his exhibition.

The Chieftains, at a largely attended meeting at Dr. Wighman's office on Saturday night, organized for the season, and decided to place a seven in the junior O.H.A. For the age and size of the players the Chieftains have undoubtedly the fastest team that ever played on local ice, and considering their quality of play last season, should be able to put up a whirlwind game this year. The members of the team are very clever as individual players, and the team employs a fast and effective style of combination.

The officers chosen at Saturday's meeting were;—

Patrons and Patronesses—Hon. J. R. and Mrs. Stratton, Mr. T E. Bradburn, M.P.P.; Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wasson.

Hon. President—Dr. Wightman.

President—Mr. F. A. Clarke.

Vice-President—Mr. R. Denne.

2nd Vice-President — Mr. N. E. McWilliams.

Manager—Mr. J. Thirnbeck.

Capt.—Ken. Crane.

Rep. to O.H.A.—Dr. MacPherson.

YOUNG HACKENSCHMIDT'S NEXT BOUT MAY BE WITH MAUPAS

Young Hackenschmidt, who is staying at the Oriental, received a letter to-day, in which a match was spoken of between him and Emile Maupas, the Graeco-Roman heavyweight champion of Canada. Manchester, N.H., was spoken of as the place where the match would be pulled off and Graeco-Roman to be the style of wrestling. Maupas is a clever wrestler, and at his own style is a hard man to beat.

Hack, however, is in good condition and although catch as catch can is his game, he is willing to take chances with Maupas at Graeco-Roman. Hackenschmidt always takes perfect care of himself, and is always ready to battle at the shortest notice. He has been working out regularly here since his bout with Rogers. He expects he may receive word to go to Manchester for his match with Maupas in the course of a few days. Maupas wrestles in the neighborhood of 185 to 190 pounds.

A GAME FOR LINDSAY

The finals in the junior series of the O.R.F.U. are being arranged. Capitals and Eurekas, who are tied for first place in the Toronto district, play off to-day at St. Michael's College, the winner to meet Lindsay the following Saturday. The winner of this game will play off with either Kingston or Brockville. — Lindsay Free Press.

TO FORM TEN PIN LEAGUE

Proposal to Organize One Consisting of Three Men Teams—Meeting To-night

The proposition to form a league consisting of three men teams has found general approval among the bowling fraternity and the formal organization will be completed tonight when a meeting will be held at the Peterborough Bowling Club alleys at which a full attendance of those interested is asked for. Mr. R. M. Glover will be in the chair and at least ten teams will make formal application for admission, as follows:—General Electrics, Belmonts, Lock Works, Munroe's Colts, Bankers, Examiner, and teams captained by Herb Martin, Wm. Lang, Clair Gutterson, B. A. Lillie and W. McIlroy.

A double schedule will be arranged and the prospects are that the first games will be played on Wednesday night.

Wallis, Brooks, H Lees, 4ft 2.

RUGBY

The championship of the junior O. R.F.U. it seems, will be settled in the neighborhood of Christmas this year.

The Toronto group have a couple of games to play yet before the championship is decided, and down east Kingston, Brockville and Gananoque are still at it for the district championship.

Meanwhile Lindsay has won the district and is waiting for the championships of the other districts to be decided.

THE RING

New York, Nov. 14.— Jem Driscoll, the English featherweight champion, made his American debut last night at the Fairmount Athletic Club, when he outpointed Matty Baldwin, of Boston, in a six-round bout. Driscoll showed himself to be a shifty two-handed boxer, and held the upper hand throughout the bout. His style is much on the order of Palmer and Plimmer when those two fighters were in their prime, but he lacked their cleverness, although he may appear to better advantage when he becomes accustomed to the surroundings. He was somewhat nervous during the early part of the first round, but when once settled down he showed himself to be a clever boxer and master of many of the tricks of the ring.

SPORTING TALK

The football championship having been settled, the sporting writers of the Ottawa and Hamilton papers can crawl into their holes again.

O.H.A. hockey does not seem to be as lively in Lindsay just now, as usual at this time of the year. Perhaps it was the Midland "touch" last year, that knocked the enthusiasm out of the locals for the Association.—Lindsay Warder.

Varsity and Queens are tied for the Interprovincial championship. As it is too late in the season to settle the championships by home and home games it will have to played off on neutral grounds.

Why should not Peterborough be the place chosen? As an intermediate point this city is quite convenient to both teams. The gridiron here is good and the grandstand commodious and there seems no reason why Peterborough shouldn't be a most acceptable place to both teams.

Young Hackenschmidt Willing to do This in Preliminary Bout

The date of the wrestling match between Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick has been definitely decided upon on Tuesday night, November 24th. It will be held at the Auditorium roller rink.

What the preliminaries will be has not been decided but the management will endeavor to get as interesting bouts as possible for these.

Barring Gene Hurtubise, Young Hackenschmidt, is willing to try to throw any ten men in town in 20 minutes. If enough local grapplers to go up against him could be secured this should make a very interesting handicap.

EXCITEMENT RULES IN CHINA PEOPLE JUST WAKING UP

Financial Panic Causes Failures.

Military Held in Readiness for Outbreak---Many Reforms Expected.

Pekin, Nov. 17.—China is beginning to realize that the Emperor and the Dowager Empress are dead.

The Chinese had been so accustomed to look upon the dowager as the one person dominating all, that the announcement of her death caused, but little change in their unemotional natures and easy going ways during the early hours of the ceremonies attending her passing, but to-day there has come a marked change.

Prince Chun, the regent of the empire, in fear of the increasing excitement and revolutionary movements, has taken a firm grip on affairs, and has adopted stringent measures that will result in the maintaining of peace for a time at least.

At noon yesterday 3,000 gendarmes guarded the street, and other military forces were held in readiness for an eventuality. The foreign legations are under guard, special detachments of Chinese troops keeping watch at the approaches and in some cases the regular legation guard was augmented by reinforcements from other places. Fifty Highlanders were added to the British forces.

Serious runs on banks occurred Sunday and yesterday, and fourteen native banks closed. The crowds were wild with excitement, and towards the close of the day the police intervened and drove them back. It is probable that to-day a number of banks will be closed, and it is believed that the Government will step in and endeavor to stop the financial panic among the poorer classes.

As yet the cause of death in the case of the Emperor and Dowager Empress has not been made public. A number of lengthy reports have been written with reference to this, but they are unintelligible to the foreigners here, who have not yet recovered from the shock of the suspicion of foul play which was widespread. There is no reasonable evidence, however, to show that death in either case was the result of anything other than natural causes.

It is understood that many reforms will be instituted in the palace by Prince Chun, embracing eventually the abolition of Munichs and the introduction of a modern system for the conduction of affairs.

The Chinese Government seemingly has no fear that the conditions now prevailing will be utilized for greater reforms, if precautions now taken at Pekin against a sudden insurrection can be made to over-awe the disaffected. Last night a large number of the gendarmes were withdrawn, and the streets presented a deserted appearance. The police tore the remaining shreds of color from the shops and vehicles before sundown. The people have adopted a dress of mourning, and all officers are attired in white. The buildings are draped in blue and black.

WRECKS GALORE

C. P. R. Auxiliary at Havelock Kept Busy

Havelock, Nov. 17.—The railroad here still continues very busy and a large increase is being made in the staffs in all departments and many advancements are being made by those already in the employ of the company. There is a large increase in the amount of traffic over this line lately and it will likely increase until the close of navigation on Lake Superior and Lake Huron. They have also been handicapped during the past few days by several accidents. On Saturday morning they were called out at 1.30 a.m. to Peterborough to the wreck in which engineer M. Clarke and Fireman G. Haggarty, of Havelock, were injured. They restored traffic at that point and returned here and were called out on Sunday morning to clean up two wrecks. The first one was only two miles east of here, at the water tank lately erected. An engine ran down therre for water and while filling the engine tank, a west bound train came swiftly round the curve and crashed into it. The men running the standing engine were oit at the time and engineer Jno. Toman and Fireman Jno. Thompson, of the running train jumped and escaped with a very severe shaking up and a great many bruises. When that had been cleaned up the auxiloiary moved on to C.O. Jct., where cars were off the the track. Early this morning an engine was off the track in the yard here. This morning the men returned to Peterborough to finish cleaning up the wreck there.

THREE-YEAR-OLD CHILD HAS OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS

The three year old son of Mr. and Mrs Matthew Rady underwent an operation for appendicitis in Havelock on Tuesday. Havelock is the home of appendicitis and operations for the removal of appendices. Upon the first signs of danger the surgeons removed the little boy to Mrs. Campbell's residence where the operation was successfully performed. It is now, a week since the operation and the child continues to improve. All signs point to its complete recovery. This is the "youngest case" that has come under the notice of the Review.

THE SALVATION ARMY AS AN AID TO DAN CUPID

A Vancouver despatch says—"We have been urged to start a matrimonial bureau in connection with this country," stated Commissioner Coombs in an interview on Thanksgiving Day morning. He was afraid, however, that nothing could be done along those lines at present, as the army had not sufficient time time to devote to it, but he expressed himself as keenly alive to the value of such an institution. "I cannot see," he went on "why the churches should not take it up. Families properly housed and comfortably looked after are more needed in this country than bachelors living in lonely shacks. Britain was built up by her homes, and so will daughter be built up."

On being asked as to the emigration plans of the army, the commissioner said, "Not one per cent. of our emigrants have turned out unsatisfactory. It is almost too good to speak about," he went on. "Last year we chartered twelve steamers, but when we saw the condition of the country, we shut off seven of them. The Salvation Army not only has the power of selection, but also the power of control, and we can regulate the emigration as we see fit." The commissioner further stated that all the domestic servants sent out to this country under the auspices of the Army were engaged as soon as they arrived at their destinations. There was no lack of people wanting to come out to Canada. They were clamoring at the Army doors to come.

RENTS ARE LOW

A prominent real estate man stated to the Review to-day that rents were lower in Peterborough now than for several years. He knew of a two storey brick house with all improvements, in a good locality, that could be rented for eight dollars per month. The gentleman stated, however, that though rents were lower, there was no decline in the price of real estate. They are practically the same as last year. real estate business is fairly active at the present time.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIAL EVENING

Held at Knox Church Last Evening---The Programme

The Young People's Society of Knox church held an enjoyable social last evening. A large number were present, and after the business of the evening, Mrs. A. Parker took the chair. A guessing contest was held, for which two prizes were offered, Messrs. Chambers and R. Duncan being the winners.

The following programme was also given ;—

Instrumental duet—Miss Childs and Mrs. Patten.

Vocal Solo—Miss Jessie Miller.

Reading—Miss Mamie Menzies.

Vocal Solo—Mr. Crowe.

The meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

Plan Will Open

The plan for the presentation of "All the Comforts of Home" will open at the Grand Opera House tomorrow at ten o'clock.

THE PASSING OF SIR HENRI JOLY

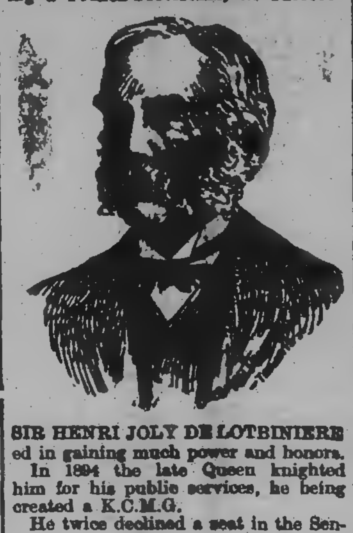
Montreal, Nov. 17.—Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere, Premier of the Province of Quebec in 1878 and 1879, died at his home at Quebec yesterday morning.

Sir Henri was born in France in 1829, was educated in Paris, and came to Canada in 1855. He entered public life in 1871, and, in spite of his being a French-Protestant, he succeeded in gaining much power and honors.



SIR HENRI JOLY DE LOTBINIERE

In 1894 the late Queen knighted him for his public services, he being created a K.C.M.G.

He twice declined a seat in the Senate and in 1896 he was called to the Dominion Cabinet of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Minister of Inland Revenue.

In 1900 he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia.

WERE PAID WELL

City Tax Collector Green informed the Review this morning that the percentage of taxes paid on the second instalment is about the same as last year. After this date five per cent will be added. Of course, the amount of taxes still to be collected, is larger than at this time last year as the taxes for the year are considerably more than for 1907.

THE CHIEF MAKES AN EXPLANATION

As to the Complaint of "Ratepayer" Last Night

Chief Roszel desires to make the following explanation of the complaint against the police made in last night's Review.;—

The Chief said ;—The ratepayer, of Charlotte street ,called at the police station Sunday and reported that a young lad giving his name, had stolen a fountain pen, from his store on Saturday, and that the lad also owed him 80 cents. He wanted the police to recover the pen, and said if they did he would not want to prosecute.

The policeman on duty told him, as I would have told him had I been there, that they were not a collecting agency. The duty of the police is not to collect stolen articles and return them to the owner without a prosecution. If the police are required to make a prosecution they will do so, and also do their utmost to recover the goods."

JAPS' FEELING TOWARDS WHITE BRETHREN NOT SO FRIENDLY AS MIGHT BE SUPPOSED

Interesting Statement Made By English Engineer, Who Has Been at Work in Japan and Is Returning to England—Stopped Off at Peterborough to Visit a Friend

"There is no law for the white man in Japan. The treaty with Great Britain counts for practically nothing since the time of the school troubles in San Francisco." This strong statement was made to the Review yesterday by an ex-officer of the British Royal Navy, who has bween employed for years by the Mikado's government and is now on his way home to England, stopping off at Peterborough for a day to visit an old friend here. The information which this gentleman has to give with regard to the indignities and inconveniences which he says are heaped upon Europeans in the Land of the Rising Sun, should prove a surprise to those who have been accustomed to look on Japan and her people as possessed of the most friendly feelings toward the people of Great Britain.

According to the Review's informant, no European is at all safe in the ownership of any property, unless he becomes a naturalized citizen of Japan. A club, composed of Europeans, who had secured what they thought was a perpetual lease of a boat house and grounds in Yokohama were shortly afterwards obliged to allow Japanese children to play on their cricket crease under pain of cancellation of their lease. Similarly a number of the fine terrace gardens on the heights above the city, which formerly belonged to European residents, have been transformed into play grounds for the native children.

A good instance of the spirit which actuates the native mind was afforded during the recent drought. A number of foreigners who had private wells allowed the native coolies the privilege of drawing water, but found the demand so great that certain hours were in some cases set apart for the purpose. The coolies became so incensed at this that many of the wells were filled with carbolic acid and rendered useless.

"A few months ago," he continued, "a Mrs J. Gray, the wife of an English accountant, refused to pay what she considered an extortionate fee demanded by a rickshaw man. Upon her refusal the rickshaw man became angry and twisted the lady's wrist, severely spraining it. Mr Gray gave the man a good thrashing and was called to appear in the courts where, in spite of the evidence which was dead against the native Mr Gray was convicted of a criminal offence and succeeded in escaping a sentence of six months' imprisonment only by an apology being offered by the entire white population of the city.

"It may not generally be known in Canada, continued the gentleman, "that at the time of the riots in Vancouver last fall the Japanese across the Pacific confidentially boasted that if their fellowcountrymen in Canada were not granted the same rights as the white population they would set Vancouver afire and cut the water mains and that if the militia were called out they were prepared to seize upon the armories. As a naval man our informant took an interest in the Japanese navy, and pronounced it to be the finest fleet in the world as far as efficiency was concerned. He thinks it would have been more than a match for the American fleet, and that it is better prepared for battle than the British navy today."

Wound Up at Meeting of City Council Last Night—Has Been Hanging Fire for Two Years

The river front trouble which has been to the fore for many months has at last been settled, last night's meeting of the city council apparently clearing up the matter for all time. The squabble arose out of a claim by Col. Rogers of the Peterborough Canoe Company, against the city for damages to his property caused by the city filling in that low land on the west side of the river betwen the Hunter street bridge and the CPR railway bridge. It will be remembered that Mr Rogers was entitled to water front privileges and by filling in the city's land it stopped the flow of water past his premises. He therefore put in a demand for a large pipe to be put through the city property from the CPR. north trestle, south to the property so that the water might continue to flow. The estimated cost of this was $1,000, to be borne by the city, the C. PR. and the Peterborough Cereal Co. These three interested partis agreed upon the sums they were to pay, and decided to offer Mr. Rogers the cash instead of putting in the drain. The matter has been hanging fire for two years

Mr R E Wood was present and on motion was asked to state what he desired of the council. He said that there was one point in connection with the settling the water front matter with Mr Rogers, viz., the filling in of the embankment. It was proposed to pay Mr. Rogers the money in cash that it would cost to lay the pipe through with $150 extra for damages. This Mr Rogers agreed to. But there had been nothing done in reference to filling in the embankment. To do this the earth from the Government excavation could be used. Mr Rogers will look after the earth after it is placed there. Then if there is not enough earth from the government work, the city is to fill up the rest. The filling desired is between the CPR. tracks and the neck of land thrown up by the government works a few feet east of the railway.

The aldermen stated that this was the first time they had heard of this proposition and did not understand it. It was understood that when the city paid Mr Rogers $1000 and $150 as damages that would clear them of all further expense.

Mr Wood explained that it would cost the city nothing. All that was wanted was for the city to ask the government to fill in that land after the city's own land had been all filled up. This met with the favor of the aldermen and a motion was passed to the effect that the city ask the government to do as Mr. Rogers requests.

It was moved by Ald. McIntyre, and Elliott that the city now carry out the settlement with Mr Rogers for $1750—Carried.

The city will pay $875 ; the CPR. will contribute $325, and the Peterborough Cereal Co. $350.

LAST CHEESE SHIPMENTS

The last shipments from Peterborough of the closing sale of cheese on the Peterborough Board were made yesterday and Saturday. The shipments were made by buyers Watkin, G. A. Gillespie and Lovell and Christmas. A total of 2,6000 boxes were sold at the sale, all of which of course, were not shipped from Peterborough. All the cheese purchased is shipped to Montreal, and from there to the British markets.

This year the price of cheese has been above the average, and this may also be said of the quality. The year on the whole has been a most satisfactory one.

HOUSE OF PROVIDENCE ASKS CITY FOR SOME ASSISTANCE

At last night's meeting of the city council the following letter was read from the House of Providence ;

We are at present caring for a large number of the poor of the city for which we are receiving no remuneration.

In other cities we understand it is the custom for such institutions to receive a yearly grant from the city, and we wish to ask that the same be done in Peterborough ; also that we be granted free city water, instead of being charged a high rate for use of same.

In consideration of the services rendered the city, in caring for the poor of all denominations, particularly during the past winter, we hope that our request will receive favorable consideration.

Yours respectfully,
St. Joseph's House
of Providence,
per M.K.

There was considerable discussion on the question until Ald. Butler moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that Mayor Rush, Ald. Morgan, Phelan and Bradburn be a committee to meet Rev. Father McColl in regard to a grant towards the House of Providence, the committee to report back to the council.—Carried.

HE WAS CHAMPION FORGER MADE A BUSINESS OF CRIME

Swift Justice for Chicago Man.

Peter Van Vlissingen Confesses to Securing $700,000 by Means of Forged Notes.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Peter Van Vlissingen, a real estate dealer, for years classed among the first of Chicago's prosperous and reputable business men, yesterday confessed to having obtained through forged deeds and notes more than $700,000, and a few hours after his arrest, on his own urgent appeal to be punished, was sentenced to the penitentiary.

The arrest, the indictment, the confession and the sentence were work of less than four hours.

Taken in the midst of business from his office desk at 172 Washington street, shortly after the noon hour, Van Vlissingen appeared before the court and in tears confessed that for from 18 to 20 years he had been securing money through the sale of forged documents and that though he had bought back many of these spurious instruments without detection, at least 25 people would lose an aggregate of more than $700,000 through the paper which he has not yet redeemed.

In forging the notes he declared he had perfected an unique device. This consisted of a plate glass desk top, so arranged that by an electric light through from beneath he could readily trace from originals forged signatures on to worthless paper.

Throughout his arrest and sentence the prisoner made no effort to defend himself, but only asked that his punishment be speedy. Asked if he had anything to say before sentence was imposed, Van Vlissengen replied, bowing his head, "Only that I believe in my punishment at once."

His term in the penitentiary was fixed as indeterminate, from one to 14 years.

Van Vlissengen, who is about 45 years old, was married Feb. 14, 1907, to Mrs. Roosevelt Blend, who was described at the time as a distant relative of President Roosevelt. The bride was a daughter of Wilson C. Blond. Van Vlissengen had been a bachelor, living at the Calumet Club. He was known as being of philanthropic disposition, giving special attention to the welfare of boys.

TROUBLE SETTLED

Engineers on the C.N.R. Get 16 Per Cent. Increase.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—After weaks of intermittent work, the conciliation board appointed by the Labor Department to arrange a more satisfactory working schedule between the Canadian Northern Railway engineers and the company has at last presented its finding.

J. Harvey Hall, representative of the engineers, says it means an increase in wages of 16 per cent. all round, and that the working schedule will be one of the best in existence on any road in Canada.

The settlement has been accepted by the company, but the men have not been heard from. Mr. Hall has no doubt that it will be satisfactory.

The board was composed of F. H. Richardson for the C.N.R.; J. Harvey Hall for the men, and Judge Gunn of Ottawa as the third man. Its finding was unanimous, and affects directly eighty-one and indirectly two hundred and sixty-one engineers.

CIVIC TRIBUTE TO SHEFFIELD CHOIR

Resolution Along This Line Passed at Last Night's Meeting of Council

At last night's meeting of the City Council the following resolution was passed unanimously ;—

Moved by Ald. Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Johnston,—That this Council of the City of Peterborough, Ontario, Canada, takes the earliest opportunity to emphatically express, on behalf of the citizens, its appreciation of the honor from the great choir of the Sheffield Musical Union, which presented a musical programme of the highest possible character and excellence, aroused a new interest in and created a new conception of the possibilities of concerted music, gave a new impetus to musical culture, and, at the same time, by personal contact and intercourse, strengthened the bonds of loyal devotion and attachment to the centre of the empire, of which it is our pride, as well as a privilege, to form a part."

A copy of the resolution will be embossed and forwarded to the Sheffield Musical Union.

CHIEF ROSZEL GIVES WARNING

Boys and Girls Must Not Coast on Pavements in the City

Boys and girls—and older people too for that matter—must not coast on the sidewalks in the city. The pavements are in fine shape for coasting at the present time and it is hard for the young folks to resist. However, coasting is dangerous to pedestrians and cannot be permitted.

Chief Roszel wishes to warn boys and girls that coasting on the pavements in the city will not be allowed.

WIFE IN MOVING PICTURE STRANGE CASE AT KENORA

Kenora, Ont., Nov. 17.—While sitting as a spectator in the Arcade Theatre Saturday afternoon a man who claims to be John Lundstrom of Pueblo, Cal., rushed to the manager of the theatre and said that the figure of the woman on the screen was that of his wife, who left her home five years ago, in a most mysterious manner, and for whom he has been searching without success.

Just after her departure an uncle died, leaving her the sum of $5,000, which now lies idle in a Colorado bank. Mr. Lundstrom begged Manager Burton to tell him the name of the photographer that he might find out where his wife is now located. The favor was granted and it transpired that the missing lady, who is beautiful of face and figure, was posing for a Philadelphia film manufacturer.

Lundstrom stated that he had been married but six months when he awoke one morning to find a note on the table saying that his wife had gone, because she was tired of the monotony.

HAVELOCK FEARS THAT IT MAY HAVE NO ELECTRIC LIGHT

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 17.—The recent rains have checked the many fires which have lately been raging over the north country and doing much damage to timber, wood and hay and keeping the farmers continually on the lookout to save their homes and belongings. A large amount of wood has been destroyed, which will tend to make it dearer and marsh hay on which many of the farmers north of here depends, has been sadly ruined by the destroyer. The rain has not as yet been heavy enough to supply the people with water, and many wells and cisterns are dry. The C.P.R. have been forced to run their engines down from here two miles to the tank to water their engines. The dry spell this year will cause the C.P.R. to dam back Plato creek which supplies them with water, make the people dig deeper wells, and the Electric Light Co. prepare for any dry spell that may come. The company is at present conducting blasting operations at Koshabogamog in an effort to dislodge the bank which holds the water back. If this can be done the electric lights will likely be started soon, but if they do not and it freezes up before raining, there may not be any lights until spring. The Electric Light Co. will take the precaution next year to dam back Kosh early in the summer and thus have plenty of water on hand in in case of a dry spell. It is reported that the C.P.R. will shortly install a dynamo in the shops here and develop their own electric power.

WILL SPEND THE WINTER AT HIS HOME IN ATHENS

Mr. Louis Yeotes, the proprietor of the George street shoe shine parlors left this morning for the Old Country, where he will visit at his home in Athens, Greece. Mr. Yeotes has been in Canada for the past five years, having come here with his uncle Mr. F. Pappas. Mr. Yeotes first lived in Montreal, having gone in business there. He came to Peterborough about three years ago and has been very successful in his business here. He has made for himself a number of friends, among whom he is exceedingly popular. They all join in wishing him a safe voyage and an enjoyable time at his home. He left this morning for Lindsay, where he will remain a few days previous to going to New York, from where he will sail for Greece. He will return to Peterborough next April.

HEADACHES ARE DANGER SIGNALS

They Tell Us Plainly That Something Is Wrong Inside.

There are tablets and powders that will stop a headache promptly—but removing a danger signal does not take away the danger.

In nearly every case a headache—of whatever kind—is a symptom of poisoned blood, due to Bowels, Kidneys and Skin failing to thoroughly remove indigestible food and waste, worn-out tissue from the body. Then digestion is poor, causing sick headaches, or uric acid is formed and deposited on the nerves, causing neuralgia.

Not only the danger signal, but the danger itself as well, is quickly removed by "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" are tablets made of the combined juices of oranges, apples, figs and prunes, containing all their medicinal properties, concentrated and intensified. They cause the liver to secrete more bile, which moves the bowels freely and regularly, and cures the most obstinate cases of Constipation. They stir up kidneys and skin to throw off all the urea, or dead tissue, which has been poisoning the system. They sweeten the stomach, improve digestion and tone up the whole body. The headaches disappear—because the source is removed. 50c. a box—6 for $2.50. Trial size, 25c. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SIR HENRI de LOTBINIERE

The late Sir Henri Joly de Lotbiniere was such a man as Canada might well be proud of. Yet we cannot claim him altogether as our own, since he was born and educated in France and laid the foundation of his character in a more conducive clime. While he was what might be called a very staunch Liberal in politics he was not a man at any time to stand for even the shadow of crookedness. In him Canadians had a man they knew they could trust not only on account of his honesty—as not honesty for every man is supposed to be less than a thief—but on account of his sense of honor which abiding with him under all circumstances made him a man above malpractice or prejudice, political national or religious. To those who knew him personally as we had the privilege of doing he was "a very parfait knight," a man who would strike one as altogether above the absurdity of class or social distinctions but blooming through his own inherent moral healthfulness and purity. He concerned himself chiefly with agriculture, which he greatly raised the standard of, in Quebec. In reflecting upon his career and long life of usefulness one can only say what would this country be without a few of such shining examples? His name will remain unforgotten in the pages of our history.—Vive La France.

THE TRUTH

"The main struggle has been of a peculiarly sordid character, in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier has appealed to gross material enterprise, present or prospective, as an effective answer to the charges of political corruption, freely brought against almost every department of his administration. Although these charges—the gravest of which were made against the Interior Department, under Hon. Clifford Sifton—were for the most part not susceptible of exact proof, it is admitted the the arts of 'graft' and 'boodling' which were once regarded as the peculiar defects of Republican government, have fastened their poisonous fangs into Canadian politics. Enough has been disclosed before committees and even in law courts to show that the most vulgar modes of bribery have been employed to secure timber limits and other valuable Governmental properties."—The Nation, (Eng).

This great Liberal British newspaper or perhaps we should say Liberal-independent newspaper has "sized up" the situation in Canada rightly enough. The Globe attempts to answer this severe criticism by a simple denial of its truth. Surely nobody is mad enough to deny the rotten condition of the Canadian public service as it is being revealed day by day. The standard of public life in Canada is low. Thanks to aiding and abetting by people who pretend to know vastly better it continues to get worse.

THE OVERDRAFT

The chief complaint made against our city council of last year was that the overdraft was an omen of disaster. That overdraft has been reduced by this year's council by no less than 103 thousand dollars. This is something to be proud of and taken in conjunction with the generally efficient management of municipal property and affairs entitles the Mayor and council to a renewal of the electors' confidence if they wish it. We believe in criticism, but also in commendation where it is due and we are inclined to think that Peterborough is pretty well governed from top to bottom. This also seems to be the general opinion.

ST. JOSEPH'S REQUEST

The request of the authorities of St. Joseph's House of Providence, is reasonable. If the city is not going to take care of its poor in its own institutions, but prefers the method at present in vogue, then St. Joseph's House of Providence has as much right to be paid as the Protestant Home or any other sectarian refuge. The argument is irrestible. It is possible that in time, state or municipal aid will go only where it can be wholly under state or municipal control but in the meantime the city must pay its debts to those who with its permission have undertaken its work.

RELIGION AND POLITICS

The following remarkable article on Religion and Politics, in the United States, we clip from La Patrie of Montreal. This journal is probably the most thoroughly representative of French-Canada of all the Quebec newspapers. The article shows how closely politics and religion are becoming interwoven throughout the continent of America and how necessary it is that the right understanding be reached regarding it. The following is the editorial referred to:

"The New York World published the other day President Roosevelt's reply to Mr. J. C. Martin, of Dayton, Ohio, who had expressed certain opinions concerning the religious belief of Mr. Taft. Mr. Martin said amongst other things:—Although the whole world pretends that religion and politics do not concern each other everybody knows that they do and that the world so thinks and that the bulk of non-Catholic electors would not support a Catholic candidate for a public office, especially for the presidency of the United States. Since Mr. Taft's being chosen as candidate there has been a constant crying out against him on the ground that he was a Unitarian infidel and that his wife and brother were Catholics. If the adherence of his wife and brother to Catholicism made of Mr. Taft a friend of the Catholic Church, it will be enough to ensure his defeat. On the other hand if an infidel, his defeat will be certain. I am writing merely to give Mr. Taft a chance to make his religious opinion known."

"Mr. Roosevelt was not the man to advise Taft to enter upon such a controversy in the height of his campaign. Now that the campaign is all over the President replied, but in such a way as to show that he is against such inquiries being made at all. Taft is unitarian, that is, he does not believe in the Trinity or in the divinity of Christ, however, he practises a sort of deism of the Platonic or Ciceronic type. (We may say that unitarianism is the cult of the fashionable world in U.S.) As to his wife and brother, they are not Catholic. But, said the President, Mr. Martin should know that the electors are called upon to elect a chief of state, not a chief of church, and to decide if Taft is the man. Lincoln belonged to no communion, although a profound Christian. Mr. Roosevelt goes on to deny that religious convictions influence administrations or electors. He cites several cases where in his cabinets, Jews Gentiles, Catholics, Protestants and unbelievers were on a perfectly equal footing before the elector. But according to our opinion religion has played an immense part in American politics. General Sherman had to sacrifice the presidency to his Catholic faith, Blaine was beaten, not only because his lieutenant, Burchard, offended Catholics by his celebrated phase: "Rum, Rome and Riot," but also because ultra Protestants would not vote for him on account of his Catholic wife. Bland was rejected fifteen years ago by the Democratic party because his wife was a Catholic.

Before McKenna, of California, entered the McKinley Cabinet no Catholic had ever been admitted to it. Taft would have been elected even if his wife had been a Catholic as Catholics number one-sixth of the electorate, and by reason of his kindly attitude in the Philippines towards the Catholic Church, but he would have lost hundreds of thousands of Protestant votes. Roosevelt has enunciated what ought to be rather than what is."

There is nothing so bad for a state or a people as veiled suspicion founded on religious beliefs and the sooner we get this mutual mistrust settled for good or cleared up for good, so soon will civilization amongst us advance and the needs of both people and country receive their due measure of attention. Or must it be that the struggle shall continue as at present? However, living in a state of false pretences is unendurable and will ultimately have the effect of seriously setting back both Christianity and the comfort and happiness of those who otherwise might be mutual good friends and helpers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Grandfather—The woman.

La Patrie evidently succeeded in getting at the real state of feeling of the Sheffield choir in an interview. The choir, through its agent, Mr. Wood, says that it was greatly handicapped through the discomforts it experienced, and that, while the audiences received them well, their trip has been to them a bitter experience.

The extraordinary way in which Mr. Hearst obtained the Standard Oil letters, which made such a sensation in the recent Presidential election is told in Collier's Weekly. It seems that there were two men who stole them. One was a white man who crossed the color line, and the other his negro friend—the stepson of John D. Archibold's aged butler. Mr. Hearst is said to have paid $12,000 for them. The letters were photographed and then returned to their place in the Standard Oil office.

"Of all Disraeli's conquests there were none more unexpected and complete than that obtained over Queen Victoria. The Prince Consort shared in extreme degree the prejudice existing among British gentlemen against one whom they were disposed to regard as a Jew adventurer. The Queen devotedly shared all her husband's likes and dislikes Disraeli disclosed the secret of his triumph. He had, he said, a simple rule when talking with the Queen. 'I never deny; I never contradict; I sometimes forget.' He indicated another phrase when he said, 'Gladstone treats the Queen like a public department; I treat her like a woman.'"

Lord Hugh Cecil is now 39, and out of these years no fewer than 34 have been spent in active politics. He started young—so the story goes—by an interview with Mr. Gladstone whom he addressed to his face as 'a bad man.' 'But how can I be a bad man,' said Mr. Gladstone, 'when I am a friend of your father.' The youthful Cecil was not equal to the logic of the situation, but he pointed to a sword on the wall, and intimated that it was intended for Gladstone's head when his father could find time to perform the happy despatch.—Pall Mall Gazette.

That the earth is a great magnet we all know, and it was long ago suggested that it is an electromagnet—that its magnetism is due to electric currents encircling it from east to west. But what causes these currents? It has seemed likely to many students of the subject that they are in some way connected with the earth's rotation—that the earth is like the armature of a great dynamo in the sun's magnetic field. This view seems essentially that of Dr. F. A. Black, who contributes an article on "The Earth as a Magnet" to Harper's Magazine New York October.

Up to October 10 there had been received in Great Britain applications for old age pensions from 466,164 persons which means that about £6,000,000 a year will be required to meet the cost. Of the whole, 273,362 came from England, 131,610 from Ireland 49,077 from Scotland, and 13,615 from Wales. The proportionate largeness of the number from Ireland is accounted for by the statement that Ireland has a greater proportionate number of people over 65 years than the other kingdoms, the figures per 1000 of population being 127 in Ireland to 97 in Scotland and 93 in England. The difference is curious and suggests that in spite of its much advertised drawbacks, Ireland is a healthy place to live in.

"It is, as we have said, to be regretted that we have in our Dominion such men as Mr. Hocken, and such association as the Orange Order. They do not make for the peace and happiness of the community. They are the apostles of strife, the breeders of bad blood, the enemies of that Canadian fellowship and friendship which we would like to see grow strong and vigorous in the upbuilding of our nation. When the history of our time is written the name of Mr. Hocken, editor of the Orange Sentinel, and the name of Dr. Sproule, Grand Sovereign of the Orange Order and President of the Orange Sentinel Printing and Publishing Company, will not appear amongst those to whom Canada is indebted for anything worthy of remembrance. They will be merely referred to as men who in their day were the champions of an association whose history both at home and abroad has been written in blood.—The Catholic Record.

"Every one who reads the signs of the times is aware that much more will be required of the coming generation of surgeons than mere technical skill. The days of thrilling exhibitions of operative dexterity are passed.

"The leaders in modern surgery are not only good operators, but equally good diagnosticians; they know not only how to cut, but why to cut. This development of diagnostic acumen cannot fail to act as a wholesome check to reckless operations and to unnecessary exploratory procedures. It gives assurance to the practitioner that a surgical consultation means something more than resort to the knife—that he will not be superseded in the management of the case unless the conditions so demand.

"Thus the surgeon will become not so much a specialist as a physician who knows how to use the knife.' American Medicine.

IF ALL ON THE PETITION VOTE FOR IT

Local Option Will Carry at Havelock---Story of Temperance Fight There

Havelock, Nov. 17.—The local option fight in town is on in earnest and the history of the struggle against the liquor party during the past year is indeed a very interesting one.

Last year the people did not think of local option in time to vote on it in January. Then in February a petition was circulated by one of the fathers of the village and a vote taken on a by-law to raise the hotel license fee from $250 to $750, a raise of $500, and carried by a small majority. The three hotels in town paid the high license, but the people in town were not satisfied and are now clamoring for local option. Two of the resident clergymen circulated a petition and it was signed by 170 electors, while only about 90 names were needed on it. The petition was filed filed with the clerk on October 29th and on Nov. 2nd placed before the Council and on Jan. 4th, 1909, at the municipal elections, a vote will be taken on this important question. In polling sub-division No. 1, in the Council Chamber, R. Philips will be deputy returning officer and James Scott, poll clerk. In No. 2, in town hall, H. T. Andrews will be deputy returning officer and Wm. Bryans poll clerk. If the vote results in a majority in favor of the by-law, it shall come into effect on May 1st, next.

The by-law will carry if all the people on the petition vote on it.

LETTER FROM A FORTY-NINER

Here is a simple, interesting and sincere letter from a rugged pioneer of '49, who braved the dangers and hardships of the overland trail to California. It should appeal to all catarrh victims.

Santa Rosa, Cal., May 5, 1908.

Booth's Hyomei Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear Sirs;—I was afflicted with catarrh and tried a number of remedies, but received no relief. I purchased an outfit of Hyomei, and before I had used the bottle I noted a marked relief. I used it for a month or so, and thought I was cured, and stopped using it for a year or so. Thought I was getting catarrh again, and started using it again. I used it every morning, and keep myself clear of catarrh. I consider it the best catarrh medicine that is used. I have often recommended it to my friends. I am 81 years old. I came to California in 1849, and of course am not as vigorous as I was 58 years ago. My address is 841 4th street. Yours truly, W. Mock.

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is guaranteed by Wm. Madill, druggist, Hunter-st., Peterborough, not only for catarrh, but for grip, coughs, colds, bronchitis and croup. A complete outfit, including inhaler, costs only $1.00; extra bottles of Hyomei, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents.

"ZEPHRA" IS BEING GIVEN AT ST. THOMAS

Harry J. Booth of Boston, and A. C. Barnsdale, of Stratford, have arrived in the city to begin preparations for the production of "Queen Zephra," an operetta that has been given with great success in many Ontario cities by these gentlemen. The Children's Shelter is interested in the performances, and a percentage of the receipts will go to that worthy institution. Messrs. Booth and Barnsdale met a number of singers in the Public Library Thursday evening and arrangements were made for rehearsals. Three or four performances will be given the second week in December. About a hundred children and young men and women will take part.—St. Thomas Journal.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario are located the curative saline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where treatments for nervous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and all particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

Laura Stormes, late of Odessa, Ont. aged 73 years, and Joseph Bogart of Antwerp, NY., were married at Watertown this week and are now in Lennox county on their honeymoon.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Called Pope Fanatic.

During the recent federal campaign, a special edition of this paper was circulated amongst the French-Canadians of Compton County. "Why should Mr. Pope be defeated?" was the question asked, and it answered the question as follows: "Because he is an Orange fanatic," and this is why Mr. Pope is bringing the action.

Arrested For Murder.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—Joseph E. Hallatt, single, 20 years of age, was arrested at his mother's home at 427 Church street at 11.30 last night. The arrest was made at the request of Chief Constable J. C. McRae of Winnipeg, whose brief wire to the local police merely named the charge as murder.

From other advices it appears that the charge arises out of the death of a Miss Polson at Winnipeg two weeks ago. The girl was run over by a man driving a light wagon.

Hotelmen Fined.

Orillia, Nov. 17.—N. B. Irish, proprietor of the Simcoe House, was fined $20 and costs for allowing liquor to be kept on the premises. The cider was found to contain nearly 4 per cent. alcohol. John Butterfield, proprietor of the Victoria Hotel, was fined $40 and costs for keeping liquor for sale on the premises, and Charles Harrington, proprietor of the Hotel at Washago, was fined $100 and costs for supplying liquor to an Indian. The Indian was drowned.

Victimized Merchants.

Kingston, Nov. 17.—J. Rosen, proprietor of a ladies' tailoring establishment, closed up shop yesterday and left for parts unknown, taking with him over $1,000 collected from leading merchants by bogus checks. Over a score of merchants were nipped by Rosen. Before leaving Rosen drew all his savings in the Standard Bank and at a number of stores, where he secured goods he gave checks for which there were no funds.

Western Bank Absorbed.

Toronto, Nov. 17.—The trend of events in the financial world was again witnessed yesterday when it was announced that one of the large Toronto banks, the Standard Bank of Canada, was about to absorb one of the smaller sister institutions, the Western Bank of Canada, with headquarters at Oshawa, and which has carried on business for upwards of 25 years.

Standard Oil Dividends.

New York, Nov. 17.—Directors of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, which is the parent or holding company of the oil combine, yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of $10 per share. This was unchanged from the dividend paid in the corresponding quarter of last year, and makes a total of $40 in dividends to be paid this year.

Wants the Ring or the Cash.

Windsor, Nov. 17.—A suit to be tried on Nov. 26, between Fred Bellmore, a drug clerk, and Luck Whitley, has some interesting features. The suit is for the recovery of a diamond engagement ring. Miss Whitley declares that she no longer has the ring, and flatly refuses to pay the $100 that the plaintiff demands.

H. S. Holt President.

Montreal, Nov. 17.—H. S. Holt was elected president of the Royal Bank at a meeting of directors at noon yesterday. Mr. Holt, who was formerly vice-president, succeeds the late T. E. Kenny of Halifax.

E. L. Peas was elected vice-president, and the vacancy on the board was not filled.

Auto Over Precipice.

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 17.—An automobile in which were seven persons plunged over a precipice overlooking the Spokane river on Sunday night, and Miss Mary Nichols was killed. The automobile turned over while descending the grade, and landed partly buried beneath flying boulders fifty feet below.

Six Lives Lost.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 17.—Just six lives were lost in accidents on the freight and passenger vessels on the lakes during the year 1908, all during the past 30 days.

Quiet In Muskogee.

Okmulgee, Okla., Nov. 17.—Quiet prevails in Muskogee following Sunday's fight between officers and negroes in which five persons were shot to death.

Used Steel Knuckles.

Brantford, Nov. 17.—The police are looking for Edward O'Connor, who, it is alleged, used steel knuckles on Norman Thompson Saturday evening. Thompson did not regain consciousness for several hours. The affair is an echo of the moulders' strike at Buck's. John Judge, O'Connor's partner, was arrested.

Robbed and Shot.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—Herbert Price, a young Port Du Fort man, was robbed Saturday evening while returning to his home from business. In a scuffle with two assailants he was shot in the thigh and then relieved of $140.

Electrocuted.

Auburn, N.Y., Nov. 17.—Andrew Del Vermo, convicted on Jan. 28, 1907, of the murder of Antonio Page at Rome on June 30, 1906, was successfully electrocuted in Auburn Prison yesterday morning at 6.11.

The Marine Enquiry.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The Cassels' commission will resume its public sittings at St. John, N.B., on Nov. 30.

The commission will visit Toronto next month.

KAISER MEETS VON BUELOW.

Confidence Expressed That Emperor Will Yield to the People.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—There is a wave of confidence that to-day's conference between the Kaiser and Prince Von Buelow will result in the former's acceptance of the nation's terms. If the Emperor remains obdurate and sends a soldier into the chancellorship there is not the slightest shadow of doubt that the country will be brought to the verge of a political revolution. The meeting will take place in the morning at the new palace at Potsdam.

The Welt am Montag, a weekly journal, professes to have received absolutely reliable information from America that the sum of $50,000 was paid by the German Government for the suppression of the Kaiser's interview in The Century Magazine. It is stated that negotiations were carried on directly between the German Foreign Office and the writer of the interview.

A Western Murder.

Payton, Sask., Nov. 17.—Frank Naden, Frenchman, 40 years old, was fatally stabbed early Monday morning by A. Tretault, another Frenchman, who came here with his wife a fortnight ago from Bridgeport, Nebraska, and built a house, taking Naden into his employ.

Tretault's story is that for the past week Naden had been coming in after midnight, and Sunday night they refused him admittance, saying he was too late. Finally Mrs. Naden let him in, when he attacked Tretault with a butcher knife. A fight ensued.

Cars Piled 30 Feet In the Air.

Woodstock, Nov. 17.—An eastbound freight train running down grade at 45 miles an hour, came to grief at Goble's Station on the G.T.R. Sunday night. The engine of the train apparently broke a rail in passing, as every car after the engine left the track and piled up in a heap some heavy cars being erected 30 feet in the air.

The van, contining the brakeman and conductor, turned over and rolled down the embankment.

Ovation For Togo.

Kobe, Nov. 17.—Admiral Togo drove through the streets of this city yesterday amid scenes of tremendous enthusiasm.

The Emperor sent an imperial message to the fleet, which consisted of 124 vessels anchored three miles from the shore. In his message the Emperor exhorted the officers and men of the Japanese navy to work assiduously to maintain it in a satisfactory condition.

Will Ask Legislation.

London, Nov. 17.—A resolution asking the Ontario Government to pass legislation making valid the contract of this city with the Hydro-Electric Commission was passed at a meeting of the council last night by a vote of 8 to 4.

It has also resolved to oppose the granting of a fiat making the commission a co-defendant with the city in any action which might be brought.

Poisoning From Operation.

Brantford, Nov. 17.—Dr. Pearson, medical health officer, is lying dangerously ill here with blood-poisoning, which he contracted from performing an abdominal operation Saturday. He pricked his finger with a needle and septic poisoning followed. His arm has been operated upon, but it is feared another operation will be necessary.

Life Sentence Worse Than Death.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The petition of Albert T. Patrick, the New York lawyer serving a life sentence at Sing Sing, N.Y., on the charge of having murdered Millionaire Wm. M. Rice, for a writ of habeas corpus was denied by the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday. Patrick charged that the case against him was a conspiracy, and urged that in commuting the sentence of death, which the court imposed to one of life imprisonment, Governor Higgens had resorted to a more cruel method of punishment.

Sent Out False News.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—Grossly exaggerated reports of the weather conditions in the Canadian west having recently been sent out to the American press from Winnipeg and Medicine Hat, the Government will take action to punish the culprits. For a similar offence last year a correspondent in Alberta was fined $200.

The recent exaggerations made it appear that through mythical terrific storms the country was completely tied up and the transportation facilities utterly demoralized.

Greeks Disappear.

Belleville, Nov. 17.—Two young Greeks, named Sanan Farnaras and Thomas Harris, left the city early on Sunday for Toronto, and are accused of taking with them $500 from Costun Votkotees and $107 from Lokas Koukoas, two other Greeks. They are all relative and engaged in business.

Burglar Sentenced.

Kingston, Nov. 17.—Bachelors who furnished their quarters with stolen articles, were sentenced yesterday, Norman Staley, who led the gang in the robbery of the summer house of W. J. Wells, was sent to the penitentiary to serve two years.

CATTLE MARKETS.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—London cables for cattle are steady at 11½c to 13c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 11c to 11⅛c per lb.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Nov. 16.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were larger than for some time past, 85 carloads, composed of 1790 cattle, 5 hogs, 622 sheep and lambs, 31 calves and 75 horses.

Exporters.

Export steers sold from $4.60 to $5, and one selected load was sold by Corbett & Hall at $5.15 per cwt. Bulls sold from $3.75 to $4.60, the latter price being obtained by Dunn & Levack for one choice 2250 lb. bull.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butcher cattle sold about as high as the best exporters, at $4.75 to $5; loads of good, $4.30 to $4.60; medium, $4 to $4.25; common, $3.50 to $3.75; cows, $2.50 to $3.75; canners, $1 to $2.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report a light trade in feeders and stockers. Should there be a heavy delivery it looks as tho every class excepting the best of feeders, might go lower in price. Messrs. Murby report prices same as last week, as follows: Best feeders, 950 to 1050 lbs. each, at $3.60 to $4; best feeders, 800 to 950 lbs. each, at $3.40 to $3.75; best stockers, 650 to 800 lbs. each, at $3 to $3.40; common and medium stockers, $2 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

About 30 milkers and springers sold at $30 to $65 each. All good to choice milkers and forward springers found ready sale, but late springers and light common inferior quality cows were slow sale.

Veal Calves.

Only a very limited number of veal calves was offered and prices were unchanged at $3 to $6.25 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The trade in sheep and lambs is steadily growing larger at this market, over 600 finding ready sale to-day. Besides the abattoirs, Messrs. Dunn and Levack are always on hand to take all offered. Trade in sheep and lambs was steady. Export ewes sold at $3.25 to $3.40; rams, $2 to $2.50 per cwt.; lambs, $4 to $4.50, or an average of $4.40 per cwt.

Hogs.

As predicted by The World on Friday last prices were a little stronger. Gunns, Limited, reported selects, fed and watered at market, $6.25 and $6 f.o.b. cars, to drovers at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 16.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 14 were 3403 cattle, 4300 sheep and lambs, 2620 hogs and 404 calves. The offerings for local consumption this morning consisted of 1300 cattle, 1500 sheep and lambs and 200 calves. There was no actual change in the condition of the market for cattle since this day week, prices being firmly maintained for good to choice stock on account of the continued limited supply coming forward and the good demand for the same local buyers. There was also a good enquiry from exporters, but they found it difficult to fill their wants of choice and were obliged to buy several lots of light weights in order to complete their shipments. But supplies of medium and common cattle were ample, for which the demand was good, and on the whole an active trade was done. Cable advices from Liverpool on Saturday stated that trade was very slow and the market weak with prices ½c to 1¼c per lb. lower than a week ago; sales of a few choice beeves here were made at 5c; good, at 4½c to 4¾c; fair, at 3¾c to 4c; common, at 2¾c to 3¼c, and inferior at 1½c to 2½c per lb.

A firm feeling prevailed in the market for lambs and prices show no change from a week ago. Supplies were fairly large, for which the demand from local buyers was good and an active trade was done. Choice lots sold at 5c to 5¼c, and good, at 4½c to 4¾c per lb., the trade in sheep was fair and prices were unchanged at 3¾c to 4c for good to choice lots, and at 3¼c to 3½c for culls per lb. The demand for calves was rather slow at 2½c to 5c per lb., as to quality and size. There were about 3000 hogs on the market this morning, but in spite of this fact and the continued weak advices from European sources, on Canadian bacon, which noted a further decline in prices of 1s to 4s per cwt., a firmer feeling developed in the market and values show an advance of 5c to 10c per cwt., as compared with those of a week ago. The demand was good from local packers and dealers and sales of selected lots were made at $6.30 to $6.60 per cwt., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 16.—Cattle—Receipts, 3800 head; fairly active and steady; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.50; shipping, $5.25 to $6; butchers', $4.50 to $5.60; heifers, $3.50 to $5.50; cows and bulls, $2 to $4.50; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $4.50; stock heifers, $2.75 to $3.25; fresh cows and springers, steady, $20 to $65.

Hogs—Receipts, 25,500 head; slow and steady; heavy, $5.80 to $5.90; mixed, $5.75 to $5.85; yorkers, $5 to $5.75; pigs, $4 to $5; roughs, $5.25 to $5.50; stags, $4 to $4.50; dairies, $5.25 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 18,000 head; active; sheep, steady; lambs, 25c higher; lambs, $4 to $6.35; yearlings, $4 to $4.75; wethers, $4 to $4.50; ewes, $4 to $4.25; sheep, mixed, $1.50 to $4.25; Canada lambs, $5.75 to $5.90.

Miss Muriel Amelia Agatha McBride, only daughter of J. P. and Mrs. McBride, of Hamilton, is dead, aged fifteen.

MAY PROBE CIVIL SERVICE.

Government Department May All Be Inquired Into.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—As a result of the revelations of graft in the Marine Department at Quebec, the Government has under consideration the opening of all of the Departments to a commission of enquiry.

It is probable that the commissioner will be Judge Cassels and the enquiry may begin after the report on the Marine enquiry has been made, which it is expected will be completed by Christmas.

Shoots the Judge.

Leipsig, Nov. 17.—A defeated litigant in the supreme tribunal of Leipsig yesterday drew a revolver and opened fire on Herr Maenner, the presiding judge, and the court clerk. The clerk was shot dead and the judge was dangerously wounded.

The assassin, a man named Grosser, succeeded in firing ten shots before he was overpowered. Grosser was the plaintiff in a suit concerning the validity of a will, and the decision of Judge Maenner was in favor of the defence.

As soon as Grosser heard the ruling he drew a revolver and began firing.

No Answer.

Washington, Nov. 17.—No comment was made yesterday at the White House on the letter to President Roosevelt from the New York Synodical Conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America, asking him to recant his denunciation as "unwarranted bigotry" and refusal to vote for a candidate for high office because of membership in the Roman Catholic Church.

It was intimated that the President would have nothing to say in regard to the letter, although it was added that he had not had time to give it full consideration.

Best Regimental Shot.

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The following list of winners of best shot badges for 1908, is published in militia orders: G.G.B.G., Sergt. J. White; 9th Miss. Horse, Corp. J. R. Jupp; 12th Regt., Pte. C. DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rambling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

TRIBUTE TO PROF. LOCKE

Speaking of the appointment of Prof Geo. H. Locke, as librarian at Toronto, the Star says:

"The appointment of Mr. George H. Locke as librarian bears all the marks of good judgment. We attach particular importance to the fact that Mr. Locke has had the training of a teacher and especially to his connection with Macdonald College. We want in our libraries the spirit of the teacher and the missionary zeal which goes out into the highways and the byways for readers and compels them to come in.

For ninety per cent. of our people the public library is the only higher institute of learning. Boys and girls whose school education is closed at fourteen years of age need to be taught what to read, how to consult books of reference, where to find information and sources of inspiration for useful work and good citizenship. Young, energetic, broad minded and open to new ideas, Mr. Locke looks like the man for this post of duty."

A Common Mistake AboutGlasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

CONSULTATION FREE. CHARGES MODERATE.

Third Anniversary Sale
IN THE BARGAIN ANNEX TO-MORROW

Three Years-156 Weekly Bargain Annex Events
And Not a Single Failure - Wed., People's Day

Three Years ago, Wednesday, November 18th a new feature was inaugurated, in the form of an exclusive Bargain Dept.. A department in which nothing but goods of rare value was to be offered for sale. Prices were to prevail in this section lower than in any other part of the store or other store in the city. The idea was to make Wednesday the city people's SATURDAY and also to draw outside people to the mid-week market and thus equalize business throughout the week. The success of this department, "Cressman's Bargain Annex" was phenomenal from the start Then the ANNEX was comparatively small. To-day, it is the Largest and most Widely-known Purely Bargain Dept. carried on in any city in Canada anything like the size of Peterborough. It has its own organization, buyers and salespeople. Hundreds of customers visit the Annex each Wed. and are given perfect satisfaction, we insist on as efficient service here as in other dept's. We guarantee satisfaction and try to uphold our claim that ours is "The Store That Never Disappoints".

"Bargain Annex" Facts.
1.—The Bargain Annex is a purely Bargain Department.
2.—The Bargain Annex is open one day each week, Wednesday.
3.—The Bargain Annex is covered by a Government Patent.
4.—The Bargain Annex this week celebrates its Third Anniversary.
5.—The Bargain Annex has never had a failure.

THE PROGRESS OF DAIRYING IN PROVINCE OF ONTARIO

Splendid Efforts of Dairymen's Associations Have Brought Gratifying Results—Peterborough Section is Greatly Benefitted—The Useful Work of Instructors

In view of the approach of the dairy meetings in this district, which will be addressed by Messrs. Barr and Whitley, it might be interesting to remark briefly on the growth of dairying in Ontario during the past fifteen years, a growth that has been noticeably shared in this part of the province. A steady improvement along dairy lines has marked the well directed efforts of those who have lent so much pains and energy to the movement and it is most encouraging to witness the intelligent co-operation and practical appreciation of the efforts of the instructors that have given by dairymen and farmers, among a large majority of whom dairying has a very important place.

Some fifteen years ago the work of instruction was taken up by a few men who visited the cheese factories about twice a season. The number of workers was so limited and the territory to cover so large that they couldn't make their visits oftener.

Since then the work of instruction has made great advantages and now shows the result of intelligent direction and organization. Eastern and western Ontario are now in charge of two chief instructors with 26 instructors under their charge. These instructors have attended different schools in the province and the instructions given by them is very thorough and useful. By the adoption of the system of instruction cheese of uniform quality is made in all parts of the province.

Great credit is due the chief instructors for eastern and western Ontario, Messrs. G. G. Publow and Frank Herns, respectively, and Peterborough section is in no small measure indebted to Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the director elected to represent th esection for the industry and interest he has shown in the cause of dairying.

There has been a steady improvement in the care of milk on the farm and the year just closed has been one of the most successful in the history of dairying from the standpoint of the farmer.

The tea you buy may be good, but you may be quite sure it is if it is "Salada." It is infinitely more delicious and decidedly more economical than other teas because it goes farther.

OBITUARY

MARY ANN FRASER.

The death occurred at the Nicholls hospital last night of Mary Ann Fraser, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fraser, of Bridgenorth. The late Miss Fraser had been ill only a few days, having been removed to the hospital on Sunday morning. The deceased was forty-six years of age and had been a resident of Bridgenorth practically all her life. She was well known and highly respected and the news of her demise will be learned of with the profoundest rerget.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

MRS. MAYNARD.

Death came very suddengy on Saturday at her home, 412 Huron street, to Mrs. Maynard, formerly a Miss Revell, of Woodstock, Ont. Mrs. Maynard had been out and down town, apparently in her usual health, early in the week, where she contracted a chill which developed into pneumonia, which quickly proved fatal. She was a member of the Anglican Church and has left two daughters, both grown up.—Toronto Telegram.

The late Mrs. Maynard is an aunt of Mrs. E. A. Peck, Rogers street, Ashburnham.

SLIDE AND RINK AGAIN THIS YEAR

Radial Railway Company Will Open Them Again When Weather is Cold Enough

The Peterborough Radial Railway Company will offer its patrons the same advantages for winter pleasure as they did last season. The toboggan slide and rink at Jackson park will again be opened and should enjoy the same measure of popularity as last year.

Mr J. H. Larmouth, manager of the company, informed the Review today that the slide and rink would be placed in readiness just as soon as the weather conditions permitted.

HAVELOCK

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 17—Dr. Middleton, of Peterborough was in town Thursday last.

Mr and Mrs P McCann have returned from visiting friends in Beaverton.

Mr M. Foley has been engaged by Mr J. Squires of town.

Mr Joseph Frost has moved into T. Curtis' house on Ontario St.

Mrs Holdcroft has returned from visiting friends in Cobourg.

Jas. Colquhoun and M Barlow who have been working at West Toronto have returned to this division of the CPR.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Webster of Winnipeg were in town on Saturday.

George Sherry, barrister, of Norwood, was in town on Friday.

Mr and Mrs A. E. Barret attended the Sheffield choir concert in Peterborough on Thursday.

A very large number were in attendance at the school concert at Victoria, five miles east of here on Friday night last and there were several from Havelock also. The concert was a great success and reflects very much credit on the teacher, Miss Kelly. The concert was for the purpose of raising funds for a bell for the new school which has lately been erected and the people of the surrounding country seem to be in favor as the large attendance signified. The programme consisted of dialogues, solos, songs, etc.

Mr John Sexsmith, MP, addressed the meeting also as well as Rev. Mr Millen of Victoria. Mr. James Freeman occupied the chair.

Miss L. Hensall was in Peterborough on Friday last.

The adjourned case of Buck vs Gillians and vice versa came up before Magistrate Mathison on Friday last and the complete evidence taken, occupying all the afternoon and up till nine o'clock in the evening. It resulted in John Buck being fined $12. and Gillians $28.

Lily Mary, the little seven months old daughter of Mr and Mrs. Jas Beatty, Oak street, died on Wednesday evening last after a very short illness. The funeral took place on Thursday at 2.30 o'clock pm. to the Maple Grove cemetery. The deep sympathy of the community is extended to the parents in their loss.

Mr. Oscar Burkel of the Bank of Toronto, spent Monday last at his home in Norwood.

Mr. Barn of Cobourg has returned to her home after visiting her sister, Mrs Alex. Rose.

Mrs. Chas. Armstrong and Mrs Brennan spent Wednesday with friends at Norwood.

The three year old son of Mr and Mrs Matthew Rady, underwent an operation for appendicitis at Mrs Campbell's residence, on Tuesday last and is improving rapidly.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Chas Baylor, whose little daughter Gertrude, aged five years, died on Thursday after a few days' illness. The funeral took place on Friday morning to the Maple Grove cemetery.

Mr. J. Craig of London was in town on Saturday on business.

Mrs. John Scott of town was operated on for appendicitis at Mrs Campbell's residence on Sunday morning by Dr Holdcroft assisted by Dr. Wade of Hastings.

Rev. John Bennet Anderson of Brooklyn delighted the congregation at St. John's church at both services on Sunday when he delivered very interesting sermons that were greatly appreciated. On Wednesday evening he will deliver a lecture in the opera house and a large number will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this able and convincing speaker. Rev H. Caplan, pastor of this parish, preached at Brooklyn in the place of Mr. Anderson.

Mr Chas. Harrington is very seriously ill.

Mr. Reggie Barlow who was lately operated on for appendicitis is able to be around again.

The infant daughter, Catherine, of Mr and Mrs Reggie Brennan of town died on Sunday after a short illness. The funeral took place to the Roman Catholic cemetery at Norwood on Monday morning. The sympathy of their many friends is extended to the bereaved parents.

Anti-Suffrage

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—As a woman I protest against women having votes. We are not fit to manage public business. Women are inferior to men in mind and ability, and it will not do them any good, indeed it will do them harm, to entice them into a false estimation of their rights. Women were made to raise and train the young and nothing more. Voting for women is a nuisance, and I hope will never come to pass. I am sure I do not want to vote.

PROGRAMME OF GREAT MERIT

Given at Social Evening of Clan Alpine Camp, Sons of Scotland

The Sons of Scotland, Clan Alpine Camp, No. 36, with a number of their friends spent a most enjoyable social time last evening in the Knights of Pythias hall. A programme of high merit was given and each number was received with the greatest applause.

During the evening Mr G N Gordon gave an address on the objects of the society, setting forth the advantages to be gained by a young man joining the Sons of Scotland.

The programme rendered was as follows:

Chairman's address, Dr. McKinnon,
Pipe selection, Mr T S Mackay.
Vocal solo, Mr John Barr.
Comic song, Mr F J Macpherson.
Scotch song, Mr J J Galbraith.
Banjo selection, Mr J Reid.
Comic solo, Mr. T S Mackay.
Comic song, Mr Kennedy.
Vocal solo, Mr Wilson.
Comic song, Mr. Reid.
Recitation, Mr Allan.
Vocal solo, Mr John Barr.

A vote of thanks was tendered the committee in charge of the affair and all those who contributed to the programme.

The evening was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne.

GEORGE STREET EPWORTH LEAGUE

The Epworth League of George st. Methodist church met last evening and had a social time. Mr. W. McCann occupied the chair. Conundrums formed part of the programme. Miss Josephine Callander gave a vocal and Harold Brown an instrumental solo. A dialogue was given by several members of Fairview Epworth League in which Messrs. Laurence and Allin and Misses Hall, Allin and Deyell took part.

The arrangements for the evening were in charge of Mr. N. Allison and Miss Ethel McWhinnie.

MISS HALLIGHAN'S FINE VOCALISM

Will Again Sing "To-night" at Production of "All the Comforts of Home" on Friday Evening

Miss Lavina Hallighan, the talented young soprano has recovered from her recent illness and on Friday night next will be able to sing for a second time to a Peterborough audience Zardon "Tonight" in 'All the Comforts of Home," in the Grand Opera House. The leading musical critics of this city and some acknowledged critics from outside cities considered Miss Hallighan's rendering of this number among the greatest singing that they had ever heard. Her artistic acting, together with the remarkable voice she possesses should carry her far in the domain of music.

CHARITY BOARD HELD MEETING

Is Preparing for the Winter's Work—Report From Relief Officer

A meeting of the Charity Board was held last night when Relief Agent Miller made his report of the several persons who had been assisted. One case of particular interest is that of a woman whose children are suffering from typhoid fever. First one of the older daughters acted as nurse. Now she has been taken down, and the family is in a bad way, as the lady herself has to go out to work in order to support her family. It was suggested that a nurse be sent to the woman's home, but the Board decided to leave the matter in the hands of the Relief Officer.

WINTER'S WOOD.

The Mayor received and read a letter from Mr. W. A. Anderson, offering to sell the Charity Board 100 cords of first-class cordwood at $3.50 per cord. The Board got the wood last year from Mr. Anderson at $5.30 per cord and it proved to be very satisfactory. The price quoted this year is a little higher, but it is doubtful if the Board will be able to get wood any cheaper this year. However, the Mayor and Ald. Buller will look around and see if they can get wood any cheaper.

HORSE WANTED.

Relief Agent Miller took the opportunity of notifying the several aldermen present that all summer he has been unable to secure the use of the city teams as had been the custom previously. The cost the past month for teaming hardwood for the Charity Board had been $12. They paid 40 cents per half cord, and if they had to continue or pay for teaming they would either have to have a larger grant or do less work.

The aldermen present stated that they would see the Board of Works and thought that the matter could be fixed up all right.

DOCTORS SAID "CUT OFF!"

"The only thing I can do now is to take the finger completely off. It cannot otherwise be cured." So said one of the leading doctors of Toronto to Mr. W. C. Edwards, P.D.C.R.A.O.F., P.G.M.I.O.O.F., the well-known Friendly Society leader, of Peter Street, Toronto. Almost a year before, Mr. Edwards cut the middle finger of his left hand very badly and blood poison ensued. For two months the doctor had been treating him, but no good had resulted, and this was the final decision. A fifty-cent box of Zam-Buk saved Mr. Edwards from life-long mutilation which $500 would not have compensated him for. He says: "The blood poison from the finger spread up my hand and arm and caused me terrible agony. After months' treatment the doctor said there was no cure, and amputation would have to take place if I intended to save the arm. My hand, at that time, was all swollen up and discolored, and I had to carry it in a sling. I left that doctor and consulted another.

After a few weeks' treatment he also told me that operation would be necessary, and the finger would have to be opened so that the bone could be scraped.

I went away to consider when I would have the operation performed, and met a friend who advised me to try Zam-Buk. That night I bathed the wound and put on some Zam-Buk. I got a little sleep for the first time for many nights. In the morning the wound began to bleed instead of the foul discharging as in the past. This was a healthy sign so I went on with the Zam-Buk. Well, to cut a long story short, in a few days I put away the sling and in a few weeks the finger was healed completely. To-day that finger is as sound as a bell and I owe it to Zam-Buk."

A WORD TO WIVES

Wives and mothers should know that Zam-Buk is the finest, safest and surest healer yet known. It is a herbal balm which acts like magic in healing sores, cuts, poisoned wounds, cracked hands, chapped places, cold sores, eczema, ulcers, festering sores and all skin diseases. So pure is it that it can be applied to the delicate skin of babes, and yet so powerful that chronic wounds are closed and cured by it. It soothes the pain of piles and stops the bleeding. It is highly antiseptic. A box of Zam-Buk is as good as a medicine chest, so many uses it fulfils. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

REVIVAL OF WRESTLING IN PETERBOROUGH

The art of wrestling has developed rapidly in Peterborough during the past year. The sport dates back to hoary antiquity, with its contests great and small preserved in poetry and legend when gladiators and athletes of all ages were called upon to match their science and strength.

CONTESTS OF OTHER DAYS.

Throughout the past many records can be found of contests of wrestling. The Olympic games, the revival of which dates from 776 B.C., are directly responsible for bringing wrestling to such note in Greek history. These games, as is well known, were held every four years at Olympia, where was situated the most famous temple of Jupiter; wrestling was first introduced into them sixty-eight years earlier in the 18th Olympiad. Professionalism was unknown in these days, for the prize to the successful competitor consisted of a mere crown made from wild olive branches of trees which grew within the sacred enclosure. The most successful wrestler at the games of whom we have record was the famous Milo, who is credited of winning six Olympic crowns. In recent years discoveries have been made in the old tombs of Egypt, which would make it appear that wrestling existed in that country even previous to the famous Greek period, and that the style in days long gone by was not so very different from the present day style of "catch-as-catch-can."

WRESTLED FOR A KINGDOM.

In India, China and Japan wrestling has been practiced for thousands of years. Regular contests are still carried on in Tokio, where superannuated wrestlers generally act as umpires, but before Christ came to earth many hard battles were decided. In the year 858, A.D. it is on record that the throne of Japan was wrestled for. The Emperor, Buntaku, had two sons, both of whom after his death, claimed the throne, so after much wrangling they decided to wrestle for it and Koreshito being proclaimed the victor, ascended in his father's stead.

In England, too, the art of wrestling began to be practiced at an early date. The most famous bout of the early days was undoubtedly that between the monarchs of France and England, when Henry VIII. and Francis I. had a contest for surpemacy. The account of this royal encounter seems to differ greatly, but but the fact that persons of so exalted a rank engaged in a bout is the highest honor that can be given to wrestling in the 16th century. Much might be said of English wrestling. The champions have been many, and each locality took great interest in following the doings of its own leaders.

THE VARIOUS STYLES.

In America catch-as-catch-can wrestling is now the most popular style and is considered to be far more scientific than the European. It has been tried out and proved that it can hold its own even against the terrible Jui-Jitsu.

England claims to be the originator of catch-as-catch-can wrestling, or as it is termed, "The Lancashire style." When the French wrestlers crossed the channel they did not have much difficulty in overcoming the English wrestlers in the Graeco-Roman, a style in which the wrestler is not allowed to grasp or trip his opponent below the waist, and which requires brute strength rather than science. The English form of wrestling practiced some years ago, was generally known as the "Cumberland and Westmoreland," in which both men take a waist hold, and when a knee touches the ground or a wrestler releases his hold, it is a fall against him.

The late George Steadman was the greatest wrestler at this time, and the French champions soon came to grief when pitted against him, so it was thought better to combine the two styles, from which decision really dates the beginning of catch-as-catch-can wrestling.

A SPLENDID EXERCISE.

The wrestling art has certainly conferred many favors on the human race. As an unfailing aid to health and longevity and a developer of every muscle there are few better exercises. Men are competing to-day in professional wrestling who were before the public twenty and even thirty years ago, and a man may remain very near at the head of his profession until he reaches fifty years of age. George Bothner, the world's greatest lightweight, has passed his fortieth year, and yet in appearance he looks no more than a man of twenty-five. Jack Carkeek and "Farmer" Burns, (Gotch's seconds in his his match with Hackenschmidt), Dan McLeod and Tom Jenkins have all passed their fortieth year and are still in the game, and even the well-known Tom Cannon, of England, now nigh upon his 60th year, is still wrestling.

Thus it can be seen that among nations, ancient and modern, wrestling has held a place, and has had its growth with civilization; that in countries in which the highest civilization was reached, it had its golden day; and that it has been especially engaged in by freedom-loving people. That it shall again occupy the important place given it by the Greeks is devoutedly to be wished, and it may be no distant dream.

Amateur wrestling is undoubtedly one of the cleverest, healthiest and most scientific games in the category of athletics. Dangerous and punishment holds are barred, and an amateur to win must have speed and science. The bouts only last six minutes, and it will be seen by this that the wrestlers have no time to waste in employing questionable tactics, which might be used to advantage in a hard, gruelling contest. By the rules of the amateur game it is not necessary to obtain a fall to win the match, but the man who does the best work, in other words, who outpoints his opponent, gets the decision. Thus speed and science and the legitimate use of strength are requisite, and rough methods are entirely discouraged. Amateur is not nearly so dangerous as hockey, football, lacrosse or rugby, and excels any of these in the matter of body building and teaching a man how to think and act quickly, for the dull man can't be a success at either amateur or professional wrestling.

In Peterborough the amateur game has been encouraged, and in fact one might almost say, inaugurated from a systematic standpoint, by Mr. S. W. Collings, the physical director of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Collings has a flourishing class of beginners, who are taking an enthusiastic interest in the game, and promise to develop into clever amateur mat men. It is the intention of the instructor of the class to run off a tournament, in which local Y.M.C.A. wrestlers will compete and the tourney will be looked forward to with considerable interest.

Amateur wrestling, on account of its exceptional value as a physical exercise, and from the fact that it is a clever and exhillarating sport, should receive the general endorsation and support of the public.

GAME LIKELY IN PETERBORO'

Sudden Death Junior O. R. F. U. Match Between Lindsay and Kingston

After having a wait of about 10 days the rugby team will, it is expected, meet the Kingston strong team on Saturday next in a sudden death game at Peterborough.

The game should prove very interesting as both team sare standing now as champions of the own district. The Kingston team this year is spoken of as being one of the strongest junior teams ever held by that city. The local Greys are well prepared for them, and will keep them hustling for the winning points with the pigskin.

If the game takes place at Peterborough Saturday next, the Lindsay etam will run a special G.T.R. train down to the Quaker town at 2 o'clock sharp.—Lindsay Free Press.

ALL AFTER EDMUNDS

All sorts of challenges are being hurled at Artie Edmunds, who meets Eugene Tremblay, the lightweight championship wrestler, at Riverdale roller rink on Friday night. The latter is from Young Roeber, the New York, York, and New England States lightweight champion.

The letter says:

"Will match [illegible] against you, best two in three falls, catch-as-catch-can, for $[illegible] a side, and gate receipts. The [illegible] is to be barred.

Morris Harnett.
New York Police Gazette.

Eldes Tremblay's knee is all right as shown by the fact that he tossed Cyclone Mack, the Irish Champion, at Montreal, in straight falls. It was a real, scrappy go, too, according to the Montreal papers.—Toronto Star.

PETERBORO' TEN PIN LEAGUE WAS FORMED LAST NIGHT

At Meeting of Peterborough Bowling Club—The Officers Were Elected—Season Opens Next Monday Night

The Peterborough Ten Pin League was formally launched at a meeting held at the P.B.C. last evening with the following strong list of officers:

Hon. President—Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Hon. Vice-President—Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.

President—Mr. R. M. Glover.

Vice-President—Mr. C. W. Gutterson.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. H. Martin.

Executive Committee—Messrs. Hemstead, Lang, McIlroy, Wareham and G. Lasher.

Schedule Committee—Messrs. Delafosse, Lang and Martin.

Official scorer and foul line judge—Mr. Adams.

The ten teams mentioned yesterday were represented and all expressed a willingness to open the season as soon as possible. This number may be increased to twelve befor ethe schedule starts, by the addition of a team captained by Lew McCarroll and a trio from the T.A.S.

It was decided to open the season on Monday night next with two games and thereafter throughout the season one game will be played each night, each team being called upon to play one game a week. Valuable individual prizes will be given to the members of the winning team, to the bowler having the highest single score for the season, the holder of the high average, and the bowler holding the record for three consecutive games during the season.

The foul line rule will be enforced and in every way league affairs will be arranged so as to conform with the regulations of the National Bowling Congress.

The teams will be of the three men variety and the various captains must register the names of their players by Friday night. Teams are limited to five men, thus allowing for two substitutes.

Another meeting will be held on Wednesday night when the schedule will be arranged and other necessary details completed.

BEN SIMPSON IS INJURED

Star Half Back of Hamilton Tigers Had Knee Hurt in Ottawa-Hamilton Game

Kingston, Nov. 16.—Ben Simpson, the star half-back of the Hamilton Tigers, was pretty badly used up in Saturday's game. One kick he received was in the chest, and after the game, it caused much worry. Three doctors examined Simpson, and were of the opinion that the chest bone was splintered. If this is so, Simpson will have to cease playing for the rest of the season.

O.H.A. OFFICERS BY ACCLAMATION

All But Executive for Which There are Six Candidates, Four to be Elected

The Toronto Telegram says;—The nominations for the Ontario Hockey Association closed Saturday night. All the officers go by acclamation except the executive, and there are only six candidates for that with four to be elected. The only change in the list of officers is in the election of R. E. A. Moody, of Toronto, to the treasurership, made vacant by the removal of Dr. McPherson, to Peterborough. The full list that will go to the annual meeting next Saturday at the Temple building at 9 a.m. is;—

President, Dwight J. Turner, Toronto, re-elected.

Past President, D. L. Darroch, Calgary.

Life Member, J. Ross Robinson, Toronto.

C. A. A. U. Governor, Francis Nelson, Toronto, re-elected.

Secretary, W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, re-elected.

Executive, four to be elected, Chas. E. Farquharson, Stratford; W. P. Irving London; Norman Rule, Collingwood; John Hanley, Midland; John Dyment, Barrie; Bert Short, Toronto.

LOCALS AND CENTRAL Y

Fast Basketball Game at Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium on Saturday Nov. 28th

The basketball game of the local season will be played at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium on Saturday evening, November 28th, when a team selected from the fast players of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. quintettes, will meet the crack Central Y.M.C.A. team of Toronto.

Peterborough has splendid material to select from and the game has come in for a lot of consideration here this year. The local team will no doubt be very fast and the clever Queen City aggregation will have to travel at a lively clip to win from them. The game will start at 8.15 sharp.

SPORTING TALK

The Ottawa papers say that the officials robbed Ottawa of the match at Kingston on Saturday. This is as expected. Ottawa is stronger on the squealing game than at playing football.

It is almost anassured thing that Lindsay will have an intermediate team in the O.H.A. this year, and it is jes' possible that a junior team will be entered in the O.H.A. — Lindsay Warder.

BURNS-JOHNSON FIGHT DEC. 26th

Several local fight fans have requested the Review to give the exact date, of the Johnson-Burns fight, as several contradictory reports have been circulated regarding the date on which the men will meet.

The fight will take place in Sydney, Australia, on December 26th, starting at three o'clock in the afternoon, which is about seven o'clock Christmas day here, and the result should be known around town about midnight, as the fight, if it goes the limit, twenty rounds, will not last over an hour and a half. Burns will pull down $30,000 win, lose or draw, and Johnson will receive $5,500, no matter which way the battle goes. In a cable to the New York World, Burns says that he will lace the nigger good, and expects to make him quite cold if there is any yellow in him. Johnson has sold his interests in the moving pictures for $500 to Hugh McIntosh, promoter of the fight, while Burns retains his interest in them.

ROLLER RINK WILL BE WARM AND COMFORTABLE FOR BOUT

Every facility for good accommodation at the Burridge-Fitzpatrick bout has been made by the management. The roller rink, where it will be held has good heating equipment, and the building will be made warm and comfortable for the patrons of the match. On account of the fact that it could be heated, the roller rink was given the preference over the Brock street rink.

As a preliminary it is being endeavored to secure a six round boxing bout, and as stated in last night's Review, Young Hackenschmidt offers to throw any ten men in Peterborough, Hurtubise barred, in 20 minutes. He also holds out an offer of a dollar a minute to anyone staying with him. Hurtubise is also excepted in this proposition.

HAROLD PARSONS, WESTERN DISTANCE MAN, RETURNS HOME AFTER VISIT HERE

Mr. Harold Parsons, who ran third in the Hamilton Herald road race, left for his home in Western Canada this morning after a pleasant visit with Mrs. G. Parsons, McDonnel street. Parsons made an excellent run, and before the race was picked by many to win, in fact, he was quite a favorite for first place among the close followers of distance running. Simpson overtook him when he looked good for second place.

The western runner is one of the leading distance men of Canada, and still has hopes of landing first place in Canada's first road classic—the Hamilton Herald race. He expresses himself as somewhat disappointed in being beaten out by Holmor and Simpson, but nevertheless congratulations are due him for his splendid showing. Mr. Parsons enjoyed his visit in this city very much.

BOWLING LEAGUE FOR THE Y.M.C.A.

One Will be Formed—A Prize Will be Given Monthly

A meeting of the physical committee of the YMCA. was held last night and the formation of a bowling league was sanctioned by the committee.

A league which will be for members of the association will be formed and all men wishing to form a team will kindly leave their names at the "Y" office at once.

A prize will be given monthly to the bowler making the highest score.

RUGBY

SIMPSON IN BAD SHAPE.

Kingston, Nov. 16—Doctors who examined "Ben" Simpson, the Tigers' half back, are of the opinion that his chest bone was splintered during the game here and if this is the case, he is likely to be out of the game for the rest of the season. He was tackled pretty roughly during the engagement. The pain in his chest caused him much concern after the game was over.

HOCKEY

Dick Baker is Trainer

Canadian Kodak Hockey Club held an enthusiastic meeting at their office, King street west, Monday evening and decided to enter a team in the Intermediate OHA. The prospects are very bright for a fast team.

The following officers were elected:

Pres., R. F. Pumnett.
Secretary, W. M. Oulster.
Treasurer, Jas. W. Spence.
Manager, Ernest Smith.
Assistant Manager, W. F. Todd.
Trainer, Dick Baker.

Ridpath in Pittsburg

Pittsburg, Nov. 16—With great glee the West Penn. Hockey League announces that Bruce Ridpath, the famous Toronto forward, has been secured for the Banker team, and that he will be in the game tomorrow night against DAC. Alf Smith has been after Ridpath for some time, and declares him to be one of the most wonderful players ever turned out by Canada.

Pittsburg hockey writers are now busily engaged in explaining hockey rules and defending some rulings made by Roy Schooley, the Toronto man who is in charge of the big garden this year. On Saturday night, Schooley called the puck back because Garnet Sixsmith was loafing offside. There was a great howl, because the player had not touched the puck, and the Pittsburg crowd is not yet educated to the fact that a player can be offside when ahead of the puck, that is when the puck is between himself and the goal he is defending. There is also a lot of talk about disciplining MacKay and others for lying down on the ice in front of his goal.

There is a great drive in books on hockey now and the Pittsburg public is earning slowly the great game.

ECHOES FROM THE COUNTRY.

Me'n maw are home again;
  We wus two weeks away.
Great snakes! what a time we had
  At the Fair Grounds every day.
We had a ride on that finnicky thing
  That swings you 'round and 'round,
Until your stomach feels, oh! so queer
  'N your heart begins to pound.

We got aboard a rickety boat,
  'N they drawed us up a hill;
Then down we went with an awful splash.
  Maw said her heart stood still.
Lan' sakes! I can't begin to tell
  You all the things we saw,
But I know I felt so nervous
  That I clung to my old maw.

You city folks have lots of things
  That we'uns never see.
But then I guess you've never been
  To a good old huskin' bee.
We husk the corn, 'n then we dance
  Upon the old barn floor,
Come out to see both me 'n maw,
  'N then I'll tell you more.

GREAT NAMES OF WEST.

Capt James Cook Is One of Canada's Forgotten Pioneers.

Many great names are associated with the Canadian West, and some of them, it is gratifying to note, are preserved in our geography—such as Vancouver, Mackenzie and Fraser. Back of these is the name of another great man of whom it is, perhaps, not too much to say that he began the work of painting the map red—a work which in our own day has been carried on by such men as Kitchener and Roberts. That man was Captain James Cook, one of Britain's greatest navigators. It is just one hundred and thirty years this summer since he coasted the western shores of what is now British Columbia, going as far north as Icy Cape on the inside of Behring Strait. Captain Cook's origin was humble enough. He was the son of a Yorkshire farm laborer and at the age of thirteen was apprenticed to a haberdasher in a small village near Whitby. But he soon escaped from behind the counter and went to sea. In 1775, the year in which began the war that led to the conquest of Canada, and the year in which the British force led by Braddock and Washington was almost annihilated by the French at the spot where Pittsburg, Pa., now stands, Cook entered the royal navy as "an able seaman," but four years later he was a master. During the next ten years he was engaged in surveying about the Lower St. Lawrence and the shores of Newfoundland, and the results of his work as embodied in his sailing directory are of value even at the present time. Then he was sent into a broader field, circumnavigated the globe, explored the South Pacific, and coasted along the western shores of British North America. That was in 1778. In the following January he took his ships to the Sandwich Islands. There a small boat belonging to one of his ships was stolen by natives and when Cook, with a small party of sailors, landed to recover it, they were set upon by natives and Cook was clubbed and stabbed to death. Part of his body was recovered and buried, and in 1874 a monument was erected where he felled.

The Long Lived Pear.

The pear is really more hardy than the apple and needs less cosseting. There are trees still standing near Monroe, in the state of Michigan, which were planted by the French settlers before Penn founded Philadelphia. Pear trees can be kept in good bearing condition for 300 years and apples for at least 150 years. I have an apple tree 115 years old and its annual fruitage is as perfect as it was sixty years ago.—E. P. Powell in Outing Magazine.

Woman's World

MRS. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

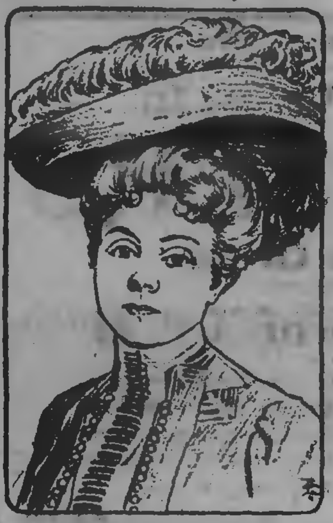
Women have recently occupied more of the public attention in connection with political conventions than ever before, and along with the history of each candidate or man of political prominence has been told the story of his womankind. As the best men of the country are making a study of politics from the scientific point of view, so women are studying those phases of government that appeal to them. A student of this sort is Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew, who is interested in the picturesque features of the French salon, as that of Mme. Rambouillet, where the French academy had its birth. It is predicted that the first American salon may be presided over by Mrs. Depew, who declares that it only depends on the attitude of the women at Washington, whether residence is a joy instead of a bore.

The wife of the senator from New York is the descendant of a long line of beautiful women famous in France and in America for their wit and charm.

Mrs. Samuel Hermann, Mrs. Depew's maternal grandmother, was the stateliest woman of her day when she reigned as a belle in New Orleans. Her mother, the beautiful Clemence Viel, was a Frenchwoman, married to Pierre de Buys, a wit and bon vivant.



MRS. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

Mrs. Hermann's daughters, the oldest of whom was Mrs. Depew's mother, were known as "the three beautiful Hermann girls" of New Orleans.

Mrs. Samuel Hermann retained her beauty to old age, or, rather, she was a woman who never grew old.

At a reception once where she chaperoned her daughters a distinguished foreign diplomat asked her if she were related to the three splendid Hermann sisters, of whom he heard so much.

"A cousin, I imagine," he said.

"No, only the mother of the three," smiled Mrs. Hermann, who had the greatest difficulty in convincing the gentleman that this was true.

The history of the family in this country dates back about a hundred years. Captain Viel was a French naval officer stationed in Santo Domingo. In an uprising of the natives there he and his three sons were killed.

Clemence Viel, his handsome daughter, was brought to New Orleans and there married Pierre de Buys. Eugenie de Buys, the eldest daughter, married Samuel Hermann. After his death she removed to California with her daughters.

Another of the Misses Hermann married a Mr. Peyton of the old Virginia family of that name, and the third married Henry Palmer of New York, the father of Senator Depew's wife.

Rugs From Old Rags.

When one looks upon the lovely hand woven rugs in soft shades of pinks and blues and all the brilliant colors of the rainbow it seems almost incredible that these beautiful works of art are but the productions of waste rags and the contents of many a woman's rag bag.

While the past generation of industrious housewives considered nothing was equal to woolen rags for a material for braided or woven rugs, the "log cabin" or "John Alden" rugs of the present day are mostly made from cotton rags dyed in the most beautiful and artistic colorings. At various blind institutions a specialty is made of the blind woven rugs, and others are taken at so much per yard.

Beautiful portieres are made from silk pieces and woven in the same manner. One single portiere made in this style was marked at $12. It was very durable and pretty, and the colors were beautifully blended [illegible]

Another rug which was recently seen and which was especially soft and attractive was made from a discarded ingrain carpet.

The colors were bright green and dark brown, and the effect was very artistic. This rug was woven on the looms used for manufacturing rugs from old carpets. Many an old tapestry, brussels or ingrain carpet which formerly fell to the junk dealer's possession is now being converted into dainty rugs to adorn the owner's home.

His Wife's Mean Trick.

"It's strange, strange, strange, that I can't find a thing or keep a thing in this house," said Mr. Podmore the other day. "It's all because of your loose, slack, unsystematic way of keeping house, Mrs. Podmore."

"What is it now, dear?"

"Don't dear me, but help me to find my hat. I hung it on the hall rack when I came in."

"Why, Henry"—

"Don't stand there staring at me in that idiotic way, but help me to find that hat. I suppose I must wear my new hat, and it's raining like fury."

"Henry Podmore, will you listen?"

"No; I'll not. When a man lays down his hat and can't find it"—

"Henry, that hat is on your head."

"What! Who put it there? This is some trick. I'd take my oath before any court in the land."

"Nonsense!"

"It's not nonsense! It's as true as that I live and stand before you a tormented, worried, harassed man who is ridiculed and made the victim of some mean, low trick in his own house every day. You'll hear more about this when I get home."

Then he rushed out, slamming the door after him.

A Dress Artist's Reply.

A Chicago woman standing on the Hamburg-American line's pier, with four trunkfuls of French gowns, told a reporter a story about the late M. Paquin.

"A New York lady," she said, "once ventured to remonstrate with Paquin because he had charged her $700 for a ball dress.

"'The material,' she said, 'could be bought for $100, and surely the work would be well paid with $50 more.'

"'Madame,' said Paquin, with his grandest air, 'go to your American painter, Sargent, in his little Tite street studio and say to him: "Here is a yard of canvas, value 50 cents, and here are colors, value $4. Paint me a picture with these colors on this canvas, and I will pay you $1.75." What will the painter say? He will say, "Madame, those are no terms for an artist." I say more. I say if you think my terms are too high pay me nothing and keep the robe. Art does not descend to the littleness of haggling.'"

Sleep With Windows Open.

A famous doctor said recently, "It is safe to say that the breathing of bad air produces, directly or indirectly, more disease, especially among the poor, than all other influences combined."

If that be so, how foolish for us to go on groaning and paying doctors' bills when the remedy is at hand, with no greater effort than to shove up windows at every excuse.

We hear a lot about the open air cure, but most of us seem to think that unless we adopt it with all its frills of fully equipped sleeping porches or lean-tos on some breezy mountain top there is nothing in it for us.

Few of us can sleep out of doors, but all of us can bring out of doors into our sleeping rooms. It is only a matter of wide opened windows and getting over an inherited dread of drafts.

Marshmallow Fudge.

To make a very toothsome candy go by the following recipe:

Use two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of cream. Put this in a saucepan and heat. Add two squares of grated chocolate and boil until it hardens when dropped into cold water.

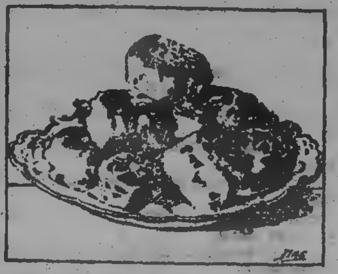
Before it is done add a tablespoon of butter. Do not put it in all at once, but a little at a time. Then put in the marshmallows, half a pound of them, crushing and stirring with a spoon.

Add the other half pound after the candy is taken from the fire. Pour it into buttered pans and when nearly [illegible]

CURRANT BUNS.

A Delicious Bread For Luncheon or Supper.

To make currant buns mix a cake of compressed yeast with one-fourth cupful of lukewarm water and add to it a cupful of scalded milk cooled to a lukewarm temperature. Add also about a cup and a half of white flour and beat until the batter is very smooth, then cover and let stand in a warm place to become very light.



CURRANT BUNS GLAZED WITH SUGAR.

Then add half a cupful of currants, half a cupful of sugar, one beaten egg, one teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth cupful of melted shortening. Mix thoroughly, then beat in enough flour to make a soft dough. About two cupfuls will be needed. Let this stand to become light, then roll into a sheet and into rounds. Bake when about doubled in bulk from thirty to forty minutes. Stir a teaspoonful of cornstarch with cold water to a smooth liquid consistency, then pour on boiling water. Let it cook five minutes and use it to baste the tops of the rolls. Dredge them thickly with granulated sugar and return them to the oven to glaze.

CARE OF THE EYES.

It Is Bad to Read on a Railroad Train When In Motion.

Never rub the eyes, for this practice causes inflammation of the lids, and, however beautiful the expression, if the eyes are red or without lashes they lose their charm.

When a foreign substance gets into the eye do not irritate it by trying to force it out. Keep the eye closed for a few moments or until the object is removed by the tears which will flow. If, however, it is impossible to remove the substance yourself, have some one who will perform the operation carefully remove it for you.

If the wind has reddened the eyelids, wash them in slightly salted warm water, using common salt.

However strong the eyes may be, give them a little rest after a few hours' continuous use. Never force them to gaze at minute objects when they are weak. Neither write, read nor sew when the light is dim. During all continuous work close the eyes from time to time at intervals.

Great care should be taken that the light should fall from the side, not full in the face. When working it should be allowed to fall upon the left side.

It is bad to read on a railway train, in a carriage, while walking, while lying down or while physically tired.

Beds should not be so placed that the eyes receive the full rays of sunlight on awakening. The light should fall from the side.

A very good wash that will strengthen the sight and restore its powers is made of one pint of soft water, a pinch of common salt and a spoonful of brandy.

A Deadener of Pain.

Iodine is an excellent deadener of pain. In cases of toothache, painting the gum, taking care not to swallow any of it, because it is poison, will frequently relieve pain. It will ease the ache of rheumatism if applied to the sore joint and is recommended for use on a painful corn.

Menthol cologne is one of the best simple applications for a headache. The combination of burning sensation and coolness that it gives the skin is very refreshing. An eye wash of boracic acid and camphor that is put up by all druggists should be in every traveling outfit, for the eyes suffer great strain from light and heat and need special attention. A few drops of this compound dropped on the eyeballs after a journey or at night will have a most soothing effect and may even prevent a headache.

Soap Economy.

Bits of soap should never be flung away, but placed in a glass or china jar until a number have been accumulated. They should then be dissolved in boiling water into soap jelly, which may be used for various purposes. That made from the jar reserved for toilet soaps may be used for the bath, and that from kitchen and laundry soaps may be used for laundry purposes. Care should be taken to see that every bit of soap added to the jar is clean. It is by no means an uncommon thing to see soap looking anything but attractively clean.

Women Out of Business World.

Hamilton Mabie is reported as having said that he did not think the present industrial age, in which women take part in the work of the world, will last a century. Nor did he think it desirable that it should. He did not tell what he thought would replace this industrial age nor what is to recompense the women for the pleasures they will miss when they shall have some one else to work for them.

The Smile Wins.

Don't expect life to smile at you unless you smile first. Don't expect to have a friendly hand extended to you unless you look as if the hand would be appreciated. The girl with a smile will outstrip her sullen sister every time.

THE BOOK BORROWER.

How Collectors Have Circumvented a Wicked Type.

The book borrower is the sworn foe of the book collector, and many stories are told of the plans adopted by the latter to defend his treasures from the assaults of the borrower. Especially is the collector opposed to the unfeeling wretch who borrows one volume out of a series and forgets to return it. This was one of Coleridge's weaknesses and was so pronounced that Lamb described him as "a maker of odd volumes." The late J. Whitefoord MacKenzie, a well known collector, once told the present writer that when any one asked him for the loan of a single volume out of a set he always replied that he would rather lend him the whole ten, fifteen or twenty volumes of the series than have them left as odd volumes on his hands. William Roberts, the renowned bibliophile, tells in "The Book Hunter In London" that the bookplate of a certain French collector bore this text from the parable of the ten virgins: "Go rather to them that sell and buy for yourselves." "Sir," said a man of wit to an acquaintance who lamented the difficulty which he found in persuading his friends to return the volumes that he had lent them—"sir, your acquaintances find, I suppose, that it is much more easy to retain the books themselves than what is contained in them."

An ingenious plan to limit book borrowing is told by J. Ashby Sterry. In all the books of a certain cunning book collector he had the price written in plain figures. When any one asked him for the loan of a book he invariably replied, "Yes, with pleasure," and, looking in the volume, further added, "I see the price of this work is £2 17s. 6d" (or whatever it might happen to be). "You may take it at this figure, which will, of course, be refunded when the volume is returned." Sir Walter Scott's plan was ingenious. When he lent a book from his library he put in its place a wooden block bearing the name of the borrower and the date of the loan. Many were the anathemas leveled by collectors against those who would borrow or steal their volumes. Sometimes these were macaronic rhymes written by students—as, for example, the following, which was inscribed upon a Latin book used in Aberdeen university:

> Si quisquis furetur
>   This little Libellum
> Per Phoebem, per Jovem
>   I'll kill him, I'll fell him;
> In ventrem illis
>   I'll stick my scalpellum
> And teach him to steal
>   My little Libellum.

In the library of a famous Glasgow collector there was recently the copy of Scott's "Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border" which belonged at one time to William Motherwell and in which the poet had inscribed the following verse:

> William Motherwell says the work is his.
>   Who shall gainsay him?
> He that dares do it
>   May the meikle deil flay him!

Even more violent denunciations were written against the book stealer in the sixteenth century, when books were more precious than now. Yet even the modern poet finds it needful to anathematize politely:

> To the lost books my fancy clings;
>   O'er them my memory grovels.
> I swear in spirit when I see
>   The gaps among the novels.
> The Thackeray I "loved and lost"
>   I mourn with sorrow tender.
> Whoever has it also has
>   The curses of the lender.

The lady (Bessie Craigmyle) who wrote these lines expresses her gratitude for the fact that "no one borrows poets," though that is not the opinion of Charles Sayle, who thus threatens the possible thief of "The Marriage of Cupid and Psyche:"

> Cursed be he who robs me of this book,
>   With all his race. Let it be desolate

This is as comprehensive a curse as that which overtook the fated "Jackdaw of Rheims"—and as ineffectual.—Dundee Advertiser.

When men wrestle with God something good will always come out of it. The few hours that Jacob spent with the angel by the river side were better than all the years he spent in Padanaram. The long vigils with God are always the places of power.

COOLING DESSERTS.

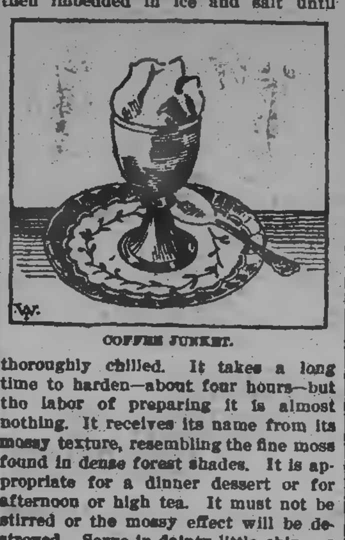
The sooner a housewife realizes the fact that it takes no longer to put together and freeze a quart of ice cream or mousse than it does to mix and watch a pudding steaming away over a hot fire and that the result this time of the year is more acceptable and wholesome the use of the ice cream freezer will become an everyday affair.

A mousse is frozen without even being stirred. It is simply whipped cream flavored to taste packed into a mold, then imbedded in ice and salt until thoroughly chilled. It takes a long time to harden—about four hours—but the labor of preparing it is almost nothing. It receives its name from its mossy texture, resembling the fine moss found in dense forest shades. It is appropriate for a dinner dessert or for afternoon or high tea. It must not be stirred or the mossy effect will be destroyed. Serve in dainty little china or glass cups.

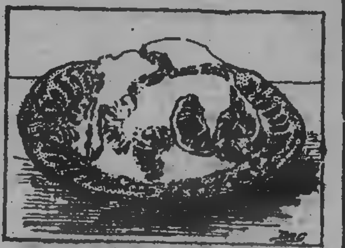


COFFEE JUNKET.

Pineapple Mousse.—Place in a saucepan two cupfuls of grated pineapple, one cupful of sugar and a half cupful of water and simmer five minutes. Add the juice of a half lemon. Take from the fire and cool. Have ready a pint of cream, whipped stiff; add to the pineapple mixture, then pack in a mold and let stand in salt and ice mixture for three or four hours.

Cherry Mousse.—This may be made of the fresh fruit mashed to a pulp or of chopped candied cherries. For the latter cook together until it threads a cupful each of sugar and water. When it reaches the threading stage pour slowly over the whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff froth. When cold fold in a pint of cream whipped stiff, then add the candied cherries, a teaspoonful of almond flavoring and a tablespoonful of sherry. Pack in covered mold, then in ice and salt.

Coffee Junket.—This is a quickly made, delicious sweet. Take a pint of fresh milk. Reserve one gill, which bring to boiling point and pour over a tablespoonful of coarsely ground coffee. Allow this to infuse for ten or fifteen minutes. Strain, sweeten and add to the remainder of the milk. Warm gently to blood heat, taking care that it does not get really hot, or the junket will not set. Remove from the fire, add a teaspoonful of prepared rennet, stir and pour at once into custard glasses or into a dish if preferred. If glasses are used, fill them only two-thirds full. Leave in a warm place till set. Then whip some cream, sweeten and flavor with a little vanilla. Place a spoonful or two on the top of each glass and serve.



ORANGE SPONGE.

Orange Sponge.—Melt an ounce of leaf gelatin in a little boiling water, sweeten the orange juice to taste with lump sugar which has been rubbed on the peel of the oranges and add the melted gelatin. Beat the whites of three eggs till very stiff and gradually beat them in with the orange juice. Beat for about four or five minutes. Oil the inside of a plain mold, line it with sections of the orange and pour the sponge mixture gently in. Keep in a cool place till serving time and then unmold and serve with a custard sauce made from the yolks of the eggs.

Should Have Plenty of Air.

When an unwashable garment has just been taken off never put it into the wardrobe until it has been aired for an hour or so. Clothing which has been worn a long time if not aired properly contracts most disagreeable odors.

Air and sunshine have disinfecting qualities which are purifying, and we should know how to avail ourselves of them.

An Ounce of Prevention.

If your cellar is dark and you are afraid of accidents when going down the steps, have the last step whitened, so that you will easily know when you are at the bottom. You can see this step plainly even in a dim light.

Prominent Clergyman Killed.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 16.—Rev. Dr. G. Brinley Morgan, rector of Christ's Episcopal Church, and one of the most prominent clergymen in the diocese of Connecticut, was struck down by an automobile driven by Samuel Campbell Saturday afternoon, and died early yesterday morning. The minister was crossing the street in front of his church at the time.

Grand Duke Alexis Dead.

Paris, Nov. 16.—Grand Duke Alexis of Russia, an uncle of Emperor Nicholas, died in this city on Saturday of pneumonia. The grand duke has lived in Paris almost continuously since his retirement from the position of Russian Minister of Marine, which he held 24 years.

A FORMER RESIDENT OF PETERBORO'

Passed Away in New Liskeard Death of Mrs. Robt. Scott on Friday Last

Mr and Mrs. John Butcher, 301 Burnham street, Ashburnham, returned home to-day from New Liskeard, where they had been called by the death of Mr. Butcher's sister, Mrs. Robert Scott, who passed away in that town on Friday night. The late Mrs. Scott was well known here, having resided in this city for some years.

She was sixty-eight years of age, and was born in Wiltshire, England. She was the daughter of Mr. Joseph Butcher, of Beaverton. Although she had been suffering with a lingering illness for some time, her death came suddenly at the end.

She moved to New Liskeard five years ago. Before that time she resided in Port Hope.

A husband, three sons and three daughters are left to mourn her loss. The sons are Messrs. John, Liscar and Edwin, of New Liskeard, and the daughters are Mrs. Sainsbury, of Winnipeg, Man., and Mrs. Stewart and Miss Annie, of New Liskeard.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, interment taking place in New Liskeard.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE

Met Last Evening---Several Matters Dealt With

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last evening. The following were present;—Ald. Johnston, chairman; Mayor Rush, Ald. Buller and Ald. McIntyre.

It was moved by Ald. Buller and McIntyre, that the committee go down to the fire hall to enquire into the lighting of the hall.—Carried

It was moved and seconded that steps be taken at once to insure the firemen from accident.—Carried.

A letter was read from Chief Howard, stating that the members of the fire brigade were considering the establishment of a benefit fund for piano and furniture for the apartment and thought of asking subscriptions. They asked for the approval of the committee.

A petition was read asking for two incandescent lights on Bonacord street between the creek and Monaghan road.

It was moved by Ald. Buller and McIntyre, that any arc lamps ordered in future be on the condition that they be put out on 12 arms without extra charge for the arms, and that two extra be paid for any lamps now in use, that the Council ask to have placed on arms, except those which the company agreed to place on arms for cost, namely one at Brock and Sheridan streets, two on Rubidge street, one at Hunter and Stewart streets, and one on Hunter at Rogers street.—Carried

Mr. J. McNeillie, Supt. C.P.R. and Matthews Co., asked for a hydrant south of C.P.R. tracks on George street. This matter will be considered when the commissioners are putting in a larger main.

It was moved by Ald. McIntyre and Buller, that the Peterborough Light and Power Company be requested to move an arc lamp on Sherbrooke street, east of Aylmer street, to a point half way between George and Bethune streets, and place it on a long arm and remove the incandescent lamp over near that point; to place an incandescent lamp at the corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets; an incandescent lamp on Aylmer street, south of Sherbrooke street; two incandescent lamps on Aylmer street; two incandescent lamps on Walton street, and two on Hall street.—Carried.

ENCROACHING ON CITY PROPERTY

Ald. Bradburn as chairman of the Property Committee, informed the committee of the whole council last night that the city owned parts of two lots near the septic tank in the Fifth Ward, and all of lot 23, according to the original plans of the village. The lots are now being used by parties and he suggested that the city fence the lots in or take some steps to protect the city from the parties taking the property by right of possession. The lots are 100 and 101, and are being used for garden purposes. The matter was left in the hands of the Property Committee to look after.

A FORMER RESIDENT OF PETERBORO'

Passed Away in New Liskeard Death of Mrs. Robt. Scott on Friday Last

Mr. and Mrs. John Butcher, 301 Burnham street, Ashburnham, returned home to-day from New Liskeard, where they had been called by the death of Mr. Butcher's sister, Mrs. Robert Scott, who passed away in that town on Friday night. The late Mrs. Scott was well known here, having resided in this city for some years.

She was sixty-eight years of age, and was born in Wiltshire, England. She was the daughter of Mr. Joseph Butcher, of Beaverton. Although she had been suffering with a lingering illness for some time, her death came suddenly at the end.

She moved to New Liskeard five years ago. Before that time she resided in Port Hope.

A husband, three sons and three daughters are left to mourn her loss. The sons are Messrs. John, Liscar and Edwin, of New Liskeard, and the daughters are Mrs. Sainsbury, of Winnipeg, Man., and Mrs. Stewart and Miss Annie, of New Liskeard.

The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, interment taking place in New Liskeard.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT COMMITTEE

Met Last Evening---Several Matters Dealt With

The Fire, Water and Light Committee met last evening. The following were present;—Ald. Johnston, chairman; Mayor Rush, Ald. Buller and Ald. McIntyre.

It was moved by Ald. Buller and McIntyre, that the committee go down to the fire hall to enquire into the lighting of the hall.—Carried

It was moved and seconded that steps be taken at once to insure the firemen from accident.—Carried.

A letter was read from Chief Howard, stating that the members of the fire brigade were considering the establishment of a benefit fund for piano and furniture for the apartment, and thought of asking subscriptions. They asked for the approval of the committee.

A petition was read asking for two incandescent lights on Bonacord street between the creek and Monaghan road.

It was moved by Ald. Buller and McIntyre, that any arc lamps ordered in future be on the condition that they be put out on 12 arms without extra charge for the arms, and that two extra be paid for any lamps now in use, that the Council ask to have placed on arms, except those which the company agreed to place on arms for cost, namely, one at Brook and Sheridan streets, two on Rubidge street, one at Hunter and Stewart streets, and one on Hunter at Rogers street.—Carried

Mr. J. McNeillie, Supt. C.P.R. and Matthews Co., asked for a hydrant south of C.P.R. tracks on George street. This matter will be considered when the commissioners are putting in a larger main.

It was moved by Ald. McIntyre and Buller, that the Peterborough Light and Power Company be requested to move an arc lamp on Sherbrooke street, east of Aylmer street, to a point half way between George and Bethune streets, and place it on a long arm and remove the incandescent lamp over near that point; to place an incandescent lamp at the corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets; an incandescent lamp on Aylmer street, south of Sherbrooke street; two incandescent lamps on Aylmer street; two incandescent lamps on Walton street, and two on Hall street.—Carried.

ENCROACHING ON CITY PROPERTY

Ald. Bradburn as chairman of the Property Committee, informed the committee of the whole council last night that the city owned parts of two lots near the septic tank in the Fifth Ward, and all of lot 23, according to the original plans of the village. The lots are now being used by parties and he suggested that the city fence the lots in or take some steps to protect the city from the parties taking the property by right of possession. The lots are 100 and 101, and are being used for garden purposes. The matter was left in the hands of the Property Committee to look after.

SLAYER OF OLAK LONTICK IS NOW ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Is Being Tried at Brampton.

True Bill is Brought In---The Story of One Witness---Went Away Together and Only One Returned.

Brampton, Nov. 18.—The pitiful story of how 18-year-old Olak Loutick, a stranger in Canada from Poland, fairly well educated, but friendless in Toronto, was murdered in a lonely spot near Erindale last April on the day before Good Friday, was the sensation in this town yesterday, when Mr. Justice Riddell opened the Criminal Assizes for Peel county in the Court House yesterday afternoon. A broad-faced, dark-eyed Ruthenian named Stephen Szweryda sat in the prisoner's dock facing the charge of murder, sustained on a true bill brought in by the Grand Jury. He pleaded not guilty.

County Crown Attorney McFadden, addressing the jury, outlined the evidence. The prisoner was living in Toronto on April 14 last, at 99 Teraulay street, a boarding-house. On that date the deceased was brought to this boarding-house by the prisoner. He remained there two days, and on April 16 the prisoner and the deceased left the house together. Evidence would be forthcoming to prove that while further evidence would be produced, showing that these two men were seen on the Toronto and York Radial Railway on the night of April 17. The prisoner returned alone to the boarding-house a day later and there gave different accounts as to what had become of the deceased. First he said he had left him on a farm, and then he said he had gone to Hamilton. Nothing more was heard of the deceased until May 3, when two boys playing on the farm of Samuel Faskin, near Erindale, found the body in a wood, partly covered with leaves.

The medical examination showed that death had been caused by deceased having been struck on the head by some blunt instrument, and a club on which was found stains, supposed to be blood, was found near the body. An empty flask was also found and several other articles which were afterwards identified as the property of the deceased, among them a suitcase which had undeniably belonged to him, and the two halves of which would be produced in court.

The first witness called was Mrs. Adalya of 99 Teraulay street, Toronto, where prisoner was boarding at the time of his arrest. He came to her home on March 11 last and remained until April 16. He said he had no money. She remembered the deceased coming to her house on April 14. He had been brought there by the prisoner. He had a valise with him and a bundle. He appeared to be a boy of good education, wrote very well and spoke more than one language. The prisoner told her that he had found the boy on the street, that he was crying and did not know where to go.

At this point the prisoner stood up in the dock and became somewhat excited, leaning over the bar and listening most attentively to the witness as she gave her evidence. Mrs. Adayla described the departure of the prisoner and the deceased on April 16, adding that she had never seen him alive since that date. When the prisoner returned on Good Friday afternoon she asked him what he had done with Loutick. He said he had got him a job on a farm at $7 a month, but did not say where the farm was. At the same time the prisoner paid her some money from a pocketbook, and while he did so she saw the figure 5 on one of the bills which was in the book. She knew the prisoner had a wife living in Rochester, who came to Toronto on April 19.

The witness was cross-examined but her evidence was not shaken.

FISCAL YEAR MAY BE CHANGED

Premier Whitney Makes an Interesting Statement.

Toronto, Nov. 18.—Premier Whitney stated yesterday that there was no basis for the idea that the Legislature would be called earlier than usual. It will be two months yet before the new House will begin to think of assembling.

Sir James also stated that the question of the public accounts was one which bore directly on the meeting of the Legislature. Nothing can be done until they are ready. At present the fiscal year closes on Dec. 31. The books, however, remain open for some weeks, and the result is delay in public business which cannot be avoided.

The only remedy is a change of the date of closing the fiscal year, and Sir James said that this was being considered at present, but in the abscence of the Provincial Treasurer nothing could be determined.

ACCOSTED BY AN UNKNOWN YOUNG MAN

Last evening another young lady, whose residence is in Ashburnham, had an experience about the same as the two ladies had last week, while returning from the city.

Last night, the lady in question was going home, which is on Rogers st. As she was turning south off Hunter street she was taken suddenly by surprise by a young man, who offered his company for the rest of her way home. She refused him but her persisted in following closely behind her.

The young lady stated the man wore an overcoat and had a cap pulled over his eyes.

Town Too Dry For Cat.

Winsted, Conn., Nov. 18.—Fannie, a cat owned by Barreuther Bros., had a liking for lager beer. When the town recently voted "dry" her owners went out of business and Fannie missed her drink. For some days she went to her saucer and cried for beer, but as none was forthcoming she disappeared. It is suspected she has gone to the nearest license town.

Loss In Cape Colony.

Port Elizabeth, Cape Colony, Nov. 18.—A storm has swept this part of Cape Colony and caused a heavy overflow of Barkers river. A number of bridges were destroyed and property was swept to sea. Several lives were lost, and the damage amounts to more than a million dollars.

Highwaymen Get $2,600.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 18.—John Kafcenke was arrested by Provincial Constable Maguire on the charge that on Oct. 24, with two other men, he held up with revolvers, near Plum Coulee, four Americans. The latter prospective land buyers, parted with $2,600 in currency.

Drops Dead on Train.

Kenora, Nov. 18.—Wm. Monkhouse, a passenger on the west bound train, dropped dead at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon near Dryden. He was from Farnside, near Ulverston, England, and was on his way to visit his relations at Mortlach, Sask.

Will Try Returning Officer.

Brandon, Nov. 18.—On a charge of having substituted a name upon the election voters' list, Returning Officer Ingram has been committed for trial.

MAY BE THE MURDERED MAN SKELETON HAS BEEN FOUND

Body Found Near North Bay is Identified as That of Joseph Ryan, Who Disappeared a Year Ago, and Signs Point Strongly to Foul Play.

North Bay, Nov. 18.—Farmers engaged in clearing land near Callandar made the gruesome discovery of a human skeleton, and incidents which have come to light since, including the identification of the remains, strongly point to murder. Coroner McMurchy held an inquest at Callandar Saturday and the jury gave it as their opinion that deceased had met death through foul play.

The body was found in a bush where fire had passed over. Watch and chain, lady's ring, a small sum of money in silver, knife, corkscrew and keys were found with the body, and an aluminum trinket with the following inscription: "Lizzie Dalton, souvenir from your friends, Joseph Ryan, 1906."

Among the bones was a piece of lead resembling a bullet.

A man named Hicks testified at the inquest to seeing a buggy standing opposite the bush where the body was found one night about a year ago.

William Ryan, employed at Cook & Armstrong's livery stable, North Bay, states that his brother, Joseph Ryan, came to North Bay in 1907, with considerable money in his possession, having worked as cook on a railroad survey north of Latchford. He had a chum with him, and after staying in town about two months, he announced his intention of leaving for the United States, saying that he would take his savings, amounting to $1,200, with him. That evening Jos. Ryan hired a rig from his brother to drive to Callandar, where he intended to take a train. Another man, whom the brother is positive was the chum of the missing man, got in the buggy from the sidewalk, but did not come into the livery stable. About 6 o'clock the next morning the rig was found tied in an outside shed, but none of the stable employes saw who brought it back. This was about a year ago, and although no word of Ryan reached his relatives since, no suspicion was aroused, as he frequently absented himself for long intervals without apprising anyone of his whereabouts.

The brother of the missing man states that the man is known who was with Ryan the night of the drive to Callandar, and an effort is being made to locate him.

An incident which may have bearing on the mystery occurred some months ago, when the rumor spread through town that a man had been murdered for his money in the vicinity of the Red Light district. This story was credited to a woman in one of the dives, but nothing further was heard of it, although considerable excitement was caused at the time. It is significant that the skeleton was found in the locality of the rumor.

LAKEFIELD BANK MANAGER ENDED LIFE WITH PISTOL

Tragic Death of Mr. R. P. Davidson, Manager of Lakefield Branch of Traders Bank---Shot Himself Last Evening.

DEATH OCCURRED AT 2.30 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING

Was Found at 8;30 o'Clock Last Evening in Room at Rear of Bank With Bullet Hole in His Head---Terrible Discovery Made by Harry Simpson, Teller in the Bank---No Reason Assigned for the Rash Act.

Special to the Review.

Lakefield, Ont., Nov. 18.—Mr. R. P. Davidson, Manager of the Traders Bank here who shot himself yesterday evening about eight o'clock, died this morning at 2.30, without regaining consciousness. He was 33 years of age and leaves a wife and one child. He has been here for six years, and was popular with all classes. Bank officials state that they know of no reason for the rash act.

Special to the Review.

Lakefield, Nov. 18.—The tragic death of Mr. R. P. Davidson, manager of the Traders Bank here, has created a sensation in Lakefield and the surrounding country. He was looked upon as an ideal bank manager, and it was frequently remarked that he was almost over-cautious in his management of the branch that was entrusted to his care.

Mr. Davidson shot himself through the temple with a revolver about 8 o'clock last evening. The tragic affair took place in one of the outbuildings at the rear of the bank. He was unconscious when found and remained so until death came at 2.30 o'clock this morning.

FOUND BY TELLER.

Mr Harry Simpson, teller of the bank, had an appointment with his manager, Mr Davidson, for 8.30 o'clock. On returning to the bank, he was unable to find the manager, and went out to the back of the building to see if he were there.

A terrible sight greeted the young man.

Mr. Davidson was lying on the floor with blood streaming from a bullet hole in his head. The revolver was lying on the floor.

The injured man's pulse was still beating and Mr. Simpson at once spread the alarm. Doctors Baker and Fraser were summoned at once and the unconscious form of the manager was removed to his residence over the bank.

His wife and three year old daughter were in their home at the time and the shock to the wife was a terrible one. She is prostrated with grief.

The doctors were unable to do much for the victim of the tragic affair and his pulse stopped beating shortly about 2.30 o'clock.

No one appears to have heard the shot and nothing was known of the terrible affair until Mr. Simpson made the discovery.

The late Mr. Davidson was 33 years of age and was a native of Toronto where his parents now reside. He came to Lakefield as manager of the Traders Bank when the branch was opened here in 1902. Five years ago he married a Toronto girl who survives him, along with a three year old daughter.

WHAT WAS THE REASON?

Many stories are being circulated in the village and surrounding country as to the reason of this rash act. The officials of the bank refuse to make a statement today.

INSPECTOR THERE

An inspector of the Traders' Bank, Mr. Sherris, of Toronto, arrived in Lakefield yesterday morning and was working on the books of the bank. He would state nothing today as to the condition in which he finds the affairs of the bank. The superintendent of agencies of the Traders Bank is expected here today.

THE BANK STAFF.

The staff of the Lakefield branch at the present time is composed of Mr Harry Simpson, teller and accountant, Mr. Campbell, ledger keeper, and Mr. W Garbutt, junior clerk.

Mr Simpson and Mr Garbutt are Lakefield boys and Mr. Campbell came to Lakefield from Acton, Ont.

WENT TO COBALT.

Two of the clerks in the Lakefield branch, Mr M H Quigley, who acted as ledger keeper, and Mr Lewis who was accountant and teller, gave up their positions about the first of November and went to Cobalt where they are located at the present time. Mr Quigley is well known in hockey circles.

The late Mr. Davidson was highly respected in the village and appeared to be a model bank manager and citizen.

Friends of the deceased state that they hae noted no change in his manner of late and are at a loss to account for what has taken place.

THE MEDIUM HAS HER CHILD STRANGE CASE AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Nov. 18.—There is a very strange case now before the Montreal courts and one that is being followed not only by the public at large, but by the colony of spiritualists in the city.

It appears that one Madame Dickson, who when she thought she was going to die gave her little son Jos. over to a woman named Madame Cleophas Mercier, a well-known French spirit medium. Madame Dickson recovered, however, and has applied for a writ of habeas corpus to recover the child. She alleges that her boy is being brought up in the religion of the spirits and she objects to all this. Madame Dickson claims that her son is being taught that he is the child of Madame Mercier, the head of the spirit band in her locality.

It appears that the boy is told that he died and that his soul entered Mrs. Mercier's body, and she transmitted it to him again, all of which is abhorrent to the real mother and to the people generally of the Catholic faith.

GOT REVENGE IN UNIQUE WAY

Paris, Nov, 17.—A pianist employed in a Paris cafe was fined £2 yesterday for a novel revenge. The proprietor of the cafe noticed that after he had refused to give the pianist an increase of salary the number of his customers dwindled rapidly. It was only when all but one diner had deserted him that he discovered the pianist had been inflicting Chopin's "Funeral March" on the audience each night. The pianist pleaded that he played according to the mood he felt in after his request had been refused.

MEETING OF THE CANADIAN CLUB

Will be Held in City Council Chamber To-morrow Evening at Eight O'clock

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Canadian Club will be held in the city council chamber tomorrow evening, November 18th at eight o'clock for the election of officers and the transaction of other important business. Rev Canon Davidson will give a short talk to the members on his recent trip to England.

WARNOCK WILL IS VALID FIRST WIFE DISINHERITED

Brockville, Nov. 18.—The Warnock will case came to an abrupt ending last night. At the conclusion of the evidence Chief Justice Falconbridge declared the last will and testament of the dead horseman, J. G. Warnock, to be valid. In other words the four daughters of the deceased by Mrs. Agnes Warnock, whom he repudiated as his legal wife, receive the $5,000 each allotted them and the remainder of the estate, valued at $32,000, goes to Mrs. Eva Warnock, whom he married shortly after casting adrift the woman with whom he had lived for about sixteen years.

The judge stated that the question whether Mrs. Agnes Warnock was really married or not did not enter into the action. It was generally admitted that she made out a strong case in establishing her marriage, but the will not being set aside and Warnock having the privilege of bequeathing his property to whom he pleased, she remains disinherited without the satisfaction even of proving to the world that she was the lawful wife of James Gregory Warnock.

MAT MANUFACTURER WILL ERECT LARGE NEW FACTORY

Mr. Weatherstone is Dealing With the Manufacturers Committee—Expansion of a Local Industry.

The manufacturer of door mats is developing into a more or less important industry in this city. A few years ago Mr Weatherstonne left Cobourg, where he had been engaged in a similar business and came to Peterborough where he started the manufacture of door mats in the building at the corner of Simcoe and Water streets. Each year has seen a steady increase, and now there are employed six or seven hands, including Mr Weatherstonne's four sons. The business has increased to such an extent that the present building will no longer accommodate the industry and the proprietor is seeking for a new location.

Mr Weatherstonne applied to the city for the privilege of purchasing an acre of land at a reasonable price for the purpose of erecting a new factory which at the start will be 50 by 100 feet, one storey high. The application was taken up by the manufacturers' committee yesterday afternoon when Mr Weatherstonne was present. In speaking to his request he stated that he did not want any fixed assessment or reduction in taxes or anything of that kind. All he wanted was to purchase at a reasonable figure about an acre of land. He said that he had been looking at the Hilliard farm and would like to get a location on Hilliard street or the site of the old grist mill on the north end of Water street would be satisfactory.

The manufacturers' committee looked favorably upon the proposition and will likely decide to grant the acre of land.

It is Mr Weatherstonne's intention to erect the new factory at once, and to have it completed and ready for occupancy this year.

WHOLE ISSUE IS NOW SOLD OUT

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—Notice has been given by the Post Office Department that the entire stock of Tersentenary stamps, issued last summer mer on the occasion of the celebration in Quebec, has been exhausted. There will be no further issue of these stamps.

Voodoo Test Succeeded.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 18.—Sam Haywood, a prominent farmer near Monticello, was called to his door on Sunday night and assassinated by a man standing at the door, who emptied a charge of buckshot into his body.

Louis Hursch, arrested on suspicion Monday night that he was the slayer, committed suicide in a dramatic manner. He was taken before a coroner's jury and denied his guilt. A negro juryman demanded the "voodoo" test, calling for Hursch's gun, saying that if it was discharged and Hursch was guilt, it would "sweat blood at the muzzle." The gun was discharged and Hursch mistaking the rust on the barrel for blood, plunged a knife into his throat, expiring before the jury without uttering a word.

Death Sentences Commuted.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—There will be no double hanging in Montreal on Dec. 17 as was expected. The Cabinet Council yesterday afternoon decided to commute the death sentences passed on "Crooked Neck" Smith and Nicolla, an Italian, to imprisonment for life.

The fact that in both cases clemency was recommended by the trial judge influenced the Minister of Justice in his recommendations, aside from the plea that both men had committed manslaughter in defending their own lives. Crooked Neck Smith shot a pal named Mulloy, while the crime for which Nicolla was sentenced was the killing of a fellow countryman in a stabbing affray.

CALEDON SUITS ARE SETTLED

Jury Awards One Man $11,500—Wreck Cost C.P.R. $40,000.

Orangeville, Nov. 18.—M. E. Stewart at the Assize Court yesterday was awarded a verdict of $11,500 as damages against the C.P.R. for injuries received in the Caledon railway wreck on Sept. 3, 1907.

The jury were out about four hours and a half. Chief Justice Mulock's charge to the jury was decidedly in favor of the plaintiff.

Jas. Russell of Dundalk, who sued the company for rupture received in the wreck got a settlement before the case went to trial, receiving as damages $2,250.

To settle the six cases brought against them at this court the C.P.R. will pay probably in the neighborhood of $30,000.

A BANK CLERK KILLS HIMSELF

Montreal, Nov. 18.—On the 28th of August Leon Renaud, a clerk in the City and District Savings Bank, disappeared after having an altercation with one of the seniors of the institution.

A blow was struck and Young Renaud was never seen or heard of after until his body was fished out of the St. Lawrence yesterday at Pierreville, Lake St. Pierre.

Bands to Tour.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The proposal of the 43rd and Governor-General's Footguards bands of Ottawa to make an extended tour of the British Islands and the United States next summer bids fair to come to a head.

The band will leave Canada in June and the tour will extend over six weeks.

Roosevelt's Labor Dinner.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Members of the Cabinet and justices of the Supreme Court of the United States sat down last night with labor leaders from various sections of the United States at a dinner given by President Roosevelt at the White House.

One Hundred and Fifty Homeless.

Wheeling, W.Va., Nov. 18.—Yorkville, a mining town of 500 population, near here, was almost destroyed by fire which started early yesterday. One hundred and fifty persons were made homeless.

North Bay Hotel Scorched.

North Bay, Nov. 18.—New Cecil Hotel narrowly escaped destruction by fire yesterday. Much damage was done to the building by smoke and water. Damage about two thousand dollars.

Hallatt Before Court.

Toronto, Nov. 18.—Joseph E. Hallatt faced the far-fetched charge of murder in the Police Court yesterday. He is a good-looking young man of respectable appearance.

Just how the Winnipeg police arrived at the murder charges does not appear, as from the facts known here the offence appears to have been no greater than criminal negligence, and even of this Hallatt declares he is innocent.

He was held, however, by Magistrate Denison till Friday to allow an officer to come from Winnipeg.

Hallatt declares that his horse was in the stable when the girl whose death he is charged with causing was run over.

Will Not Act Without Counsel.

Emperor William Realizes That He Must Act According to Constitution.

Berlin, Nov. 18.—Forced by the angry tide of popular feeling that swept the empire from end to end, Emperor William yesterday yielded to the nation, and promised henceforth to conform himself to constitutional methods of conducting the policies of Germany.

The climax to the public utterances of the Emperor was reached in an interview which he gave to an Englishman and which was published in The London Daily Telegraph on Oct. 28. As the outcome of this the whole country was aroused, the Reichstag endorsed the attitude of many of its most prominent members when they denounced the sovereign, and Chancellor Von Buelow, while he attempted to smooth away the affair, undertook to communicate to His Majesty a straight-forward and unvarnished statement of how the German people viewed his intervention in affairs of state.

The interview between the Emperor and the Imperial Chancellor took place at the new palace in Potsdam yesterday morning, and at its conclusion the Emperor made formal promise to his people that he would not in the future act except through the chancellor and his associate Ministers. This promise was made public in The Reichsanzeiger, the official gazette of the empire. It was in the form of a note, printed on the front page, where decrees, the texts of treaties and the promulgation of new laws usually appear. It was as follows:

"During to-day's audience, granted to the Imperial Chancellor, His Majesty, the Emperor and King, listened for several hours to a report by Prince Von Buelow. The Imperial Chancellor described the feeling and its causes among the German people in connection with the article published in The Daily Telegraph. He also explained the position he had taken during the course of the debates and interpellations on this subject in the Reichstag. His Majesty, the Emperor, received the statements and explanations with great earnestness and then expressed his will as follows:

"Heedless of the agitations of public criticism which are regarded by him as incorrect, His Majesty, perceives that his principal imperial task is to ensure the stability of the policies of constitutional responsibilities. In conformity therewith His Majesty, the Emperor, approves the chancellor's utterances in the Reichstag and assures Prince Von Buelow his continued confidence."

Prince Von Buelow had determined upon handing in his resignation if the Emperor had not met the country's demands, but as such a situation did not arise, the audience ended with the Emperor saying to the Imperial Chancellor that he reposed full confidence in his wisdow.

It is certain now in the minds of the German people that a great step has been taken towards freer government.

Within half an hour after the chancellor's return to Berlin, bulletins, issued gratis by the evening newspapers, reporting a favorable issue at the meeting between the Emperor and prince, were eagerly snatchd by an anxious public, who, in the first moment of joyful surprise, scarcely conceived the importance of the announcement to themselves and the empire. The whole nation had awaited with breathless suspense the word from the palace which would decide whether Prince Von Buelow would quit his office and the reign of personal policy continue, or whether the chancellor would remain and the desire of the people be fulfilled, that the nation as well as the Emperor would have a word in directing the policies of the country.

BIDS JEWS MARRY OUTSIDERS ADVICE OF RABBI IN CHICAGO

Bids Jews Marry Outsiders.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Intermarriage with other races, in violation of accepted Scriptural injunctions and years of custom, was boldly advocated as a solution of the Jewish problem by Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, in a sermon before the Sinai Congregation. As the alternatives to intermarriage Dr. Hirsch offered emigration and segregation, and the ultimate decline of the Jewish people in the world's civilization and progress.

In declaring in favor of intermarriage, Dr. Hirsch attacked the "racial purity" argument of orthodox Jewish leaders who oppose intermarriage, declaring that no such thing as a distinctive Jewish race existed.

To Assist Dillon's Defence.

Montreal, Nov. 18.—John Dillon, alias Smith, the book agent, who killed Constable Shea, and shot Chief Carpenter some months ago, is fit to stand his trial, according to the report of a commission of four doctors.

Judge Cross has ordered a commission to proceed to Ireland at the crown's expense to enquire into the antecedents of the prisoner, it being alleged that there is a strain of insanity in his family.

Year For Trying to Escape.

St. Thomas, Nov. 18.—Clarence Pangburn pleaded guilty yesterday to carrying an iron bar into his cell a week ago Saturday, and was sentenced to a year in the Central. Thomas Tully and C. I. Hunt, two more of the quartette who attempted to escape, pleaded guilty and were committed for trial. Hardy, the fourth man, is now in Kingston.

Want Laurier to Speak.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The appointment of Mr. Locke to the librarianship of the Toronto Public Library, draws from the Toront Star an observation taht applies to Peterborough. It remarks that the public library is the only home or source of learning open to the vast majority of those who earn their living by the sweat of their face, and that as a consequence nobody is too good for librarian. The value of the public library to the public, and when we say public we mean the people, should be before the eyes of our municipal legislators always and without cessation. The present council is an able and progressive one, and we hope it will do something in the line indicated.

A SHOUT OF LAUGHTER

It is related that when our ancient friend Nero saw the city burning, he burst into a loud fit of derisive laughter as each Roman edifice fell. He was wreaking further vengeance on the Gods which he had so long [illegible]. If he were in Canada at the present time to "view the landscape, o'er" of parliamentary departmental inquiry even his lust for destruction of the material and moral could not be more fully gratified. The G.T.P. is a proven hotbed of graft and corruption from end to end. The various departments, at least, of the inside civil service which are those immediately under the eyes of the ministers themselves, have been "shown up" in the most awe-inspiring manner possible. The loss to Canada must be immense. The efforts of the ministers to stop it are also immense. They provide fun for every funny column in the empire. A more contemptible travesty of government was never given by any administration than that given by the present Laurier administration. The people of Canada are getting well soaked and by the results of the late elections it would look as if they deserve what they are getting. When the government comes to renew three hundreds of millions of the Dominion debt as they will have to do presently, the result will be an object lesson for even the most stupid. It must be said in justice to many of the Liberal journals that they are becoming alarmed. But why now and not before?

WHAT DOES HE MEAN?

"Lord Milner aded that while all Canadians would oppose emphatically annexation to the United States there were many silent unconscious influences at work which might bring them on the verge of annexation before they realized it."

We clip the above suggestive remark of Lord Milner's from the English despatches sent to Canada concerning the diplomatist's idea of things in general in this country. No man of Lord Milner's calibre and responsibility would make such a very suggestive statement without meaning something by it. What does he mean? To us it looks as if he meant that Canada was so rent by factions religious and racial that she would never realize a condition of reasonable national solidarity, in which event she will naturally drift into a state of dependency upon her nearest and most powerful neighbor. When such a man gives us a text it is well for us to begin preaching. That there is a strong undertow in the direction of the United States, no observant Canadian can deny. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is regarded by his compatriots as the one man likely to save them from being hopelessly lost in the maze of a consolidated empire. He therefore really represents the forces of imperial disintegration. That is what he stands for. We do not question his loyalty so far as it goes but it does not go far enough. He is holding Canada at arm's length from the mother countries and from the United States while he molds her to his will and what it represents. It is natural enough we suppose that a French-Canadian should lean that way. The Anglo-Saxon does the same. We all pretend that these things are not so but we know better. Time has proven that in Canada we cannot fuse. The French won't have it at any price. They do not disguise their feelings. Why should we disguise ours? They say that they intend to remain single and to have and hold all rights necessary thereto. If we do the same it is logically manifest that we must remain as of yore, not one Canada, but two Canadas. We have so much respect for our French-Canadian brethren that we would see without dismay the British and Canadian governments giving them in fee the territory which they already possess. This with access to the sea would give us a chance to join the empire in fact for we must either be of the "British dominions beyond the Sea," or not of them, one or the other. Hanging to the fringe of the empire as at present is grotesque. Every people has a destiny and if something seeks to block that destiny that something must give way. As it is at present, we can neither go on nor stand still, neither become an integral part of the British empire nor a distinct united nation. The one thing left is annexation and Lord Milner sees it. At least so we interpret his utterances.

Who would have thought that the old game of tag would be revived under such pleasant circumstances—while basking in the radiance of a woman's smile (at our credulity.)

North Yakima, Wn., Nov. 11.—Whiskey jelly made its appearance in North Yakima yesterday, being recommended by a representative of a Kentucky distillery as a panacea for local option laws. The "drinkless drink" comes in the form of tablets or of stick candy and can be chewed or dissolved in water, its effect being sufficiently like the "real stuff" to convince of its power.

Do other Government departments possess "patronage lists?"

We know much about the Marine Department. It had "patronage list" apparently at every centre; but now the Minister has ordered that they be disregarded. It was high time. They had cost the country more than enough. The victors had secured about all "the spoils" to which the greediest of them were entitled. We did not need the official condemnation of the Minister to convince us that the "patronage list" was an unmixed evil intended to enrich party favorites at the expense of the nation.—Montreal Star.

The last "Commoner," Mr. Bryan's paper, for a copy of which we are indebted to a friendly subscriber, contains a sane and simple review of the affairs in the U.S. leading up to the present condition there. That the majority of the electors do not wish Bryanism in politics should not militate against Mr. Bryan's usefulness in other walks of life. Like Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his eloquence, he was unlike him in that he had a different people to deal with. Bryan would have represented the Y.M.C.A. type in the presidential chair. He is undoubtedly more or less a man in advance of his age, which is largely the (Standard) Oil Age.

STOMACH COMFORT

Just as soon as you are done eating the healthy stomach commences to churn the food around and mixes it thoroughly with the juices of the stomach.

If the food is not churned, it lays heavily on your stomach, turns sour and causes all kinds of distressing symptoms, such as headache, indigestion, stomach pain and dyspepsia. Mi-o-na helps the stomach to properly mix the food.

John A. May, of Isabella street, Belleville, Ont., says: "For over seven months I was in constant agony with a case of nervous dyspepsia and indigestion that medical skill could not relieve. I was weak and had lost much weight through loss of appetite and suffering. My meals would fill me with gas and a feeling of oppression across the stomach and all up the left side left me in a miserable condition. I was restless at night and as tired and unrefreshed in the morning as on going to bed. A choking sensation in my throat was always constant when lying down, and my heart seemed to flutter and pound as though it were coming out through my side. I was benefitted from the first two days' use of Miona. I began to feel like myself again, my appetite returned and the depressive feeling left me. I can enjoy my meals without suffering the least worry of after sufferings. I have gained in weight and can sleep the night through in comfort."

Go to Wm. Madill, the druggist and get a 50 cent box of Mi-o-na Tablets. Money back if Mi-o-na does not cure.

OF INTEREST

Interesting new skeletons of prehistoric animals from the Fayoum desert, in Egypt, have just been brought to this country by an expedition directed by Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn, of the American Museum of Natural history, New York, at which institution some of the finds have just been put on exhibition. Fossils were discovered in this region nearly thirty years ago, but it has been carefully explored for only about ten years. Mr. Walter L. Beasley, writing in the Scientific American, says:

"The Fayoum district is a natural depression about fifty miles in diameter situated in the Libyan desert, fifty miles southward of Cairo, and separated from the Nile valley by a narrow strip of desert land. In this basin was the ancient Lake Moeris, some 300 feet above the present brackish shallow sheet of water now known as Burket-el-Qurun. This depression is divided into a series of terraces, or fossilh-bearing beds, some reaching to the height of 1,000 feet. There imposing formations rise tier upon tier, amphitheatre-like. The principal bone-bearing layer, composed of loose red sand in which scattered bones could be seen embedded was only forty feet in thickness, but miles in horizontal extent. . . . . .

"Just why the astonishing and extraordinary number of the ancient animals of Africa found their burial-plac ein this particular spot of the Fayoum is attributed by Professor Osborn to the following circumstances;—In remote times, long before the Nile had come into existence, a mighty river flowed north and emptied its waters into the Mediterranean, then 140 miles south of its present boundaries. Here, at this point, a sandbar had checked the river current. The animals had evidently drifted some distance down stream with the sand and gravel, all the bones floating apart or having been pulled apart by turtles and crocodiles, so that a skeleton of an animal could never be found intact. In this manner animals of every kind, big and little, herbivorous and carnivorous, in every degree of preservation, a few being hard and perfect, others soft and crumbling, had been washed down and heaped together. In every case the bones were only partlyp etrified, a condition entirely different from the hard and rocklike state in which fossils are found in the standstone matrix in Western America. Seldom were two bones of one animal found together. The skulls were as a rule, badly broken."

The bones are so soft, we are told, that they can not be removed until shellac has been poured over them to consolidate them. One of the most important finds in this region is the skull of the giant arsinoitherium, one one of the most extraordinary land mammals of the fossil world. This remarkable beast is entirely new to science. Says Mr. Beasley;

"The dominating and all-powerful feature of the arsinoitherium was the long pair of sharp-pointed horns, protruding upward and outward above the nose for nearly two feet, an appendage both dangerous and fantastic. Undoubtedly no contemporary could cope with and withstand a mad rush and furious charge from an animal thus armed. Arsinoitherium was the brute king of the Fayoum during Eocene times, some two or three million years ago. The discovery of this strange beast by the members of the Egyptian Geological Survey only a few years back is said to have afforded one of the greatest surprises of modern paleontological explorations. From the skull and other bones secured by Professor Osborn's party, together with the material of English investigators, the make-up of the queer animal's body has been pretty accurately determined.

The animal's body combined the shape of the rhinoceros and elephant. The monster was named after the Egyptian Queen Arsinoe, famous for her beauty, . . . and after her death the patron goddess of the Fayoum. The animal stood about six feet high and was nearly ten feet in length; the bones of the skeleton were massive and the body heavy. The neck was short, and could be freely moved up and down, and was therefore well adapted to toss an enemy up in the air. The feet were short, the five toes spreading out like those of the modern elephant. The teeth consisted of high-crowned, sharply crested grinders fitted for grazing upon the harder kind of herbage. The narrow muzzle of the head indicated that the animal did not graze, but browsed upon the low bushes and herbage. As to the character of the landscape and the natural environment surrounding the primitive group of animals inhabiting the area of the Fayoum and the Libyan desert in the days of arsinoitherium, Professor Osborn advances the opinion, based on the structure of the fossilized remains that it was a savannah country, partly wooded, with about the same temperature as to-day. The animals were those which might have lived almost exclusively in a fairly well-watered delta or estuary country bordering the sea, not densely forested, but with stretches of sandy plains or of muddy bottom lands, traversed by large streams, having currents of considerable velocity. These land mammals, twenty-seven of which have so far been discovered, with several new ones by the museum, were all relatively shortfooted and slow-moving only two swift-running types being known, one an active carnivore. From a study of the structure of the limbs and feet, it has been determined that these ancient groups of land animals were adapted and fittedf or walking on partly sandy or sinking ground."

The great popularity of Kubelik in this country will in the coming season be challenged by another youthful virtuoso on the violin. It is Mischa Elman, a Russian Jew, who is now in his seventeenth year. His success in Europe has been, if anything, greater than that enjoyed by the Polish confrere at the equal age; while in London, where he has lately made his home, his appearances bring forth the highest praise from critics on all sides. He seems never to have been ranked within the "infant-prodigy" class; for, though he began playing in public when a mere boy, he was early regarded as having a mature musical intelligence. He was born in Talnoje, a small town in the district of Kief, Russia. His grandfather was a violinist noted in that part, and the boy at a very early age began to play on a quarter-size instrument. When he was five years old he played at a concert before the Princess Ourosov, president and owner of Talnoje. The lady at once offered to pay for his education and adopted him if he would renounce his Judaic faith and become a Christian.

"You have a great fortune in that boy," she said to his father.

"You are so rich, and I am to poor," he replied, "if, madam, I have one littl efortune, why do you want to take it from me?"

The offer was declined, and the father sold his little property and removed to Odessa for the benefit of his son's musical education. The Musician, Boston, November, from which we are quoting, continues the boy's remarkable story. Thus;

"In the month of May, 1896, Mischa, aged five, became a student at the Imperial School of Music at Odessa, his teacher of the violin being Prof. Alexander Fiedelmann, a distinguished pupil of Dr. Brodsky. The boy duly appeared before the Board of Examiners, M. Emil Mlynarski being chief of the violin department. Until he entered the room Mischa had never before seen a pianoforte! The floor was so slippery and h eso nervous and frightened that he tumbled down, fiddle and all; but the moment he put the bow to the violin he recovered himself. On being asked his age, he replied 'Three months,' and to the question, 'How long have you learned the violin?' the answer came, 'Five years!' Some ladies on the council of the school said, 'We have never before had so young a student; why should we force a child like this to work?' The director replied, 'We shall never have to work this boy, he will become an honor to our school.'

"Mischa was accepted as a free pupil at the school, but his father had to maintain him; and for the sake of the boy and family suffered great privations during their residence in Odessa.

"In November, 1902, Prof. Leopold Auer, head of the violin department in the St. Petersburg Conservatory, then on a professional tour in South Russia, heard the lad play and was so greatly struck with his wonderful talent that h eagreed to take him as a pupil if he could obtain the permission of the Czar for Mischa and his family to reside in St. Petersburg, as no Jew born outsid ethe city was allowed to live either in the Russian capital or in Moscow. The requisite permission was obtained, but not without considerable difficulty. In the end Auer accepted him as a free pupil, and the Elman family removed to St. Petersburg. Although there was great rivalry between Mischa and another student, the former so rapidly shot ahead that he soon outdistanced all his competitors.

"In Octomer, 1904, a violinist prodigy came to St. Petersburg, who at that time had made a great stir in the world. To Professor Auer the critics said;

"'Have you ever heard anything like this before?'

"'Yes,' he replied, 'I have a pupil in my class who can play this boy's head off.'

"'Why, then, do you not produce him?' they inquired; 'it is easy enough to make such a statement, but let us hear him.'

"Arrangements were accordingly made for Mischa to appear at the Deutscher Liedertafel, the most important musical society in St. Petersburg. Now, it had always been the prerogative of Auer to play at this, the opening meeting of the season. On this occasion, however, he sent a message saying that h ewas too unwell to play. . . . Great was the astonishment not to say amusement, of the audience when a little fellow of thirteen appeared as Auer's substitute. Mischa played the Mendelssohn 'Concerto'—with pianoforte accompaniment—one of Chopin's nocturnes, and Paganini's 'Moto Perpetuo,' and with such success that the little fiddler was then and there engaged by a German concert agent, who was present, to play in Berlin.

"On October 12, 1904, Mischa and his father arrived at Berlin. There they narrowly escaped death by asphyxiation at the hotel where they had passed the night. It had been arranged that at noon the next day the boy should play privately before a select audience of musical critics and others. As the youthful violinist did not arrive, the agent hastened to the hotel to find Elman and his father almost in a state of collapse. Two doctors managed to restore consciousness but it was feared that the boy would be unable to play. With rare pluck, however, he pulled himself together, saying, 'I must play, my future depends upon it, and I can not disappoint them.' He treated his select audience to the Bach 'Chaconne' and then said, 'I can not play any more,' and left the platform crying. The next day he was well enough to play before Joachim, and on the following day he gave his first public recital."

His English debut was made at Queen's Hall on March 21, 1905, when he played Tschaikovsky's "Concerto" "in a most masterly manner" says an account in the London Musical Times "not only with faultless technic, but with perfect phrasing and poetic insight, rare even in an artist of high repute." His conquest of London was immediately followed by that of Paris, of which, we read;

"He made his first appearance in the French capital at his own concert given at the Salles des Agriculteurs on April 2nd, 1905. In pieces by Bach, Paganini, and Saint-Saens he created quite a sensation and was welcomed with extraordinary enthusiasm. He also palyed at a Colonne concert—an event which recalls an interesting incident related by Mr. Elman, Mischa's father, in connection with his son's St. Petersburg period.

"M. Colonne conducted an important orchestral concert in the Russian capital in 1904, at which Mischa, anxious to play in public with the orchestra offered to play without fee. This was agreed to. But when at the rehearsal M. Colonne called for the soloist and a small boy appeared carrying his violin, the great French conductor exclaimed in tones of indignant astonishment:

"'What, this is an insult to me. I have conducted for the greatest artists, but never before have I received such an insult.' M. Colonne was urged to hear the boy.

"'Hear him,' he replied, 'no, I will not; he must play with piano-forte accompaniment only.'

"When at night the concert took place, and after Mischa had played Wieniawski's 'Faust' fantasia, M. Colonne, himself a violinist, made his way to the platform and said to the boy:

"'I owe you an apology; I should have considered it an honor to have conducted the orchestra with such a player. My orchestra in Paris is at your disposal, and I will give you a fee never before known there.'"

BACKACHE IS THE FIRST SIGN

Mixture Said to Relieve Lame Back and Prevents Kidney Disease

Take care of backache. A great many cases of kidney complaint are reported about here; also bladder trouble and rheumatism.

An authority once stated that pain in the back, loins or region of the kidneys is the danger signal nature hangs out to notify the sufferer that there is something wrong with the kidneys, which should receive immediate attention. Only vegetable treatment should be administered and absolutely no strongly alcoholic medicines, which are harmful to the kidneys and bladder.

The following prescription, while simple, harmless and inexpensive, is known and recognized as a sovereign remedy for kidney complaint. The ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy and anyone can mix them; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This preparation is said to restore the natural function of the kidneys, so they will sift and strain the poisonous waste matter uric, acid, etc., from the blood, purifying it and relieving rheumatism. Backache will be relieved, the urine will be neutralized and cleared and no longer a cause of irritation, thereby overcoming such symptoms as weak bladder, painful, frequent and other urinary difficulties.

Stamps

The value of the postage stamps issued by the United States government was the subject of discussion at a New York club recently, and in order to determine a disputed point the following information was obtained through the office of the third assistant postmaster general: "For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, the value of 'stamped stock' issued to postmasters was $173,006,476.27. This consisted of 9,331,919,055 pieces of stamped paper and 17,686,800 stamp books. The value of the postal cards for the year was $8,232,119.90 and of the postage stamps $125,310,349. Among the large accounts were: Stamped envelopes, $27,054,983.42; wrappers, $579,883.25."

An English View of Chicago.

Chicago is a city of contrasts. The lawlessness of some of the inhabitants, the love of art, the mixture of squalor and magnificence, confront one on every side. It is safer to have a six shooter in readiness when walking about Chicago at night. Human life seems to be regarded rather lightly, as may be gathered from the fact that in front of the hotel in which my company were residing a man was shot in broad daylight, but so little notice was taken of it that this insignificant occurrence was not even reported in the papers the next morning.—Sir John Hare in London Strand.

On Thanksgiving Day H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was formally iniated—in absentia—as a chiftain of the Turtle Clan, Six Nation Indians, on the Brant reserve.

COSTA RICA.

She Has Not Much Need For Her Army, Such as It Is.

While for generations Central America has been the scene of frequent revolutions and nearly all of the countries there have been torn asunder by civil wars, yet Costa Rica has been exempt from these internal strifes and has remained peaceful and loyal to the constituted authorities. She stands out today as a conspicuous exception to her sister republics, and practically without a navy and with an army of less than a thousand men, the country illustrates, in the habits of the people, in their cordial greeting to foreigners and foreign capital, in the confidence shown in each other and in the justice of the government, that the arts of peace are the best paying investment any nation can make. Her army is rarely needed, and during an interview which I had with her distinguished president, Cleto Gonzales Viques, he told me that revolution at home was out of the question, and as Costa Rica had not had a claim from a foreign country for fifty years there was not much likelihood of an army being needed to fight a foreign foe.

Any healthy Costa Rican between the ages of eighteen and forty may enlist in the army. The soldiers are usually from the poorer class and come from the rural districts, many of them being of Indian descent and having very little education. The period of enlistment is only four months, and at the expiration of that time they may go to their homes or re-enlist, which many of them do. While the greater part of the time is spent at drills, four months' practice is hardly sufficient to make a well disciplined soldier, even if he is anxious to learn and applies himself assiduously, and the Costa Rican soldier has both of these qualities. The army uniform is blue duck, and many of the men are without shoes—as one of them said to me, because he preferred it through force of habit and because he was more comfortable in his bare feet. He was reared in a village where boys rarely wore shoes, and as he grew to manhood the habit still clung to him.—Leslie's Weekly.

Some Names in Harvard.

Three points of the compass are here—North, South and West—and there are Easton and Eastman, but no East. Here, too, are England, France, Ireland and Wales in full and the dwellers of many other countries—viz, Dane, Hun, Lombard, English, French, Scot, Dutch, Pollak, Norman, Rhinelander, Germain, Irish, Switzer and Welch. At a glance we discover Fayerweather, Cloud, Fogg and Gale, Frost and Snow; Rivers, Eddy and Ford; Hill, Highlands, Moors, Field and Meadows; Pool, Pond, Lake, Shore, Lee, Harbor, Haven, Whorf, Dock and Pier; Day, Noon and Morrow, but no Time; Spring, Summer and Winter, but no Autumn. The only Doubt who ever took a degree at Harvard graduated in 1747, just forty years later than Devotion. Gamble, Hazard, Risk and Luck are all on the roll. The body, too, is represented by Head, Arms, Hand, Legg, Shinn, Withers and Foot. For wear there are Brogan and Boote, Bonnet, Belt, Cappa, Collar, Cape, and so on. Blight, Dole and Paine are balanced by Bliss and Joy, Wanton by Virtue, Noyes by Still, Moody and Cross by Smile and Gay, Stout by Leen, Short by Long, Far by Nye, Savage by Sweet, Poor by Rich.—Harvard Graduates' Magazine.

Only Self Supporting.

It is told that Cyrus Leland, while pushing his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, wrote a letter to a Kansas farmer asking him for his support at the primary.

"Answer this letter, daughter," said the farmer to his fifteen-year-old girl, of whose penmanship he was proud, when the letter reached him. "Tell Uncle Cy that I am too busy in the field to do anything for him. Tell him I'm working early and late to get in my crops."

The girl waited until her father had gone back to his fields and then penned this short note, which she thought told the story, "Papa has all he can do to support himself without supporting anybody else." She mailed it.—Kansas City Journal.

A General's Hobby.

General Sir Beauchamp Duff is generally understood to be the most probable successor to Lord Kitchener in the supreme command in India, and this will be a fitting reward for one who has a very fine military record for hard, unremitting work. A short time ago another officer was trying hard to find out General Duff's recreations. "Do you play bridge?" he asked. "Not much," replied the general. "Billiards perhaps?" "Very little." "Chess?" "Badly." "Any outdoor sports?" "At rare intervals." The interrogator then lost his patience. "Then what on earth do you do?" "The rarest thing possible in the British army," was Duff's reply. "I work."—London Tatler.

Grieg's Tomb.

The last resting place of the great Norwegian composer, Edward Grieg, is one of the most beautiful in its natural surroundings that could be imagined. By the side of a lake, at the extremity of a fiord, close to the composer's native town of Bergen, there is a natural grotto formed in the solid rock, which rises precipitously from the water's edge. Here the remains of the famous musician are interred. The grotto is only accessible from the lake. The town of Bergen intends to erect a concert hall in memory of the composer, which will bear his name and where Grieg's works will be performed in preference to others.

Iridescent Glass.

Glass is made iridescent by being exposed in a redhot condition to the fumes of salts of tin, barium and strontium. Red is produced by the strontia and bluish white by the tin. In ancient glass, which is more opaque, iridescence is due to partial decay.

THE SECRET SERVICE.

Chief Wilkie's Methods of Fighting the Counterfeiters.

Under Chief Wilkie's administration the entire country has been divided into districts, to which certain operatives are regularly assigned to cover the routine work in each particular territory. In case of emergency they are assisted by special men detailed from headquarters at Washington or by members of the secret field force who are constantly traveling over the country. Chief Wilkie is always to be found at headquarters except on the infrequent occasions when he deems a case of sufficient importance to take personal charge of the field work.

One of the most valuable features at headquarters is the private "rogues' gallery," a cabinet which contains the photograph of practically every man who has ever won a place in the history of counterfeiting. This cabinet is used in connection with a filing system, or identification bureau, which enables the secret service to place its hands at any time upon the history and achievements of two or three generations of coin makers. With material furnished by several hundred arrests every year these files contain records of romance and adventure that if elaborated would surpass anything ever written in fiction.

There are stories of the Johnson family, the Moses gang, William E. Brockway and others who are remembered as having produced paper notes which for skill and excellence of workmanship rivaled those turned out by the government's own engravers.

It is a maxim of the secret service that the plate is more dangerous than the man, and an operative will never rest until he has laid his hands on the plates from which a counterfeit issue has been printed. By the same token, the engraver is the most important man in a gang of counterfeiters—they usually work in groups—as upon his skill depends the success or failure of their work.—George Lewis in Van Norden's.

The Way the Japanese Live.

"Japanese dishes fail to satisfy American cravings," says General Philip Reade in a letter to the Army and Navy Journal. "Imagine a diet without milk, bread, butter, jam, coffee, salad or any sufficient quantity of nicely cooked vegetables, without pudding, stewed fruit and with comparatively little fresh fruit. The European vegetarian will find as much difficulty in making anything out of it as the ordinary meat eater. Along the main railroad artery neat little boxes of Japanese food (bento) are offered for sale at the principal stations at a cost of 7½ cents; also pots of tea, including teapot and earthen teacup, for 2 cents. The bento may contain in neat separate compartments prawn, fish, chicken, rice, preserved ginger, johnnycake, omelet, a broiled mushroom, a slice of radish, glazed beans, some kind of sweet pickle, tripe, a slice of cooked chestnut, licorice, etc. The bento is inviting to the eye, is garnished in green, is neatly wrapped and the contents varied as the resources of the locality admit."

Yankee Captain Cobb.

On their recent visit to Melbourne, Australia, the sailors of the American round the world fleet saw the style and title of a famous countryman, Captain Freeman Cobb. It was he who in the early fifties established the coaching firm of Cobb & Co., which became a household word all over Australia. There were few railways at that time, and Cobb's six horsed coaches became the regular means of communication between Melbourne and Ballarat, Bendigo and most of the other up country gold fields. "That cute Yankee Captain Freeman Cobb," says the London Chronicle, "who saw the opportunity and grasped it, soon returned to America with a handsome fortune, but Cobb & Co. is still at the head of the coaching business in Australia."

Elephant Ivory.

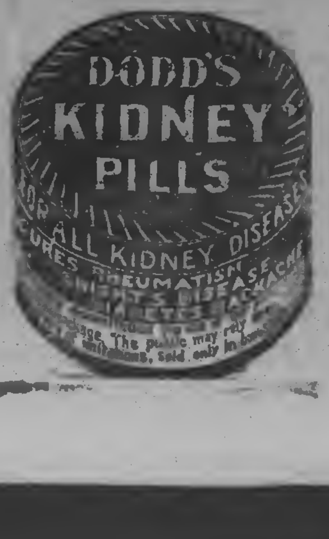
Fifty pounds of ivory is the average yield of one elephant.

The I. O. U.

The Italian bankers from Lombardy who settled in England in the earlier half of the sixteenth century were the inventors of bills of exchange, promissory notes and other negotiable securities, but they did not introduce I O U's, which were a distinctly British invention and "were very infrequently to be regarded as valuable or negotiable."

Patagonia.

Patagonia means "large footed." The country of that name has disappeared from the map of South America, having been absorbed by the Argentine Republic.



More proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures sick women.

Miss M. R. Morin, 335 Ontario St., Montreal, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I was in very poor health and doctored for months, receiving very little benefit. I had lost all ambition, was nervous, and subject to dizzy spells and painful periods each month.

"A friend suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as the proper medicine for me. I procured a bottle of this remedy and began taking, and before it was finished, I felt so much better that I continued its use and gave it a thorough test, with the result I am to-day well and a much healthier girl than I was three years ago. I have no more painful periods, dizziness or nervous troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Eggs—Firm; unchanged; receipts, 8177.

CATTLE MARKETS.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—London cables for cattle are steady at 11¼c to 13c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 11c to 11¾c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market were large, 114 carloads being reported by the railways, composed of 1970 cattle, 904 hogs, 2043 sheep and lambs, with 66 calves.

Exporters.

None were offered and none were wanted, as there is little or no shipping space available. A few bulls were on sale, but even the best of these were not bought for export purposes. Two choice bulls, 1700 lbs. each, sold at $4.50 per cwt.

Butchers.

Prime picked cattle were scarce, and worth as much as export cattle, ranging from $4.75 to $5; but $5 per cwt. was refused for two very choice animals, good enough for the Christmas or any other market. The best loads of butchers' cattle sold all the way from $4.25 to $4.60, but there were very few brought the latter figure, as will be seen by sales given below. Medium butchers' sold from $3.75 to $4 per cwt.; common, at $3.25 to $3.50; cows, $2.25 to $3.60; canners, $1 to $2 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report the run of stockers not as large as was expected, but with the exception of the good to choice feeders, trade was on the draggy side. There were many farmers and dealers looking for good quality feeders, which remained firm in price. The Messrs. Murby report prices as follows: Best feeders, 950 to 1050 lbs. each, at $3.60 to $4; best feeders, 850 to 950 lbs. each, at $3.40 to $3.75; best stockers, 650 to 800 lbs. each, at $3 to $3.40; common and medium stockers, $2 to $2.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Good to choice milkers met a strong market, but common light cows and late springers were not in demand. Buyers were here from Montreal, as it seems to be hard to satisfy their demands. Medium to good cows sold from $45 to $65 each, and extra choice quality cows brought $70.

Veal Calves.

Calves sold at $3 to $6.25 per cwt. Those sold at $3 are a disgrace to any market, and especially to the farmer that raised them. But they all find a market.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were large and prices easy. Export ewes, $3.25 to $3.40; rams, $2 to $2.50. lambs, $4 to $4.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts were not large, only 904 from all sources. Mr. Harris quotes selects at $6.25, fed and watered, and lights at $6 per cwt.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 1250 head. fairly active and 10c lower; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.50; butchers', $4.50 to $5.55; heifers, $3.50 to $5.40; bulls, $3 to $4.40.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,300 head; slow and steady; heavy, $5.90 to $6; mixed, $5.75 to $5.90; yorkers, $5 to $5.80; pigs, $4 to $4.90; roughs, $5 to $5.50; dairies, $5.25 to $5.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 3500 head; slow; sheep, steady; lambs, 15c lower, lambs, $4 to $6.10; yearlings, $4 to $4.65.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Beeves—Receipts, 1044; no trading in live cattle; feeling weak. Exports to-day, 761 cattle, and 518 sheep; to-morrow, 4750 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 711; veals, quiet, but about steady; barnyard calves, dull; westerns, steady; veals, $5 to $9; barnyard calves, $3.25; light westerns, $5 to $5.75.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 5110; sheep, steady, at $2.50 to $4.12½; culls, $1.50 to $2.25; lambs, $4.50 to $6.12½; culls, $3.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 6300; feeling steady; state hogs, $5.90.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 7000; market was barely steady; steers, $4.60 to $7.50; cows, $3 to $5.25; heifers, $2.50 to $4.60; bulls, $2.75 to $4.50; calves, $3 to $7.50; stockers and feeders, $2.50 to $4.85.

Hogs—Receipts estimated at 35,000; market 5c to 10c lower; choice heavy shipping, $5.80 to $5.90; butchers, $5.75 to $5.85; light mixed, $5.40 to $5.55; packing, $5.50 to $5.85; pigs, $4.25 to $5.35; bulk of sales, $5.60 to $5.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts estimated at 20,000; market 10c to 15c higher; sheep, $4.25 to $5; lambs, $4.75 to $6.10; yearlings, $4 to $5.50.

Cheese Markets.

CAMPBELLFORD, Ont., Nov. 17.—There were 421 boxes boarded; 316 sold at 11¾c; balance at 11¾c.

Made $20,000 by Begging.

Detroit, Nov. 18.—On information that Nikola George, an Italian, who formerly lived in Chicago, accumulated a fortune of $20,000, largely by professional begging, United States immigration officials barred the man as an undesirable when he attempted to return to the United States side after a two years' residence in Ottawa, Ont., and he is staying now in Windsor, with his wife and seven children, in the hope of getting across the border later on.

He was also turned back at Niagara Falls.

Well Battered.

A Frenchman can claim more accidents than perhaps any other man. He commenced by injuring both hands in a circular saw; then in turn he broke both shinbones, fractured two ribs, broke both arms, crushed one foot and fractured his skull.

Holly grows in all northern European countries as well as in Canada and the United States.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rambling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

OBITUARY

JOSEPHINE ELLIOTT.

The many friends of Josephine Elliott will learn with deep regret of her death which occurred at Nicholls hospital last evening at seven o'clock. She was only fifteen years of age and had been ill about three weeks. She underwent an operation for appendicitis a few days ago, which resulted in her death.

She attended the Collegiate Institute and was a general favorite among her companions, who feel keenly her sad demise. She was also a member of Mark-st. Methodist Sunday school.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her grandfather, Mr. Joseph Barnard, 114 Dufferin street, Ashburnham, on Friday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery.

IN FAVOR OF THE NEGATIVE

Country is Not Bettered by Return of Laurier Government---St. Andrew's Young Men Hold Debate

According to the Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's church, the Laurier Government should have been defeated as the country was not benefitted by their administration.

The regular monthly meeting of the Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's church was held last evening when a debate resolved, "That the country is bettered by the return of the Laurier administration." The affirmative was taken by Messrs. W. S. Campbell and Peter A. Korr, while the negative was upheld by Messrs. William Langford, jr., and Robert McCullough. The debate was very interesting and was carried on in a very friendly manner. Both sides did well and showed research among the local papers. Mr. Potter acted as critic and advised that in future debates the arguments be not based on much of the party press.

The judges returned their verdict in favor of the negative. It was suggested that Sir Wilfrid Laurier be notified of this fact, but as he is now on his way to California for a well earned rest, the message will be delayed until he has regained his strength.

Refreshments were served by the Executive Committee at the close of the meeting, and then adjourned until Tuesday, Dec. 16th, when it is expected that the Astronomical Society will be the guests of the Guild.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

WORLD'S GREATEST DRAMATIC SOPRANO

Madam Emma Calve to be Heard Again at the Russell Theatre, Ottawa on Friday Evening, November 20th

The coming of Madam Emma Calve is a musical event, be it in haughty, artistic Boston or in Ottawa, where the great diva will sing at the Russell theatre on Friday evening Nov. 20th. As a matter of fact her appearance anywhere is but proof that the city is the centre of culture and musical refinement, for a Calve event is an expensive coming, and but few points in America are able to afford it. A mistake is often made that a great diva sings but to the wealthy. It may be true in the matter of bringing the prima donna, but while ladies in society, in laces and diamonds may listen with the city's best manhood clad in swallowtails and intelectuality, the favorite children of masses are the overwhelming majority—the musicians of the city, where musical education is bettered especially by such a mistress of technique as Calve.

That Calve is the most welcome of foreign singers is undoubtedly true. And why. Because she is a dramatic soprano. Other lyric sopranos please the ear, but Calves goes further. She eddresses herself to the emotion and affections of the soul. She makes you feel what she feels, be it in the profound Stances de Sapho or the magnificent Hananera in both of which the pretty diva will be heard during the Ottawa concert.

Madam Calve will have two associates, Brahm van den Berg, a Dutch pianist of marvelous touch and technique, and Carl Klein, a wondermaster of his violin.

During the concert Calve will also sing the beautiful Mysoli air, with its liquid echoing cadenzas, while the dramatic wonder of the evening will undoubtedly be the Habanera from "Carmen" without which no Calve programme would be complete. On this occasion it will be the last number of a very interesting programme.

Write, wire or telephone for seats.

NATURAL GAS AT KIRKFIELD

Has Been Found on Farm Near the Village---Burned Well When Lighted

Kirkfield, Nov. 17.—Natural gas in a well on one of Mr. Wm. Mackenzie's farms in the village, has been found. Some time ago, two men, Mr. J. J. Lee and Mr. Geo. Harrison, commenced working in the well drilling and blasting, when at the depth of about 32 feet they discovered gas escaping. The man, to be sure it was gas, thought they would try and light it. Mr. Lee at once lighted a match and sure enough they had gas light to work by and Mr. Geo. Harrison at once lighted his pipe by it.

ARCHDEACONRY OF PETERBORO' IN CONVENTION AT LINDSAY

Clergy and Laymen From This City in Attendance—New Officers Were Elected—Interesting Paper Read By the Rev. H. R. Trumpour.

Lindsay, Nov. 17.—The 12th annual conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough, is now in session in Lindsay in St. Paul's church, and the various ministers in the district are in attendance. Services commenced last evening and resumed this morning. The conference will last all day to-morrow as well.

MINISTERS PRESENT.

Rev. Allen, Millbrook; Rev. Barber, Bobcaygeon; Rev. Battersby, Essonville; Rev. Ben O'Liel, Cobourg; Rev. Carrol, Bowmanville; Rev. Creighton, Lakefield; Rev. Daniel, Port Hope; Canon Davidson, Peterborough; Rev. French, Fenelon Falls; Rev. Jones, Port Hope; Rev. Kidd, Blackstock; Dr. Langfeldt, Peterborough; Rev. Lord, Apsley; Rev. McLean, Shanty Bay; Rev. Reed, Campbellford; Rev. Soward, Minden; Rev. Spencer, Young's Point; Archdeacon Sweeney, Toronto; Rev. Teeney, Omemee; Rev. Tremayne, Toronto; Rev. Trumpour, Peterborough; Archdeacon Warren, Toronto.

LAYMEN PRESENT.

Mr. Devey, Peterborough; Mr. Jenkins, Campbellford; Mr. Kingdon, Peterborough; Mr. Stuart, Young's Point; Mr. Kennedy, Bobcaygeon; Mr. Bemister, Haliburton; Mr. Ajer, Peterborough.

EVENSONG WORSHIP.

Evensong was held in the church last night, Rev. J. H. Teney, of Omemee, preaching the sermon.

Rev. H. R. Trumpour, of Peterborough, took the opening service, while Rural Dean Allen, of Millbrook, took the second part of the prayers, Rev. Mr. Spencer, of Young's Point, read the first lesson, while Dr. Langfeldt, of Peterborough, read the second lesson.

Rev. Mr. Teney then preached an impressive sermon on the text, "And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us (and we beheld its glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth." The minister told of the desire of man, who had always been for a God they could see and feel. God sent Christ. His Son, to the earth, and He appeared in the form of man with the spirit of God. This was the incarnation of Christ. This also was the word made flesh as told of in the text.

MORNING SERVICE.

Matins and Holy Communion were observed in St. Paul's church this morning, and were attendedd by a number of the laity and the visiting clergy.

NEW OFFICERS.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—

Secretary—Rev. W. J. Creighton, of Lakefield.

Council of Archdeaconry, the three appointed by the archbishop— Rev. W. C. Allen, of Millbrook; Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, of Peterborough, and Rev. John Lindsay, of Haliburton. The three elected were Rev. Mr. Craggo, of Cobourg; Rev. J. H. Teney, of Millbrook and Rev. A. C. Commer, of Kinmount. The lay members elected were: Mr. Comber, Bobcaygeon; Mr. Stewart, Young's Point, and Mr. Bemister, of Haliburton.

IDEALS OF CLASSES.

"The Present Ideals of the Various Classes in Canada," was the subject of a paper read by Rev. H. R. Trumpour, M.A., B.D., of Peterborough.

The paper was an excellent one and the subject was dealt with in comprehensive style.

"Class distinction in Canada," he said, "is different from that in England, and is largely attached to the kind of the work chosen. In the discussion of every class, there is infinite room for debate. Canada is a new country and opportunity is rife everywhere. Now, it seems to most people, is the only time to get on. Every one is looking for self, yet few possess the generosity of Canadians. The spirit of self belongs to all the classes alike.

If ever there was a class in which there should be no "tares" it is the political class. No man should be allowed to get into politics who does not endeavor to use his influence for patriotic purposes.

Even in the civic bodies the elections are not always decided upon merit and the men who are the best are not always elected.

The teaching class has a high ideal. From his own experience the speaker told of the enthusiasm of the teachers in Canada despite poor pay, loss of social position and hard work, the efforts put forth oftentimes being not appreciated as it should. The teaching profession has been placed in a wrong class by many who use it only as a stepping stone to some other occupation.

OTHER CLASSES.

The ministerial class was also touched upon by the speaker. The newspaper class, he thought, had a common ideal with the ministry, the educating of the public. Newspapers should publish only that which tends to the betterment of humanity.

No class has made a greater advancement than the farming class. The farmers seem to be interested in their profession and are elevating their work, which is the backbone of the nation. The farmer's mind to-day is progressive and progress is a fine ideal.

The absorbing classes were touched upon, and the speaker then dwelt with the class of women who are earning their own livings. What is the ideal of the class of women who are earning their bread? The ideals of home are lessened and the wages of men are lowered. The speaker did not give his own opinions on the question but said that he could not agree that wage earning independence was an ideal in life.

Referring to the business men and manufactures, the speaker said that the ideal of this class was honesty. To make good was the aim of all business men, and enterprise is the very essence of existence. In Canada huge monopolies which will crush out or enslave small dealers are not wanted. The United States ideals of business men are not wanted in Canada. He spoke of the support the merchants give to the good work of the church.

The paper created a good deal of interesting discussion, after which an adjournment was made for luncheon.

MEDIAEVAL STATE OF LAND TITLES IN HALIBURTON

Nine Townships Held By Canadian Land and Emigration Company, and Known as the Dysart Municipality

The Minden Echo of last week has an article of considerable interest, and it is reprinted in full below:—

"Our attention has been called to an article appearing in the columns of our Lindsay and Peterborough contemporaries referring to the medieval state of the land titles in a large portion of the provisional county of Haliburton, comprising the nine townships held by the Canadian Land and Emigration Company, which is known as the Dysart municipality.

"Having in our possession the exact particulars showing the reservations and conditions of the title given the ordinary settler purchasing land from this company, it will be seen that the purchaser really has less control of his supposed freehold than would be conveyed by an ordinary lease; true, he can plough and sow the arable land on his property, but even that is liable at any time to cut up by roads (to remove timber or minerals without any compensation whatever for the damage incurred thereby; in fact, we are quite justified in saying that everything except the use of the surface soil and heaven's free air above it is reserved by the company. The following is a true copy of the reservations of one of the company's deeds to a settler: 'And also subject and reserving to the parties of the first part all pine and other timber and woods on the said lands together with full license and liberty to the parties of the first part, the heirs, executors successors or or assigns or licensees after giving due notice to the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns to enter on the said lands with their workmen and servants, horses, carts, teams and other appliances as may be necessary to cut down and remove and carry off the said timber and wood, making for this purpose all needful roads and ways: but with the liberty to the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, after receiving such notice to elect themselves or himself to cut the same for the said parties of the first part, the said party of the second part, his heirs and assigns receiving from the said parties of the first part for all timber so cut by him or them and delivered to the said parties of the first part as paying for cutting similar timber from their own lots in the neighborhood, a schedule of prices will be published by the parties of the first part at the commencement of each lumbering season, reserving also to the said parties of the first part all quarries of stone and marble and mines, ore, metals, phosphates, minerals and all springs of mineral, oil or gas in or under the said land, whether already discovered or not, with full power and liberty to the parties of the first part, their heirs, executors, successors and assigns or licenses for all time to come, to enter upon the aforesaid lands and premises, explore for, work and mine the same, and with their workmen, and servants, horses carts and teams, and such other appliances as may be necessary to carry off and remove the same for their own use and benefit, and for this purpose to make and use all needful roads and other works upon and through the aforesaid premises."

MASONIC LODGE OF INSTRUCTION

Will be Held in Peterborough on November 25th

A lodge of instruction for the twentieth district will be held in the Masonic hall here on Wednesday, Nov. 25th. There will be an afternoon and evening session and it is expected that a number of brethren of the craft from lodges in the district will be in attendance.

WEDDING BELLS

REESOR—ESSON

A very happy event took place recently at the home of Mr. Allen Esson, Otonabee, when his eldest daughter, Winnifred, was united in marriage to Mr. C. B. Reesor, of Toronto.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. D. Harrison, of Keene, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride, who was becomingly and appropriately gowned in bridal dress and veil and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses, was given away by her father.

After the ceremony the company sat down to a well prepared and dainty repast.

On their return they will reside in Toronto. The bride, who was a general favorite, will be greatly missed from the social and church circles, where she was so well known.

John B. Cudney's barn in Niagara township was destroyed by fire and four horses lost.

MURRAY STREET BOYS ORGANIZE

And Will Enter Team in the Church Hockey League

An enthusiastic meeting of the Murray street Baptist Boys' was held in the basement of the church last night when it was decided to organize a young men's association.

There were a large number present and all were anxious for the organization. Mr R J Kidd was elected to the chair and the following officers were elected;

Hon Pres., T. F. Matthews.
Pres, R Harding.
Vice Pres, Ray Scott.
Secretary, Kernegan.
Treasurer, Harold Matthews.
Organist, Norman Wilson.

The boys decided to have a hockey team as there is a lot of good material among them, a seven fast enough to win the Church League championship should be selected. This is the first time the Murray street Baptist church have had a hockey team and there is no reason why they should not have a good one start. The young men will also go in for other athletic games to be decided on later.

Another meeting will be held a week from Friday night to complete arrangements, and after that they will meet every Friday night.

WHITE DEER HAS BEEN SHOT IN HASTINGS

Picton, Nov. 17.—Something unusual in animal kingdom has just been captured by Prince Edward hunters and brought home. It is a white deer, pure white in color, save two small black spots back of its ears. The animal is a fine looking one of the male specie and weight about two hundred pounds. It is understood that Mr. Grant Sprague, of Big Island, was the lucky shot. The animal was shot in the northern part of Hastings or Lennox and Addington.

Cases Reported in the Lumber Camps---Men Striking for Peterborough

Dr. Bell, of Lakefield, was in the city last evening, and it is reported that he confirmed the statement that there was smallpox in the north of Peterborough county. It is said that it is quite prevalent in the lumber camps in Cavendish and Anstruther townships. A telephone message from Lakefield last evening was to the effect that several of the employees were down with the disease, and some of the men had left the camps for Peterborough to get away from the infected ones. The cases are not reported serious.

WORK OF MISS WALLIS PRAISED BY MONTREAL PRESS

Exhibit in That City Spoken of Highly—Many Were in Attendance.

The Montreal Star says;

A small exhibition which is nevertheless very interesting as it represents the work of a Canadian woman in a field comparatively seldom entered by members of her sex, opens this afternoon at the Art Gallery, Phillips square.

The collection which Montrealers are now given an opportunity of seeing for the first time consists of a dozen or so of the works of Miss Katherine E. Wallis, sculptor, with whom is associated Prof. Oscar Waldmann, of Paris, who has on exhibition a number of studies and bronzes.

Miss Wallis who resides in Peterborough has lived abroad for a number of years, studying in London at the South Kensington School of Art, and subsequently continuing her studies in Paris with Prof. Waldmann, and also in Germany. The work done by Miss Wallis is highly creditable, and shows evidences of much industry and careful study. The collection is on exhibition in the New Gallery and makes up in general excellence what it lacks in size.

Miss Wallis has been successful in her profession, having had several of her works accepted by the Salon and her chief work. "Mercury Charmed by his own Invention" and carried out in stone, is now the property of the Ontario Government. It was exhibited in Paris in 1904 at the Salon des Artistes Francais, and was later despatched to Toronto, where Miss Wallis learned that the Provincial Museum wished to secure a work by a Canadian artist and would give hers careful consideration.

Among the examples of her work on exhibition in Montreal at present that which is likely to command most attention is "Mon Petit Chou," a delightful bronze of a charming straight backed little baby with an expression at once appealing and characteristic. The modelling in this little figure is excellent and the pose natural and pleasing. Another clever study and one of the best things submitted by Miss Wallis is a rat in stone the body so posed that while it escapes being strained it gives every opportunity for the exercise of skill in its careful modelling.

"The Pied Piper" a bronze statuette shows Miss Wallis' conception of the musician who by his magic notes called the children to him. The figure is carefully posed and shows life and motion. At the feet of the Piper lies the figure of a child, while climbing up and over the base of the statuette come the rats which followed his piping. A pleasing little study carried out in "terre cuite" is "The Grandfather," a clever modelling of the bent figure of an old man bearing on his back a child. A thoughtful portrait study of a young woman is also in "terre cuite."

Among the bronzes is "Brotherly Love" also the study of a dachshund. A pane portrait of interest is that of "Helen Sarah Roger," in etain; a pleasing bust is that in marble, "August's Child."

Prof. Waldmann, who is a Swiss by birth has long resided in Paris, where he is well known as a sculptor and teacher and has exhibited at the Salon for the past 25 years. Although noted for his portrait work, he is perhaps at his best in his studies of animals. He is not only a sculptor but a craftsman who, on occasions casts his own bronzes. He is well known for his porcelain and "cire perdue, examples of the latter being in the possession of one or two of Montreal's art collectors.

In the present exhibition at the Art Gallery one of the most prominent among the bronzes is Prof. Waldmann's "Jeanne d'Arc" showing the great heroine of France prior to the time when she had assumed the work her spirit voices urged her to do. The statuette shows a slight, girlish figure dignified and thoughtful and possessing a sort of nobility which the simple garment of the peasant maid cannot hide. Another very interesting bronze is that of a tigress and a snake which shows much cleverness in both modelling and composition. A tiger and a mouse in "gris pince" also attracts and holds the attention. Prof. Waldmann also has on exhibition several studies of lions as well as an oxidized silver figuerine intended for a salt cellar. There is a clever study of a bear in "terre cuite" and there is also shown one of Prof. Waldmann's bas relief portraits in biscuit.

H. G. Downie, aged thirty-eight, a hide dealer left Brockville on Oct. 16 for Sarnia and has not been heard of since.

H. S. Holt will likely succeed the late Thos. E. Kenny as president of the Royal Bank.

SPORTING NEWS

LINDSAY AND BROCKVILLE PLAY HERE ON SATURDAY

Peterborough fans will have an opportunity of seeing another rugby game this year, when Lindsay and Brockville, winners of their respective districts, play a sudden death game at Riverside Park in the junior O.R.F.U. semi-finals. The winners of the game will play the winners of the Eureka-Capital game in Toronto next Saturday.

Secretary Gladish, of the O.R.F.U., wired Joe Hay of the P.B.C., and former secretary of the above body, asking him to make arrangements for the grounds here. Lindsay and Brockville play rugby up to the intermediate standard and should draw a big gate. It is expected that Brockville will be accompanied by several supporters, while a big crowd is sure to come from Lindsay as a special will be run from that town for the match.

FRED WHITCROFT AND HIS MEN OFF FOR EDMONTON

Left the City This Morning Accompanied by Steve Vair and Lindsay of Renfrew—Western Town Will Have Great Septette—The Makeup of the Team.

Fred W. Whitcroft who has been down from Edmonton this last month looking up some new material for his prospective Stanley Cup challengers left this morning for the West. He was accompanied by Steve Vair and Lindsay, last year with Renfrew, and will be met in Toronto by McNamara of the Montreal Shamrocks. They all think that the western town will have one of the fastest teams that ever came east in quest of the precious piece of silverware donated by Lord Stanley.

Vair and Lindsay have been in Peterborough for the last few days and both speak highly of their great hockey team. Fred Whitcroft speaking to a friend before his departure said that hockey players are pretty scarce just now, that is, the kind that go to make up a team that is competent to journey so far for the Stanley Cup. But he said he was determined to get the best in the market at any cost.

There was quite a crowd of hockey enthusiasts at the station to see the boys off, and they all wished them the best of luck and a safe trip for their long journey to the prairie town.

Goal, Lindsay, Renfrew; defence, Roy Brow, Brantford and Hugh Ross, Portage; forwards, McNamara and Jimmie Gardner, of the Montreal Shamrocks; Vair of Renfrew and Whitcroft and Miller of last year's Edmonton team, and there are perhaps more to come.

MAHMOUT AND YANKEE ROGERS

The Turk and American Will Battle at Sohmer Park on Friday

Montreal, Nov. 18.—Yussiff Mahmout, the celebrated Turk, and Yankee Rogers, the well-known wrestler, who has been seen to advantage in Montreal on many occasions, will meet at Sohmer Park on Friday night in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match, the best two falls out of three to count.

Mahmout, the huge, beturbaned Turk, is an object of curiosity in New York at the moment whither he he came from his rocky home to win laurels and money in a foreign land. He arrived in New York with the object in view of meeting Gotch, but the latter left for Europe and poor Mahmout was sadly disappointed. He then looked around for other con. He then looked around for other conquests and his match with Yankee Rogers resulted. Mahmout is a typical warrior.

Dorando Has Arrived

New York, Nov. 17.—Dorando Pietri, the Italian runner, who crossed the tape in the Marathon race at the Olympic games in London ahead of John J. Hayes, the American contestant, who was afterwards declared the winner owing to the disqualification of the Italian, arrived here to-day on the Kron Prinzessin Cecilie, and will attempt to arrest the Marathon honor from Hayes in a specially arranged race.

The race will take place in Madison Square Gardens on Thanksgiving evening, and will be the same distance as the Marathon, 26 miles 385 yards. Dorando was accompanied by his brother, Ulipio, who has been acting as his trainer.

SPORTING TALK

Here's wishing good luck to Lindsay in their struggle for the junior honors of the ORFU.

The Lindsay Warder with its sporting news and "Live Wire" corner has a nice little bit of a sporting kingdom.

One sporting editor is suing another for libel in Hamilton. That sort of thing is getting to be the fashion now, after the Edwards-Mottashed-Munday incident. Take warning Peterborough.—Lindsay Warder.

Take warning is right.

The supporters of rugby are trying to prove that the game is not brutal by citing the fact that only eight have been killed playing the game. It is agreed that rugby isn't brutal and while the deaths were presumably accidental the holding up of a death list, however, small is bad policy.

Toronto News; Cyclone Mack, the Irish lightweight wrestler, who was defeated by Eugene Tremblay, of Montreal, in Montreal Friday night, blew into the Grand Central Hotel this morning. He is here looking for a match with any man under the welter weight limit.

I'd rather be a lobster than a wise guy,
For things often don't come out just as the book says,
And the lobster is the wise guy after all.

Melville Robinson, sporting editor of the Hamilton Spectator has been committed for trial on the charge of libel, for saying things in his paper about (F G) Mills, sporting editor of the Hamilton Times. The local papers had better be wary at the time of the Examiner-Review hockey match

Efforts are bing made to have Bob Harrison referee the bout between Edmunds and Tremblay in Toronto on Friday night. Harrison is an old time performer and has not been heard of for some time in connection with wrestling. His bout a few years ago with Tom Doyle is well remembered by many local sports.

There is no doubt about it, the Burridge-Fitzpatrick bout at the roller rink next Tuesday will be one of the liveliest ever seen in Peterborough. Both men are in condition for a long and hard bout and are training faithfully every day. The matter is causing a great deal of comment and a larger house than usually greets a wrestling match, is expected to attend.

In fact it is the general opinion that the audience will be the biggest since the go between Hurtubise and Yankee Rogers last May.

Cyclone Mack, the Irish champion, who was bumped to defeat by Eugene Tremblay at Sohmer park, last Friday night, picks Tremblay to beat Edmunds twice in an hour when the two meet in Toronto on Friday. Mack is simply going, however, on the comparatively easy way he was defeated by the strong French-Canadian and doesn't know Edmunds who is the greatest little man of his weight the world ever knew. From here it looks as though Tremblay couldn't do it.

FEMALE REFEREE WAS VERY STRICT

Innovation at Football Match at Toledo Ohio

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 17.—Skirts swished and a Tam-o'-Shanter bobbed merrily this afternoon at Central Grove park, where Sophia Henry, a Toledo girl refereed a football game between the West Toledo and Lincoln elevens.

Rushing pell mell into a hot scrimmage, she pulled the ball out of the hands of a player who had tried to illegally take it, place it where it ought to be, and whistled for play to go on. The teams were so startled when she jumped into them that they forgot their signals.

A well-fitting sweater, neat blue skirt, and nobby "tam" were not in her way at all and the way she stepped around and took care of plays, was enough to convince the hundreds present that she knew the rules and was there to enforce them.

"The ball goes back to the place where the play started and Lincolns are penalized fifteen yards," she yelled above the babble of the players.

"What for," demanded the Lincoln captain, angrily. "The ball—"

"Never mind the talk—the ball was dead as soon as it hit the ground, as it was an attempted forward pass," came the snapping answer, and the Lincoln leader went to his position.

O.R.F.U. EXECUTIVE HELD MEETING

To-day's Globe says;—The Executive Committee of the Ontario Rugby Football Union met yesterday afternoon at the T.A.A.C. house and straightened out the arrangements for the junior semi-finals. The matter of a new secretary was not dealt with because of the unconstitutionality of the petition from the three clubs which were active in the matter.

In the local group Capitals and Eurekas are tied and will play off at the Brock Avenue grounds on Saturday. An effort was made to get the Rosedale field but it had already been engaged for another purpose. E. M. Johnson and Tommy Hay were appointed referee and umpire respectively for the Saturday game.

Lindsay and Brockville, winners of the respective eastern groups, will play Saturday, probably at Peterborough. The winners of this semi-final will meet the winners of the Eureka-Capital game for the championship on November 28th, a week from Saturday. The scene of this final game has not been decided upon:

A SENIOR DISTRICT

Eddie Gould of Lindsay Wants to Form One---Midland, Barrie, Collingwood and Lindsay

Lindsay, Nov. 17.—Eddie Gould that versatile young hockey player, of Midland, who is also a member of the O.H.A. executive, has a new scheme afoot, and has already mooted the same in Lindsay. It is this; He proposes to organize a senior district in the O.H.A. to comprise teams from Midland, Barrie, Collingwood and Lindsay. He claims that the material is genuine enough to supply the necessary goods. The only drawback will be the distance to travel, and even this he expects to overcome. Financially, he says, it will pay well in each of the four places. This would mean that Lindsay would have to sidetrack Port Hope and Cobourg, which have never been any great bonanza to Lindsay and would probably be classed in the Peterborough category.

ST. ANDREWS' WILL HAVE HOCKEY TEAM

At a meeting of the Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's church last evening the Guild decided to have a hockey team this coming winter. A representative was appointed to interview the Rink Co. to arrange for practices just as soon as the skating season commences.

BOWLING

B.A.C. LEAGUE.

In the first game of the B.A.C. bowling tournament played at the Y.M.C.A. last night, B. T. Huston and Dr. J. E. Middleton defeated Charles Harmer and Charles Sisson by 77 pins in three games. The scores were very creditable. Mr. Huston was high man.

THE NEW LEAGUE.

There will be a meeting of the executive of the new Peterborough Ten Pin League tonight at nine o'clock, at the Peterborough Bowling Club alleys. The schedule committee will meet at seven o'clock.

THE RING

News comes that Tommy Burns met with an accident while out riding near Mount Kosciusko, in Australia, recently. Becoming ambitious Tommy sent his horse at a fence. The nag got over somehow, but Burns landed on a big granite boulder and was severely bruised and shaken. His face was covered with gravel rash and he looked as though he had had a go with Johnson in private. Needless to say horse riding is tabooed in Burns camp now.

WHAT IS ITCH DIRT?

It is the old Anglo-Saxon name for Dandruff, and it's a good one. If you have dandruff you have itch dirt and the little microbes that are part and parcel of dandruff are working persistently night and day and sooner or later will reach the very life of your hair and destroy it's vitality.

Then you will be bald—Bald to stay—for not even the wonderful rejuvenating properties in Parisian Sage can grow hair after the hair bulb or root is dead. Parisian Sage cures Dandruff. Wm. Madill, druggist, Peterborough sells it—recommends it and guarantees it; only 50 cents a large bottle and your money back if it fails to cure Dandruff, Falling Hair and Itching of the Scalp.

Death Was Natural.

Pekin, Nov. 18.—Nothing has developed in Pekin to substantiate the reports that the Emperor of China or the Dowager Empress was poisoned, or otherwise the victims of foul play. All the foreign legations here agree that the Emperor met a natural death. Opinion varies, however, regarding the end of the Dowager Empress.

Two Die In B.C. Wreck.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 18.—Two were killed and one badly injured yesterday morning in a wreck of a Canadian Pacific freight train, which ran into a washout near Lyton.

The locomotive and three cars plunged over the bank into a gully.

Veteran of '37 Dead.

Cornwall, Nov. 18.—Oliver Groves, a veteran of 1837, died yesterday morning, aged 93 years. He was born on the farm where he died. In 1837 he was a member of the Cornwall Horse, and distinguished himself as a despatch rider. While on duty he suffered injuries which brought him a pension.

New Zealand Government Wins.

THAT WAIST.

The Button-It-Up-In-the-Back Variety Causes the Usual Trouble.

Scene—At home.

Discovered—A husband and wife.

She—Dear, do you mind helping me?

He (all ready fifteen minutes before. He has just finished brushing his evening clothes and is now looking over the stock report in the evening paper and smoking a cigarette)—What do you want?

She (her mouth full of hairpins)—Button up this waist, will you?

He (throwing down paper)—Where is the maid?

She—Now, dear, you know this is her afternoon off. Hurry!

He (getting up and walking over back of her. He takes hold of waist at top and starts on top button)—What's the matter with these buttons anyway?

She (sweetly)—Now, don't lose patience. They slip right in if—

He—How do you suppose I can get the thing together when you're squirming like an eel?

She (screwing her head from one side to the other, absorbed in getting her hair right)—You can do it.

He (savagely)—Look here! You keep still! Now I've got to begin all over. (He starts in, his face knotted up in agony and, working frantically, gets three buttons in.) Now! Now! Hold on! I've got 'em going! Keep still! Don't you dare move! There!

"Finished?"

"Yep."

She (standing up)—Oh, you wretch! Don't you see—

He—What the devil is the matter now?

She—Why, don't you see? Can't you see that you've started wrong? It's all got to be done over.

He—D— it! What's the use? We'll stay at home.—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

GOOD NEWS FOR SHAREHOLDERS OF THE YORK LOAN COMPANY

Toronto, Nov. 18— Shareholders of the York County Loan and Savings Company will be glad to hear that the liquidators have received an offer for the unsold real estate of the company which represents an increase in the value of that portion of the company's assets of nearly fifty per cent of the original estimate.

At the date of liquidation the National Trust Company obtained a modest valuation of the real estate which was returned at $870,909.78. They have disposed of nearly $500,000 and have just refused an offer of $700,000 for the balance.

The offer was made two weeks ago by the Assets Realization Company, of Chicago, whose representative Mr. B H Putnam, negotiated through Mr James Bicknell and Mr F D. Robins. The National Trust Company consider the offer altogether too low, as there are between 30,000 and 40,000 feet of frontage unsold. After careful computation they have concluded that they could not recommend the acceptance of an offer under one million dollars. The frontage already sold is about 6000 feet only.

Mr Putnam would not say that he would not negotiate further with the liquidators though he considered he had made a liberal offer. He stated that his company had made a similar arrangement with a bank in Pittsburg and that it was undoubtedly very satisfactory to the shareholders, who, as a class, were always for a prompt settlement.

At the rate the liquidators had been selling it would take fifteen years to sell the balance, and the probable increase in the dividend would perhaps be ten per cent. On the basis of his offer he figured that the shareholders would receive over fifty per cent, which should be gratifying, and better than sixty per cent in fifteen years' time.

PRIZES WERE PRESENTED TO COLLEGIATE SPORTS' WINNERS

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Whoever wrote that letter to your paper entitled "The Suffrage" and recommending the vote to women, knows little about how much trouble we have at present, or he or she would not ask us to bear more burdens than we already have to bear, and I am sure that they are enough, Miss Parkhurst may be a very nice young women, but she is a miss and not a Mrs. If she had children enough already she would not want to be any more than she is with a chance to lie down and take a little rest occasionally from mopping or making pies. If I go out my husband or son will have to stay in, and it will end in the whole house being untidy and looking like old scratch for men are no good to work in the house, its only women. We all have our work to do and when I was asked to say what I think on women voting I can only say what I have said. Are women supposed to work with the pick and shovel, if they vote?

Yours, etc.,
ELIZABETH.

MEN'S RIGHTS

Editor of the Review

Sir,—I enclose the following beautiful tribute to women;—

[illegible]

Here's to woman, lovely woman—
Saddest in her sadness when she's sad,
Gladdest in her gladness when she's glad.
But her sadness when she's sad,
And her gladness when she's glad,
Ain't in it with her badness when she's bad.
Or her madness when she's mad.

In view of the talk going on about female voting, would say I'm agin it. They have had enough to do with making the world what it is without giving them a hammerlock on the whole business.

COMMON SENSE.

A TRADEMAN'S VIEWS

Editor of the Review

Dear Sir,—I would like to take up a few lines in your valuable paper in the interests of the labor and the manufacturers of Peterborough and Canada. It seems to me it is high time the tradesman and laboring man were rising up from their slumbers and waking up to do their duty towards themselves and families. Who is to blame for high prices and scarcity of work? The laboring man, you may say. How is he to blame? Right here is where all workingmen and women have fallen asleep and while they sleep all manufacturers in all lines of trade suffer and why do they suffer? Because all merchants in all lines of trade are combined to hold up prices. The coal merchants charge $7.50 the highest price. How is this? combine. Doctors and grocers and drygoods men of all lines and even milk dealers and bakers all combine to get all the workingman's wages. Why should a man pay a tailor merchant from ten to fourteen dollars for making a suit of clothes? Is it worth more than eight? Is a ton of coal worth more than six? Is a doctor's one or two hours work worth one hundred dollars? Combine. Who pays that? The laborer. Why does a poor man's wife or daughter have to pay from $5 to $14 for a hat that is actually worth $3.50. One or two two weeks' hard labor for one hat. What does this combine? Why does the drygoods merchant send the money you worked hard for, to a foreign country, to give the foreign work, when it ought to come back to Canadian manufacturers and give you a chance to earn another suit of clothes. Combine. It seems presumption on the part of the laborer to cry no work and at the same time buy from product. If all the Canadian manufacturers in all lines, and all labor and tradesmen would combine and have their own merchants and fuel dealers and doctors and demand home product, as far as possible, the manufacturer would have all they could do and the workmen would have lots of work, and all lines of trade would boom. It is high time the labor and manufacturer cut out foreign dealer and local combines, and have a combine to protect themselves, instead of looking after foreign interest and refuse to buy foreign goods and give your money to others to bank when you could bank some for yourself.

Yours very truly.
TRADESMAN.

ST. JAME'S CHURCH

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—I will esteem it a favor if you will allow me a little of your valuable space to correct a misapprehension that exists in the minds of some of the Methodist people of Peterborough, and elsewhere, also regarding the origin and status of the St. James' church.

It should be understood that this is not in any sense a one man church, and that it is not the pet scheme of any preacher. The necessity for its organization had been discussed in the boards and committees of the other Methodist churches of the city for years, and the present beginning of operations is the outcome of these discussions. Several influential officials of George street church sustain a vital and creative relation to the enterprise. The three Methodist churches of the city share the responsibility of the undertaking for their boards, in answer to specific questions sent to them by the chairman of the district in May last, voted in favor of the organization of this new church and the Boards of George and Charlotte streets made grants from their funds towards the current expenses for one year and gave permission to solicit subscriptions from the members of their congregation for the building fund. The fact therefore is that the four thousand Methodists of Peterborough, through the votes of their official boards are at the back of this movement. Having been inaugurated in this way and having such a large constituency in sympathy with undertaking its success is assured. The St. James' church will stand as a monument of the aggressive spirit and missionary zeal of the older Methodist churches of Peterborough.

H. M. MANNING.

GOOD ADVICE

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir,—Rev. E. A. Pearson, B. A., gave a very earnest and faithful discourse in the George street Methodist church on Sabbath morning last to an attentive congregation on the church's lack of power, influence and success through the lack of faith, piety and devoutness to God.

In the evening the address was to the unsaved and with great earnestness he urged them to take Christ as their portion and make His service their choice, not next week, not to-morrow, but now.

We could hardly think that the congregation could go to their homes without some serious thinking.

CLAIMS PENSION AT AGE OF 111

Belfast, Nov. 16.—The investigation of old-age pension claims in the county of Donegal has brought to light the fact that several of the claimants are centenarians. Among them is Charles Kelly, residing in the parish Inver, in a wild and mountainous district about six miles north of the little town of Mount Charles.

Kelly has reached the extraordinary age of 111 years. Notwithstanding this his sight and hearing are but slightly impaired, and he still takes an intelligent interest in the working of the little holding on which he resides, which for the last thirty years has been in the possession of his youngest son, Denis, a man approaching his sixtieth year.

He was born about three miles from Mount Charles, and has never lived out of the parish of Inver. He has practically created his little house and holding out of the barren mountain side on which it stands. He jokes with animation on the labors of his early days when he carried on his back from the adjoining moors every stone for the construction of his house. Seen from a distance the little farm, marked by a few trees, stands out like an oasis amid the desert of barren brown heath with which it is surrounded.

He has a vivid recollection of the struggles he underwent in tiding over the awful years of the Irish famine. Remote from towns and unable to read or write, he has but little recollection of historical or political events which took place during his life, but he speaks with sorrow of the friends of his youth, the majority of whom have been carried by emigrant ships across the Atlantic.

SALE OF WORK HAD A LARGE PATRONAGE

Held Under Auspices of Ladies Aid of Mark St. Church Last Evening

The sale of work at Mark street Methodist church last evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, passed off very successfully. During the past several months the ladies have been busy making fancy and useful articles, which last night were offered for sale. Prettily arranged booths were in evidence all around the room and the rapidity with which the goods were disposed of, was very gratifying to those in charge.

The sale opened at five o'clock and continued throughout the evening. Several young ladies gave piano selections and the George-st. orchestra and mandolin club also contributed to the musical part of the programme.

The booths and those in charge were;

Bargain booth—Mrs. Chevrill.

Candy booth—Mrs. H. Gibbs, Mrs. Westlake and Miss Marion Coon.

Fancy and useful articles' booth—Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Smith and Miss Speer.

Mrs. C. H. Coon, Mrs. Smiley and Mrs. McCarthy were a reception committee and the tea room was in charge of Mrs. J. Speer, Mrs. G. Coon, Mrs. Fowler, sr., and Mrs. Albert Fowler.

The proceeds, which were very encouraging, were devoted to the parsonage fund.

Messrs. McCoy and Wilford, who had the contract for the construction of the $50,000 concrete dam at Bobcaygeon, have, as was announced a few days ago, completed the structure, and Mr. Grant, Superintending Engineer of the Trent Valley Canal, Peterborough, will make an official inspection of the dam before it is formally taken over by the Government.

The preliminary work on the structure commenced on the 5th of November, 1907, and there was no interruption to its progress, save for a short time in the spring owing to high water.

The dam is a model of engineering skill and the contractors are being congratulated on the success achieved.

ONE OF THE OLDEST OF THE SCIENCES

Astronomy Took up the Attention of the Ancients --- Interesting Meeting of Local Society

The Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society held a meeting last night in the lecture hall of the Collegiate Institute and there was a good attendance. The speaker of the evening was Dr. Stratton, of Napanee, a gentleman who has taken a keen interest in astronomy and who recently made a trip to the Old Country and was afforded a special opportunity to inspect the Greenwich observatory.

Rev. Mr. Emslie of Napanee, was unanimously elected a member of the Canadian Astronomical Society. He has become an enthusiast through the influence of Dr. Stratton.

Rev. Dr. Marsh introduced Dr Stratton who expressed his pleasure at being present to address a Peterborough society and related his interesting experience at Greenwich, England, the place where the time was given to the world. The speaker also expressed his delight at the treatment he had received at the hands of Professor Maunder of the Greenwich observatory. "Astronomy has been recognized as a science since primitive times," said Dr. Stratton, who clearly demonstrated that observations of the celestial bodies were made by Seth, the third son of Adam. Also in India the observations by the Hindoos has already been established. To the Chinese we owe the earliest results of astronomica research, the first students dating as far back as 2000 BC. The Chaldeans dated their observations back to nine centuries before the time of Alexander the Great. They were also expert in astronomical science.

The more modern epochs were circled around Ptolemy, Copernicus, Des Cartes and Newton who was born in 1642, a mathematician and a natural philosopher and astronomer. The address throughout was very interesting and instructive.

At the close a vote of thanks was moved by Hon J R Stratton, M P, and Rev J G Potter and tendered Dr Stratton for his very able, interesting and instructive address.

A number of matters of business were disposed of by the society.

"DIVORCE" WILL BE SEEN HERE

Paul Bourget's Great Drama Will Appear at Grand Opera House on Wednesday Nov. 25th

By special arrangement, "Divorce," the celebrated drama by Paul Bourget, with English adaptation by Stainlaus Strange, will appear at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, Nov. 25th. "Divorce," is playing in Canada on limited time, and the local management is especially fortunate in securing a booking of the play, which has received the enthusiastic critical approval of the standard dramatic writers of England and this country.

Outside of Peterborough it will be seen in Canada in only the large cities in the eastern part of the Dominion and will have a four days season at the end of the week at the Princess Theatre, Toronto. The leading woman of the cast is Miss Marian Terry, the gifted sister of the famous Ellen Terry and is looked upon as a fitting successor for histronic honors to the co-star of the late Sir Henry Irving.

The deferred meeting of the Board of Education was held on Friday evening, 13th inst. Members present were; Messrs. J. L. Squire, chairman; D. Campbell, J. Brackenridge, C. W. Waters, Fred Anderson, Wm. Webster John Doherty, H. Drain, John Elliott and P. E. Duffe.

A letter of appreciation and thanks was received from Mrs. M. A. Fowlds nee Archer. The Inspector's report of his visit and inspection of the cadet corps was received and was very satisfactory.

Tenders for a metalic ceiling in Miss Waters' room in Public school were received. J. W. Rork $5.25 per square the ceiling to be scraped and left all ready. J. J. Rahal $5 per square, to include painting. The matter was left in the hands of the chairman of the Board, chairman of the Property Committeed and Mr. Anderson, with power to act.

The following applications for the principalship of the Public school were received—Norman A. Irven, Bearbrook, salary $600; A. J. McIntosh, B.A., Marmora, salary $700; A. J. Mealey, Stroud, salary $550; S. A. Smithson, Keene, salary $700; Geo. A. Hamblin, Norwood, salary $525. The application of Mr. Brudeur was accepted and the chairman of the Board was instructed to complete arrangements.

Accounts were presented as follows; J. W. Rork, $6.28; K. G. Thomson, $87.18, ditto $2.04. The accounts of Mr. Thomson were ordered to be paid and Mr. Rork's account was referred to the Supply Committee with instructions to pay if on examination same was found to be correct.

A serious charge of trespass and depredation of school out-buildings and premises against a young man was brought before the board by the chairman and after serious consideration the matter was referred to the Executive Committee to deal with as they might consider expedient.

THIS WIFE WAS BADLY TREATED

Spokane, Nov. 17.—That her husband has repeatedly threatened to blow her brains out, that he has often beaten and choked her, that on one occasion he compelled her to sleep on the bare floor without any covering, and that on another occasion, in a drunken frenzy, he kicked her bodily out of doors, comprised part of the testimony given in the police court yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Mary C. Larson, wife of Andrew Larson, brother of the late Peter Larson, said to have been the wealthiest man in the northwest.

Four navvies on the Gaspe Railway near Port Daniel were killed by a dynamite explosion.

Boy Dies From Assault.

Toronto, Nov. 18.—Robbie Laut, aged 8, of 64 Gwynne avenue, is dead as the result of an assault by an unknown youth seven weeks ago. The latter in gathering dead leaves interfered with the little fellow's playhouse and when protest was made, he struck him in the stomach, causing a rupture, as well as shaking his head violently. From the latter, paralysis and blindness resulted.

Robbie's playmates being unable to identify the man, no attempt has been made to find him.

Image Cures Hiccoughs.

New York, Nov. 18.—When science had failed to cure a case of hiccoughs that had endured for 124 hours and two eminent physicians sat helpless, a little image of "Billikins" was thrust before the patient's eyes, and he has not hiccoughed since.

The person for whom the little god of luck did such wonders is Charles T. K. Miller, the theatrical man, who had been operated on for a kidney trouble only a few days before and whose life had been despaired of.

Father's Life For Daughter.

New York, Nov. 18.—Slipping from the gangplank of the freight boat captained by her father as she was boarding the craft Mrs. Helen Bloch was drowned in the North river. Her father, Henry Rice, although 78 years of age, bravely plunged overboard in the darkness, and was also lost.

Women's Suffrage Bill.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—The greatest victory in the history of forty years agitation for equal suffrage in Illinois has been won. The charter committee by a vote of 6 to 4 has adopted a resolution declaring for a bill giving women the right to vote for all municipal officers and on all questions of policy which have to do with the municipality. The bill will be submitted to the Chicago charter convention, and, if approved, will go to the Legislature. It will be subjected to adoption by popular vote before going into effect.

Passed Worthless Checks.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 18.—Harry Fields, alias J. Morgengezer, was in the Police Court yesterday for trial following his arrest at the boundary line, after obtaining $1,600 worth of diamonds in Vancouver on worthless checks. Fields was turned over by the American police at Seattle to Vancouver officers. He entered a plea of guilty to nine charges of theft and false pretences. Sentence was reserved until to-day.

HYDRO IS INAUGURATED BIG GATHERING AT TORONTO

At Turning of the First Sod.

Ald. Fryer, of Galt, President of Ontario Power Union, Starts the Construction.

Toronto, Nov. 19.—Sir James P. Whitney drove a final rivet in the Hydro-Electric power scheme yesterday and clinched it on the other side in his speech at the sod-turning ceremony in Exhibition Park.

"We will stand by the people who have stood by us," he declared, after applause had followed his declaration. "We have not gone this far to be stopped in our good work."

The occasion was the formal commencement of work on the construction of the Ontario high-tension electric power transmission line, when Ald. J. H. Fryer of Galt, president of the Western Ontario Power Union turned the first sod at 3.25 p.m.

He used a silver spade on the birdseye maple handle on which a silver plate bore this inscription:

"This spade was used by J. H. Fryer, president of the Niagara Power Union, to turn the first sod of the high tension transmission line of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, at Exhibition Park, Toronto, Nov. 18, 1908."

Yesterday's ceremony was preceded at 1 o'clock by a luncheon at the Parliament buildings at which a number of the leading supporters of the power movement throughout the province were present. There was no speechmaking and among those who accepted invitations and who were present were: Hon. J. J. Foy, W. J. Hanna, Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. Dr. Reaume, Hon. R. A. Pyne, Hon. J. S. Duff, members of the Hydro-Electric Commission; Hon. Adam Beck, Mr. W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., Mayor Oliver and Controllers Harrison, Hocken and Spence, representing the City of Toronto; the following members of Queen Victoria Park Commission, who control the water supply for the companies at the Falls: J. W. Langmuir, L. S. Raymond, P. W. Ellis, Geo. Wilkes, W. W. Doran and J.O. Wilgress; General F. V. Green, vice-president of the Ontario Power Co., that will supply the power to the commission; Ald. J. H. Fryer, Galt, president, and Ald. J. W. Lyton, Guelph, secretary-treasurer of the Niagara Power Union; Hon. Thomas Crawford, W. F. Maclean, M.P., Ald. Fred Cory, Brantford, J. F. Jaffrey (Galt), J. A. Macdonald, W. J. Douglas, W. D. McPherson, M.P.P., J. P. Downey, M.P.P.; and as representatives of this union, Mayors Stewart of Hamilton, Stevely of London, Bowlby of Brantford, Newstead of Guelph, Sutherland of Ingersoll, Sawtell of Woodstock, Geddes of St. Thomas, Reeve Stewart Scott of Galt, Arthur White, Ald. Greenlees, London; Ald. W. N. Andrews, Brantford; Ald. (Dr.) Mearns, Woodstock; R. H. Hobson, president C.M.A., Hamilton; L. H. Clarke, president Board of Trade; J. H. Kennedy, president, and W. J. Hevey, secretary Trades and Labor Council; F. H. McGuigan, head of the McGuigan Construction Co.; A. F. Lobb, solicitor for the commission.

ALD. J. H. FRYER,
Who Turned the First Sod Yesterday.

The party adjourned to the Exhibition grounds, where the pillars for a tower had been set, and Ald. Fryer turned the first sod. The participants then proceeded to the Horticultural Hall, where a platform had been erected.

Hon. Adam Beck took the chair and expressed the pleasure it afforded him to welcome the representatives of the municipalities. These members of the Niagara Power Union had given five or six years' service to the movement and done their work without stint or restraint, and the successful issue evoked a sense of great satisfaction in them all. It was of great interest and importance to Ontario as a whole, also.

He outlined the history of the project and discussed the advantages of it at some length.

J. H. Fryer, president of the union, was first called upon. The scheme at first was thought to be applicable only to a few towns, he said, but it had spread all over Ontario. The difficulties had appeared to be insurmountable, but had finally been overcome. The Power Union ought to feel proud of Mayor Oliver and the City Council of Toronto, who had been towers of strength to the union and had stood up for the outside muni-

STARVED TO DEATH

Strange Report About P. J. Creedon

Found Dead in Cincinnati Hotel ---Was Former Resident of Peterborough

Special to the Review.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 19 Patrick J. Creedon, aged forty-five an inventor, and a native of Peterborough, Ont., was found dead yesterday afternoon in his room at the Burnet House. Dr. Coe of the coroner's staff stated he believed death to be due to natural causes, probably a hemorrhage, brought on as the result of starvation. The man was last seen in the hotel lobby at noon on Monday. The failure of the porters to obtain response to their knocks on his door necessitated the employment of the pass key and resulted in the finding of the man dead on his bed. He was partially dressed. Creedon came to Cincinnati on Wednesday, November 11th to negotiate with Arthur Francis Hoover and Charles S Birdsall the organization of a company to put on the market a bit that Creedon had patented, and also to employ his secret process of hardening steel in the manufacture of the bit. He had held a number of conferences with Burdsall and Hoover and negotiations had proceeded to the extent of obtaining the subscription of several thousand dollars to capitalize a $75.000 company. Papers found on the man by Dr Coe indicate that the man was married.

According to the terms of a contract drawn up between Creedon and Charles S Burdsall and Arthur Francis Hoover he had agreed to sell his patents to the company for $31,000 Mr Burdsall stated that the man's son will probably resume the negotiations to manufacture the patented bits.

The late Mr Creedon was well known here, having moved to this city about two years ago. He accepted the superintendency of the Rapid Tool Co. and installed all the machinery in that building. He later severed his connection with that company and was made superintendent of a new company organized here about a year ago and known as the Dominion Tool Company. The company consisted of local men, it being capitalized at $40,000. Owing to the financial depressions, the company did not go ahead.

SMASHED INTO PLATE GLASS

Horse Badly Injured in Runaway at Lindsay

Lindsay, Nov. 18—A serious runaway took place last evening on Kent street in which, after a long run, the frightened animal while attempting to enter the King Edward hotel alleyway crashed into Terry's plate glass window, breaking it to atoms and cutting the horse severely about the body and legs.

Mr. Abe Warren owner of the horse, was taking long and fast drives along Kent street, and while going east with the animal on Kent street, he tried to turn at the Dominion Bank corner with the result that teh buggy overturned throwing him out and frightening the horse, which started off down Kent street towards Terry's confectionery, where the animal crashed through the plate glass window into the candy display.

CHINESE CANNOT DATE LETTERS TILL THEY GET OFFICIAL WORD OF NEW RULER

In the absence of official information regarding the death of the Emperor and Empress Dowager, of China, the members of the Peterborough Chinese colony are at a loss to know exactly how to date their letters.

If the Emperor was alive they would not call to-day Nov. 19th, but would reckon it as a certain day in the thirty-fourth year in the reign of Kwong Sue (Cantonese) or Kuang Hsu (Manchu) in the Chinese cycle of Woo Shing, or a certain day in the first year in the reign of Pa Yi.

The local Chinese are anxiously awaiting the arrival of Chinese papers from New York, San Francisco or Vancouver, with the desired information and definite news regarding the change that has taken place on the throne of the Celestial Empire.

Kuang Hsu was the ninth emperor of the Tai Ts'ing, or 'Great Pure' dynasty.

There are mingled feelings among the Chinese of Peterborough regarding the change of rulers. As a rule they would prefer a Chinese Emperor rather than the continuation of the Manchu domination but they ar einclined to accept what is regarded as the inevitable; and the general opinion is that the same attitude will be assumed by their compatriots at home, in Southern China. There is no serious anticipation of an uprising or trouble of any kind.

It is understood that Prince Chun, the regent of China, is in favor of a progressive policy, and the reformers' are expected to accept his away with satisfaction, notwithstanding the undercurrent of anti-dynastic feel- always supposed to exist in the opposition section of the race.

The desirability of having a Chinese consul for Canada is beginning to agitate the minds of the Chinese all over the Dominion. A number of important events of late have emphasized the question and the new authority may be approached in the matter, especially in view of the attitude of certain politicians in Western Canada towards the Chinese.

SETTLERS MASSACRED

Natives of New Hebrides Murder a Man and His Daughters.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 19.—In a massacre at Santos, New Hebrides, Peter C. Gried, 51 years of age, and his two daughters Ada and Elizabeth Gried, settlers, were murdered by a mob of natives, according to news brought by the steamer Moana yesterday. Santos had been regarded as a Christian centre and white settlers were believed safe.

The massacre took place within a short distance from the mission station, to which the surviving member of the family, a boy of 14, made his escape. The settlers were surprised and tomahawked. H.M.S. Promotheus has been sent to the scene.

WERE DEPORTED THIS MORNING

Harry Munsey, wife and family, an English family were deported today. Deporting Officer Devlin came to the city this morning and took them away on the noon G.T.R. train.

The Munsey family have been dependent upon the town for some time and it was decided at the last meeting of the charity board to return them to the Old Country.

VERY CLOSE CONTEST IN P.E.I. RESULT STILL IN DOUBT

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Nov. 19.—A majority of two for the Liberal Government is the result of the provincial elections which took place yesterday.

The Conservatives claim it is a tie, 15 to 15.

The last House stood 21 Liberals, 9 Conservatives.

Hon. S. R. Reid, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Capt. Jos. Read, of tunnel fame, are among defeated Liberals in Queen County.

Two members of the Government party, Hon. G. E. Hughes and Dr. Warburton, were returned from Charlottetown and Royalty by acclamation. There were straight party contests in each of the remaining ridings.

The elect:

Liberals: Agnew, Gallant, Richards, McWilliams, Smith, Laird, McMillan, Palmer, Cumisky, Haszard, Irving, Hughes, Warburton, Cox, McInnes, L. McDonald—16.

Conservatives: Dobie, A. K. Arsenault, Delaney, Jas. Kennedy, Wyatt, McNeill, Murdock, Kennedy, McLean, Prowse, McKinnon, Mathieson, A. J. McDonald, Morson, K. A. Macdonald—14.

CABLE AND TELEGRAPHIC

Steel Men to Confer.

London, Nov. 19.—(C.A.P.)—An important meeting of British steel railmakers has been called for Friday in London, to discuss the serious situation created by the keen competition of the Dominion Iron & Steel Co. and a Russian firm, neither being in the international rail combination.

Those concerned maintain that if a new international compact cannot be devised to contest this unlooked-for competition, and also to regulate American operations, it would be better to break up the combination and give British makers a free hand. This will be insisted on at the conference.

Baby Alone Escaped.

Selkirk, Man., Nov. 19.—Word reached here yesterday of a drowning fatality in Red river, in which Cornelius Favel, Jr., his wife and two children lost their lives.

Favel left on Monday with his wife and three children for the fishing quarters, traveling by dog train over the ice, and when near Devil's Creek, struck a weak spot and all went through.

Some fishermen who followed later found the baby on the ice, where evidently it had been thrown out of danger by the father.

Buster Brown In Court.

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—In the Supreme Court argument was heard in the case of The New York Herald v. Ottawa Citizen, for infringement of copyright on the "Buster Brown" series of illustrations. The Exchequer Court dismissed the action on the ground that The Herald newspaper, being sold in Canada without copyright, it became public property, which any person could use in whole or in part.

Favored Newspapers.

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—It is stated that when all the Departments of the Government are thrown open to a royal commission of enquiry the newspaper patronage list will also be brought into the limelight. This patronage is carried to such an absurd extreme that not only advertisements but news items affecting the country are retained for Liberal newspapers only.

Panama Canal Bonds.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Secretary of the United States Treasury Cortelyou yesterday made public an announcement that he would receive bids up to the close of business on Dec. 4 next, for $30,000,000 Panama Canal bonds, or any part thereof, to bear two per cent. interest.

Drops Dead In Hotel.

Stratford, Nov. 19.—Standing at the bar of the Shakespeare Hotel, chatting with some companions, Jacob Arnold, son of Lawrence Arnold, suddenly dropped dead. A coroner's jury has been empanelled to inquire into the cause of his death.

Two Killed In Blasting Accident.

Vancouver, Nov. 19.—News comes from Skeena river of a blasting accident on the G.T.P., resulting in the death of two men and injury of others. One of the bodies was blown into the river. One was a Greek and the other an Italian.

Appeal In Warnock Case.

Brockville, Nov. 19.—An appeal will be taken against the decision of Chief Justice Falconbridge in the Warnock case. This was announced by Mrs. Agnes Warnock before leaving for her home in Ottawa yesterday morning.

Women Cannot Vote.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 19.—The Anglican synod, in session here, decided not to give women the right to vote at vestry meetings.

It was also decided to ask the Government to enforce the Lord's Day Act, and strong ground was taken against the moral conditions prevailing.

Rev. Stanley Ard, rector of St. James', Victoria, told of conditions in opium dens. He said there were more white men than Chinese in these, and nearly as many white girls as Chinese girls. The police said they were powerless. He declared they should investigate and allow the newspapers to expose the guilty ones.

Wills Son-in-Law Rope.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—The feeling entertained by the late George D. Wolf of Sommerdale, a suburb of this city, toward Charles W. Wenzel, his son-in-law, was shown in the following paragraph in his will, which was admitted to probate yesterday:

"Fifty cents to be paid to my son-in-law, Chas. W. Wentzel, a native of Huntingdon, Fla., to enable him to buy a good, stout rope with which to hang himself."

The deceased left an estate valued at $10,000.

Council to Advise Shah.

Teheran, Nov. 19.—The Shah has summoned the representatives of the various classes in Persia to appear before him to-day and hear his decision in the matter of a constitutional government for the country.

It is understood that His Majesty purposes the formation of what may be called a council of state. This body shall consist of about forty members, elected on limited suffrage and with power to control the ministers, but without executive powers.

Toronto, Nov. 19.—The "tag day" committee of the Y.W.C. Guild are again in action, preparing for next Saturday's campaign. The committee wish it distinctly understood that it is not their intention to re-tag anyone. At the same time a tag will not be refused to anyone willing to wear it. The warehouses and offices that have not already been canvassed will receive a call from the young ladies.

Babe Eats Pills.

Hamilton, Nov. 19.—Grant Richmond, 330 Wellington street, an infant son of Martin Richmond, a machinist, got hold of some pills last evening and ate them in the belief that they were candy. He was hustled off to the City Hospital in an unconscious condition. The doctors promptly used the stomach pump and have some hope of the youngster's recovery, although his condition is critical.

Added to Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Nov. 19.—The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board met here yesterday to consider the petition of 162 property owners of Brookholm for annexation to Owen Sound.

The commissioners stated that an order to annex would be drawn up, subject to ratification of a special act of the Legislature.

The annexation will increase the population of Owen Sound by 900.

Fireman Davie Killed.

The engine toppled over, pinning Fireman Davie underneath. He was dead when removed. His home was in Madawaska.

Engineer Miller, Ottawa East, was seriously injured.

Where Is George Stewart?

Toronto, Nov. 19.—"Please find Geo. Stewart, as his girl's man is dead.—Williamson, 2,134 Unstilla street, Denver, Colorado."

This is the message received by the police department yesterday, and they will endeavor to locate the man.

Riotous Students Fined.

Halifax, Nov. 19.—Six Dalhousie students, arrested Tuesday night for rioting and assaulting the police, were let off on a week's suspended sentence, and fined $200 to make good the damage.

Hotelmen Fined.

Belleville, Nov. 19.—Messrs. Carroll anr Johnson of the Balmoral Hotel were fined $50 and costs for illegal selling of liquor. Three other hotelmen are to appear in court.

Toronto In Lead.

Denver, Nov. 19.—Toronto seems to have the lead over the other cities contending for the honor of the next A. F. of L. convention, though St. Louis is making a hard fight.

NOTHING OFFICIAL

Regarding the Lakefield Tragedy

Inspector Has Made no Statement ---Remains Taken to Toronto

Special to the Review.

Lakefield, Nov. 19.—No statement has been made by the inspector to the Traders' Bank here regarding the tragic end of Manager R. P. Davidson. Inspector Sherris and several assistants from the head office are here working on the books, but refuse to divulge any information. The bank is open and doing business as usual.

Mr. Davidson's father has arrived here from Toronto, and also Mrs. Davidson's mother from the same city.

The remains of the late Mr. Davidson are being sent to Toronto on the 4.20 Grand Trunk train this afternoon, via Peterborough.

FROM TORONTO.

A Toronto despatch says:—

Toronto, Nov. 18.—"It must have been an accident," said Mr. Strathy, general mager of the Traders' Bank in Toronto, this morning. "The poor fellow had the brighest of prospects with our bank, and I understand his home relations waere very happy indeed. It must surely have been an accident."

"Is there any suspicion of a shortage in his accounts" was asked.

"None whatever," replied Mr. Strathy emphaticallly. "His accounts were perfectly straight, and his financial standing exceedingly good. We know of no reason why he should have taken his own life."

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Son of Senator Dan Derbyshire Before the Court at Brockville

Special to the Review.

Brockville, Nov. 19—John Derbyshire, son of Senator Derbyshire, was this morning committed for trial on charges of bribery in the Dominion elections on October 26th.

THIS MURDERER MUST HANG DEATH SENTENCE FOR SWYRDA

Will Go to the Gallows Dec. 11.

Man Who Killed Olak Linteck Convicted at Brampton---Evidence Was Strong.

Brampton, Nov. 19.—Stepnan Swyryda was found guilty of the murder of Olak Liuteck last night and sentenced by Mr. Justice Riddell to be hanged on Feb. 11 next at sunrise. The jury was out two hours and forty minutes.

So strongly circumstantial had been the chain of evidence binding the identity of the prisoner with the killing of his young countryman, a Galician, in Samuel Faskin's bush at Clarkson on the night of April 16 last, and so positive had been his lordship's charge to the jury that no surprise was evinced in the crowded court room when the jurgment was pronounced.

A moment later the condemned man's wife broke into the side door with a heavy sob and attempted to push her way to the prisoner's dock.

STEPHAN SWYRYDA.

She was allowed to accompany the prisoner to the jail, where they were granted a brief interview and she was taken to Toronto by sympathetic friends.

Throughout the proceedings the condemned man maintained a stolid and indifferent attitude. Even his wife's emotion made no visible impression upon him.

The jury's verdict contained a recommendation to mercy. Defence Counsel Elihu G. Morris asked that the taleamen be polled, and each of the 12 arose, as his name was called, to pronounce the words, "Guilty, with a recommendation to mercy."

Justice Riddell strongly eulogised Detective Miller's work in establishing so many clear facts in a case that there was so little to go upon, and the talent and pereception it must have required to ferret out the case.

CHINA IS SETTLING DOWN WILL BE NO DISTURBANCES

Arrangements Are Made For Obsequies of Dead Rulers and the New Emperor is Named in a Way That Leads to Belief That Reform Programme Will be Carried Out.

Pekin, Nov. 18.—An edict was issued yesterday declaring that the era of Pu Yi, the infant Emperor of China, be named "Hsuan Tung," meaning "Proclaimed successor." This characterization is interpreted as signifying the unification of the nation upon the reform program of the throne.

Another edict orders a posthumous title for Kuang Hsu in recognition of his merits. It enlarges upon the reform program to which the valedictory of the Emperor committed the throne, and thus commits the Government again to the details set forth in the program.

The regent has set aside May 25 for the members of the diplomatic corps in Pekin to appear in the forbidden city and express condolences of their respective Governments in the death of the emperor and Empress. Three members from each legation will be received at 9 a.m. They will bow three times before the coffins of the Emperor and the Dowager Empress and once to Prince Chun, the regent.

The Dowager Empress Yehonala, acting on a memorial presented by the princes and ministers, has issued an edict that the period of mourning be reduced for the regent and the court to 10 days and for the people to 70 days.

Orders were issued on Tuesday that the military manoeuvres in the Yangtse Valley be modified on account of the mourning.

Considerable adverse comment has been aroused by the fact that Prince Chun, the regent, is ignoring the Chinese in announcing the composition of the committee that are to have the funeral obsequies of the late Emperor and Empress in hand. The only two Chinese appointees are Yuan Shi Kai and Liu Chun Ling. The remainder are Manchus.

The selection of Prince Pu Lun and Chen Pi to proceed to the western tombs and select the site for the mausoleum of Kuang Hsu, the late Emperor, has been received with great dissatisfaction, principally because Prince Pu Lun was at one time very active in the intrigues to secure the throne for himself. Chen Pi is a former Boxer and anti-foreign in his sentiments. He owes his position and power to the eunuchs.

It is reported that Prince Ching, president of the Board of Foreign Affairs, has suffered physical collapse on account of his exertions and the excitement of the past few days. His political position is precarious, and it is believed that his career is practically at an end.

The fourteen native banks that suspended payment a few days ago were reopened and began to pay out money from funds supplied by the Government for the purpose of tiding over the panic.

The city is absolutely quiet and no disturbances are anticipated. Ten thousand foreign-drilled troops are in Pekin and their presence assures the maintenance of order. These soldiers are friendly to foreigners.

SHARP PRACTICE

The Examiner of Wednesday evening, November 18th, contained the following display article or item, concerning which the letter published below has been sent to Mr. Stratton, M.P.

"REPUDIATES HIS FRIENDS

In a leaded article, under the heading "Editorial Notes," the Peterborough Review has the following:

> "It is, as we have said, to be regretted that we have in our Dominion such men as Mr. Hocken, and such associations as the Orange Order. They do not make for the peace and happiness of the community. They are the apostles of strife, the breeders of bad blood, the enemies of that Canadian fellowship and friendship which we would like to see grow strong and vigorous in the upbuilding of our nation. When the history of our time is written the name of Mr. Hocken, editor of the Orange Sentinel, and the name of Dr. Sproule, the Grand Sovereign of the Orange Order and President of the Orange Sentinel Printing and Publishing Company, will not appear amongst those to whom Canada is indebted for anything worthy of remembrance. They will be merely referred to as men who in their day were the champions of an association whose history both at home and abroad has been written in blood.—The Catholic Record.

The Examiner, which has never known nor expressed religious prejudice, is not called upon to pass an opinion upon the situation here set forth in the editorial columns of the Review, which adopts the Catholic Record's views as its own, but we will venture to suggest that certain gentlemen of Peterborough when they read this expression of the Review's sentiments, will be tempted to exclaim in the language of the old London coster song:

"When I thinks on what I am,
And what I used to was,
I thinks I throwed myself away,
Without sufficient cas."

Peterborough, Ont.
November 19, 1908.

To J R Stratton, Esq. MP.,

Dear Sir,—The Examiner of Wednesday November 18th, 1908, has a display article or news item headed "Repudiates his friends," in which the statement is made that the Review and by implication and statement, that the editor thereof adopts the Catholic Record's views as its own and his own. I have had occasion to correct the Examiner before for what I considered unfair tactics in this and other regards and I shall now have to ask you to have this statement corrected. The quotation from the Catholic Record was in quotation marks and quoted wholly without comment. I cannot allow myself to be bullied in this style and although it may seem to your editor to be a piece of smart practice I think it a piece of smart practice which might just as well be stopped now as any other time.

I remain,
Yours truly,
J. H. BURNHAM.

THE EXAMINER'S IDEA

"It is announced from Ottawa that Hon Mr Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries has announced his intention of using every means of investigation available by law, that may be necessary to penalize officials of the Department found to be guilty of using their positions to improperly secure pecuniary advantage for themselves. It is the duty of the Minister to take the steps indicated. The Government of which he is a member inaugurated civil service investigation of which the investigation by Judge Cassels, which has revealed "grafting" on the part of officials, is the result."

The above extract from the editorial of the Examiner of Tuesday, Nov. 17, 1908, before all things gives an adequate idea of the Examiner's idea of fairly, and we may say, truthfully, presenting a case. Nobody surely, is unaware of the fact that it was the strenuous demands of the Opposition that secured all these investigations. The Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier fought to the last against it.

But the Examiner fails also to see the laughable absurdity of its own contention. Fancy giving credit to a man for investigating himself at considerable expense to others and finding out through the intervention of a judge that he was a crook, a grafter and a beat. It is precisely the same with the Government. It finds out now, through Judge Cassels, that its administration of public affairs has been positively rotten. We do not believe any other Liberal journal would have so far failed to do more reasonable and we may say, sensible justice to the case of Canada, vs the Laurier Administration in the matter of its maladministration of the Marine and other departments. In fact the article of the Examiner is its own most effective answer.

But we appeal to the Examiner to no longer stem the whole tide of public tide of public inquiry in Canada. We appeal to its proven patriotism, to its well known political disinterestedness to no longer employ its power and pathos in the holding down of Canadian public opinion. We know how the West Riding of Peterborough was ruled and carefully tyled in the pre-Gamey days. The old regime is about to be renewed! Eh! What! In the language of the immortal Artemus Ward "Not by a darn site."

FORGETTING THINGS

The statement is made that the electorate forgot some things or it would never have acted as it did at the last election. It is also alleged that there was such a failing of dead game every time the opposition critics fired that the electorate became sated, lazy and forgetful. This is no doubt to a large extent correct. Almost any one of the sins alleged against the Laurier Government would have upset it but in the mass there were too many. The Quebec Bridge alone was enough to floor an administration, but in the universal clamour against extravagance and graft it was wholly lost sight of. A well known Liberal remarked that if the Laurier Government did not get a beating this time it would be annihilated next time.

EDITORIAL NOTES

We have no doubt that the negative side won on the preponderance of its argument in the St. Andrew's debate on the desirability of Sir Wilfrid's return to power, but to have found in favour of the affirmative would have been, in view of recent events an impossible task surely. It would have been the joke of the season.

Turin, Italy, November 14.—"The Italian public has tolerated with infinite patience thus far, the clownish behavior of the American press over the Abruzzi marriage," declares the most influential paper of Northern Italy, La Stampa, in a long leading article, which concludes with the suggestion that Miss Elkins ask the public not to interest itself with so much sense of humor in the affairs of herself and her royal lover. It adds that perhaps she can put a stop to the "megaphonique" lies circulating in America—such for instance as that the Duke is a fortune hunter, while as a matter of fact, he inherited a large part of the great fortune left by his mother,—and also that she may suppress further flights of the American imagination on the subject of the match to which." La Stampa continues, "Italians listen with sufficient melancholy."

"They hear, with admiring stupor," says the paper, "Father Elkins' remark that in fifty years there will not remain any monarchy in Europe; they hear with profound mortification, the statement made by the late president of The Daughters of the American Revolution that one American girl is worth exactly five duchesses, and they hear with lively disquiet the assertion of the illustrious Mr. Rogers, president of the Chicago Theosophical Society, that in this young lady there is the revived soul of one of the Roman Empresses, or at least the soul of a lady-in-waiting in the court palace of the Caesars."

"All this sort of thing," complains the writer in La Stampa, "is well enough for the marriage of "Rockefeller XIV. or Prince Armour of Corned Beef,"—but Europe considers it beneath contempt even for the marriage of a gorilla, to say nothing of that of a valarous prince, who has carved out a superb place for himself in the annals of modern heroism. It was well enough," he says "to have a little fun over the young lovers for the moment, but this spirit in America has gone too far and constitutes an insult to every Italian. With the paradoxial fancy of Mark Twain and the brazenness of Buffalo Bill," concludes the writer, "the American press entertains the public every day with a mess of lies, colossal indelicacies, grotesque suppositions and vituperous insinuations."

OF INTEREST

Mr. John Burns, the President of the Board of Trade, on the occasion of the cutting of the first sod of a new reservoir at East Molesey on Saturday said some interesting things about unemployment. And this great problem was also the subject of a vigorous debate in the House of Commons on Monday night.

Civic Society and Industry

Mr. Burns, referring to the new reservoir said: "This is the beginning of what I hope will become the conscious ordering by civic society of its industrial aims, and the disciplined adaptation of public works and their execution to private trade depression and through both to the provision, at the proper time of useful work for the genuine unemployed, and by this method the alleviation of human suffering, that, through lack of work, too often prevails in our vast communities. It prevails not through lack of work, but because of money irregularly spent without any regard to aims and ends and the human instruments who take part in both its spending and making. In the ordinary course of events, this and similar work all over England and Wales would have come into active operation next year when the passing depression of trade had almost spent itself, and certainly had passed its acute stage; when the building trades that will contribute to this fine piece of work had begun—as they will about the middle of next spring or early summer—to realise the benefit of cheap money which we have only had for four or five months—an exceedingly important thing for public enterprises of this character—and when they had recovered from the three years of dear capital, dear money, and high rates of interest which to a large extent have been responsible for the depression we have had for three years in the United Kingdom in the building trades.

The Building Trade

"There are 1,250,000 men engaged in the building and kindred trades, and when that trade is depressed, as it has been depressed mainly through high rates of interest, dear money, and a number of causes into which I need not go that reacts and reflects upon other auxiliary and dependent trades and industries. It is not necessary for me to detail the many conversations that Mr. Bryan and I have had with regard to the experiment you are making today. I saw, with your chairman, Mr. Bryan, and others that there was an opportunity of helping labour this winter without injury to ratepayers, without damage to public credit, without any harm to good workmanship by accelerating the point and the date of this and similar undertakings under your control.

PUBLIC WORKS FOR SLACK TIMES.

"What we have to do is to fit in the peaks of prosperity in the private competitive trades with the depressions of public employment, so that when general trade is busy and private trade slack, we may so alter the mean of our total production that we cannot have the violent fluctuations that we see to-day in naval, military, municipal or other public expenditure which too frequently means large numbers of men working overtime at that part of the year when they ought not to be so working, and at other times deprived of work altogether. With this object in view we have had the co-operation of all the engineers, of the contractors and the Water Board, and unofficially, the local government Board.

WHAT MUNICIPALITIES CAN DO.

"And I am sure the public, who provide the money for this undertaking will be glad that some 2,000 men on all your works—these and other undertakings scattered over London—will, at a cost of something like £600,000, by the projection of your work, the ante-dating so to speak of your commencement of these undertakings, have an opportunity of tiding over the winter to an extent that they would not have had but for the foresight, the activity, and the public spirit of the Water Board, through its officials and its chairman, (with any little help I have been able to give. I go from that to the broader aspect of this same subject.

"For three years as your official chief, without partisanship or politics or any bias of any kind I have been trying to impress upon all the local authorities throughout England and Wales to adapt the execution of their work to the times of slackness and depression, as I have related. To the credit of everybody, the municipal authorities have responded to an extent that has surprised me.

"There is no reason why works like reservoirs, tramways, electric light, recreation grounds, housing, roads, streets and drainage—utilities and amenities that can wait and be carried out of conformity with the general conditions of the labor market—should not be either deferred or ante-dated to suit the general industrial and commercial conditions of the country.

But is there any conceivable reason why we should have the painting inside of you strong and, in many cases, beautiful engine-houses, of public schools, workhouses, hospitals, infirmaries and thousands of other buildings throughout this country done at the time it is? So far as organisation is concerned, there is no relationship between the carrying of them out to the state of the painting and decorative trade outside. They ought not to be compressed into the summer months of May, June, July and August, especially the inside work, when painters outside are working fourteen, sixteen, and sometimes eighteen hours per day.

"BUILDED BETTER THAN WE KNEW."

"If we take the £150,000,000 of municipal expenditure per annum and the £150,000,000 of Imperial expenditure and co-ordinate its production, regulate the output upon the lines I have indicated, I see no reason why we should ever have in this country more than 2 per cent. or 3 per cent. of the total army of men we employ in the production and expenditure of that £300,000,000 out of work. And, if between now and the next five or ten years, we set ourselves seriously to the task on the lines that I have suggested, the adapting of the expenditure of this enormous amount of money on this large amount of public work on the lines that I have sketched out, we shall have 'builded better than we knew.'"

MR. KEIR HARDIE'S ATTACK.

In the House of Commons on Monday Mr. Keir Hardie led the Labour attack upon the Government, moving an amendment declaring that their proposals were quite inadequate to meet the pressing needs of the unemployed this winter, and the the unpreparedness of the country to meet the present unemployed crisis was due to the neglect of the Government to make provision for a state of affairs which was clearly foreseen. He laid it down that if the right to live was admitted the right to work was the logical deduction. The unemployed were not provided for under the law they could not be asked to obey the law. This amendment was defeated by 236 against 687.

Mr. Asquith in defence said that it was essential in any measures proposed to maintain clearly the dividing line between unemployment and pauperism, and that distinction the Government had carefully observed. Their measure aimed merely at organizing our immediately available resources, central and local, so as to give the widest area of effective relief, with the minimum risk of demoralization or humiliation.

NOT FOR MONEY SAYS MR. QUIRK

Would He Be Without Dodds' Kidney Pills

They Cured His Lumbago of Twenty Years Standing, and Made Him Feel Twenty Years Younger.

Fortune Harbor, Nfld. Nov. 18—Special—Sixty years of age but hale and hearty and with all the vigor of a young man, Mr Richard Quirk, well known and highly respected here, gives all the credit for his good health to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I suffered for over twenty years from Lumbago and Kidney disease" Mr Quirk says "and after consulting doctors and taking their medicines made up my mind that I was incurable I was unable to work when I was persuaded to buy a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. To my great and happy surprise I had not taken half a box when I experienced great relief. Seven boxes cured me. That was in 1900 and I am still cured. I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills for any money. I am twenty years younger than before I took them."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidneys. Healthy Kidneys strain all the impurities out of the blood. That's why they cure rheumatism, sciatica, and other diseases caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood.

THE MONTREAL MELON IS A MONARCH OF ITS KIND

IT IS THE MOST FAMOUS AND EXPENSIVE KNOWN.

In Looks, Size, Weight and Flaver the Fruit That Is Grown on the Island of Montreal Leads Every Other—Small Restaurants In the United Statesm Sell It at $1 a Portion to Epicures.

The famous Rocky Ford cantaloupe—the real article from Colorado—is a very humble customer indeed beside that monarch of the melon tribe, the Montreal melon. Precious few Philadelphia breakfast tables the Montreal melon visits.

The swellest restaurants hotels, clubs and the country homes and villas of the very wealthy are the places where it is seen. A melon that costs $1 a portion is too rich for the average householder's blood.

The Montreal is the king of the melon tribe in looks, size, weight and flavor. It is the one melon grown that never runs the peril of striking a glutted market, for the reason that whatever its popularity, the acreage on which it is and can be cultivated is very limited.

It is truly named, in that the only soil in which it grows to perfection is that of the Island of Montreal; and even there the melon acreage is practically localised to two posts—Outremont and Notre Dame de Grace.

There are not more than twenty-five farms on the whole Island of Montreal on which these melons are grown, and the area of cultivation, despite all the efforts of Canada's agricultural sharps to extend the industry, is becoming rather circumscribed than increased.

The Montreal melon is a true home body, and steadfastly refuses to grow elsewhere, no matter what the inducements and petting offered it.

It is curious that the melon, which originated in a warm country — Hindustan being its birthplace—should arrive at its greatest perfection in such a latitude as Montreal, but it is to be remembered that the Montreal melon is no heaven-sent gift—it is the product of eternal vigilance, lots of hard work and an infinite attention to the details of cultivation.

The planting of the seeds is done in March in hotbeds. After a fortnight or so careful inspection is made of the plants, and if progress warrants, they are transplanted into other hotbeds. The third transplanting comes in late spring, when the plants are put into what are known as the summer hotbeds.

Soon after the frames around the beds are pulled away and the vines, which by this time are well under way, are left to face the contingencies of the wind and weather.

As for the growers, all devout Catholics, each prayers to his patron saint for a hot, dry summer, which to the melon means size and flavor.

The melons are grown in patches, each patch consisting of several beds, divided from one another by two or three rows of potatoes or corn.

These serve as windbreaks to prevent the wind from rooting under the young and tender vines and scooping them up.

The melons begin to show fair size by the middle of July, and netting commences. Up to this time the melons are a glossy green.

The progress of the netting, which is carefully noted, determines the exact time when the melons should be picked and sent to market.

The growers take no chances in this particular, but aim to move their melons just as they ripen, the Montreal melon being particularly susceptible to decay.

To obviate this every possible precaution is taken and the big fellows are handled as if in cotton and wool.

Every path over which the melons are wheeled in wheelbarrows is swept smooth and clean, with not a pebble or obstruction left. A jolt may mean a bruise, and a bruise means swift decay. One can't take chances in dollar-a-portion melons.

Every melon is carefully shored up with small stones so that the air can reach it from all sides, and there will be no earth on the ground during ripening.

When the Montreal melon is picked it shows no sign of contact with the earth. Every melon is labeled, and they are packed carefully in large baskets holding from eight to twelve apiece. Shipments are made exclusively by express, it being necessary to land the fruit on the market as quickly as possible.

The season lasts from five to seven weeks. Despite the price, the supply is in no way adequate to the demand. New York and Philadelphia being able and willing to take every melon grown on the island four or five times over.

Girl Slaves In Canada.

This year for the first time at the Great Potlach in the Northwest, no Indian girls were sold as slaves. On previous occasions they were bought and sold like cattle. Through the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church have asked the Attorney-General to enforce the law relating to polygamy with especial reference to the Chinese. One woman, a fourth wife, was bought for $350. She was 19 years of age, her purchaser 60.

An officer, Whong Kong, signs papers allowing Chinamen to represent themselves as parents or guardians and showing these papers bring these girls into a civilized Christian country often to be sold again. These facts are known to the police.

Apples Were Big.

Sixty-five tons of apples have been taken from 161 trees at the Coldstream orchards near Vernon, B.C. At 43 pounds to the box, this would give a total of 3,023 boxes. This immense yield was of the variety known as Pewakee, and as the same quality of fruit is retailing in the local stores at $1.25 a box, the returns from these two acres alone would be something over $3,778, or $1,889 an acre gross.

Earl Grey has arrived in Montreal for a two weeks' stay.

PROF. A. R. BAIN PASSED AWAY

Registrar of Victoria College Died Yesterday—Brother-in-law of Mr. D. W. Dumble

Prof. Abraham R. Bain, M.A., LL.D., Registrar of Victoria College, and was closely identified with the institution, and whose influence was very strongly felt by those who passed through the institution, died about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, of heart failure, at his home, 133 Bedford road. Prof. Bain was taken ill on Tuesday while attending to his official duties at Victoria, and was removed in a cab to his home. The late Prof. Bain was a student at Victoria College, then at Cobourg, and it was said of him last night that every year since his graduation, with the exception of one, was spent at Victoria. The degree of LL.D. was conferred by Mount Allison University.

After teaching mathematics Prof. Bain went abroad to study, returning he took up the subject of ancient history, which he taught in addition to his duties as Registrar. The late Prof. Bain recently announced his intention of retiring from active work at the college. Deceased was in his 69th year, and leaves a widow and one daughter. The late Prof. Bain was a member of Trinity Methodist church.

Arrangements for the funeral will be made to-day.—Toronto Globe.

The late Prof. Bain is a brother-in-law of Mr. D. W. Dumble, of this city. Mr. Dumble received the sad intelligence this morning. The news came as a great shock to Mr. Dumble, as it was only a few days ago that he was speaking to him and he appeared to be in his usual good health.

Sang at Tweed

The services at St. Andrew's church on Sunday evening were very interesting and helpful.

The singing was especially fine the choir being assisted by Messrs Gregson and Fitzgerald and by Mrs Davidson, formerly soprano soloist of St. Andrew's church, Peterborough. Their rendering of the anthem, "Hark, Hark My Soul," was one of the best treats we have had in a long time. Mrs Davidson gave a very fine rendering of "The Ninety and Nine."—Tweed News

BIG CROWD AT ROLLER RINK

Witnessed Performance of Pro. Genno and Miss Patterson Last Night

There was a large crowd at the Auditorium roller rink last night, the special attraction being the exhibition of roller skating by Prof. Genno and Miss Kathleen Patterson.

Their expert rollering was the subject of much favorable comment, and the extremely difficult "turns" were done with the utmost ease and alacrity. Prof. Genno did an act that brought forth rounds of applause. He skated down a long board from the band stand and jumped over a barrel in the middle of the floor.

Tonight Prof. Genno and Miss Patterson will repeat their performance, and Prof. Genno will come down the board backwards and jump the barrel.

nicipalities. A great deal of their success was due to Mr. Ellis. They owed a debt, too, to Mr. Beck, and the stand taken by Premier Whitney was worthy of their pride. In another year they would see electrical power being brought to their homes.

Ald. Lyon of Guelph, secretary of the union, Mayor Oliver of Toronto, P. W. Ellis of Toronto, W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., and Sir James Whitney also spoke.

The Premier was received with loud applause.

There were two ideas underlying what had been done by the Ontario Government in dealing with the power matter. One was the old, old saying, that the safety of the people was the supreme law.

Those entrusted with the work of the people should do it, having in view the general welfare of the people, whose servants they were.

The other idea was contained in the words of Davey Crockett — "Be sure you are right, and then go ahead."

"We waited till we were certain we were right, and then went ahead," he added.

"We will not be stopped or deterred by technical or other difficulties." He deplored the condition of the opponents of the plan, now sunk into a state of mental lassitude and torpor, the ultimate results of which were hard to prognosticate." Cheers followed his final assurance, "We will stand by the people who have stood by us."

WHERE SAVAGES BEAT US

The rude, uncultured savage did not sit most of the day in a padded office chair, a carriage or car. His food was not prepared by a chef. He had to hunt for something to eat. And dinner, when he got it, was none too rich.

But the rude, uncultured savage did not suffer from indigestion, constipation, billiousness, headaches, as we civilized beings do. Exercise and the amount of fruit and fresh vegetables in his diet, kept liver, bowels and kidneys working right.

None of us want to go back to the days of wigwams and tomahawks but a lot of us certainly would like to have the digestion of the savages

We can, by taking "Fruit-a-tives." "Fruit-a-tives" act directly on the stomach, liver, kidneys and skin, and keep these organs in perfect condition. "Fruit-a-tives" bring back lost appetite and sound digestion to the Dyspeptic—regulate the bowels of those who suffer from Constipation — and build up the whole system. Trial size 25c. Regular size 50c, or 6 for $2.50.

BASKET SOCIAL AT MOUNT JULIAN

Under Auspices of Eden Church—Function Was Most Successful

Special to the Review.

Mount Julian, Nov. 18.—Rev. Mr. Garbutt, of Eden church, conducted a Thanksgiving service on Sunday night, November 8th for which the church was tastefully decorated. On Monday evening a very successful and enjoyable basket social was held, at which there was a large attendance, and a very pleasant time was spent.

Rev. Mr. Garbutt occupied the chair and gave out the numbers of a programme, in which the choir favored us with several fine selections, recitations by Mrs. J. D. Church, Mrs. Charles Lauder and Miss Windover were received with applause; the singing of the Misses and Messrs. Shewn, Miss Wigg, Miss Sanderson and Miss M. Reid was encored with enthusiasm, while the amusing dialogues in which Miss J. Reid, Miss King, Miss Windover, Mr. C. Shewn and Mr. Rollie Northey took part, kept the audience in a happy humor.

Then Mr. J. D. Church was chosen as auctioneer and a lively bidding began for the baskets, resulting in the sum of $35.60, which will be applied towards the cost of the driving shed. This sum, with what has been already subscribed, will very near pay the entire cost of the building.

An organ has been bought for Eden church and was used for the first time at the Thanksgiving service.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

HOW MUCH ARE YOUR EYES WORTH?

If you were offered $10,000 for your eyes you would laugh the proposal to scorn. Practically cannot get along without them.

That is why perfect vision is absolutely necessary to you.

The vision value of our lenses will help you see better than you ever saw before.

If your eyes are worth only $10,000 pair, figure out for yourself the actual value of a pair of our lenses that will increase your seeing power.

'DIVORCE' TO-NIGHT AT THE PRINCESS

In connection with Paul Bourget's great play, "Divorce" which opens at the Princess theatre, Toronto, tonight today's Mail and Empire has the following to say:

A brilliant audience will greet the first production of the new celebrated play, "Divorce" at the Princess theatre this evening. The interest aroused by the coming of Miss Marion Terry, a member of the celebrated English stage family, has created an exceptionally strong demand for seats at the opening performance and the best circles of Toronto society will be represented. Coupled with the social feature of the event is the sterling quality of the cast selected by Mr F. C. Whitney for the interpretation of the play and the names of Ida Conquest, Vincent Serrano, Eben Plympton and John Glendinning are a sufficient guarantee that a finished performance will be given.

Seventy-eight guesses were recorded Wednesday in the guessing contest for ladies at the Arcade Store. d3

ANGLICAN CLERGYMEN DO NOT ALL FAVOR LOCAL OPTION

Matter Discussed at Conference at Lindsay—Rev. Mr. Creighton of Lakefield Made Interesting Statement.

Lindsay, Nov. 18.—The discussion of the efficiency of local option as a means of lessening the drink evil took up a large part of the time yesterday afternoon at the resumed session of the archdeaconry of Peterborough. Few present thought local option the desirable thing in the fight against the liquor traffic and the clergymen present expressed themselves as contrary to it, claiming that in places where it was in force, the conditions had not been improved, but actually grown worse.

The discussion arose from the paper on the state of morals in the archdeaconary of Peterborough, read by Rural Dean Allen, of Millbrook, Rev. J. R. McLean, who was also to read a paper on the same subject was not present.

Rev. W. C. Allen, M.A., of Millbrook, read a paper on the subject which led to considerable discussion, He said that the subject given to him was a very hard subject, because of its personality. He thought the best way of getting at the subject was to something bearing on the question. He therefore procured a report of the jails and prisons in Ontario. There has been an increase in larceny and drunkenness in Ontario. The chief reason for this is the influex of foreign population, and a good many jails in Ontario have been over-crowded on account of this. In Peterborough there has not been so much of this as in the rest of Ontario. There are no more noble men throughout the length and breadth of our country than those who are working and are working hard, to train the young. In this archdeaconry we form a large part of the playground of Ontario. We have a large number of summer resorts in this district. The question is, "How are our Sundays being observed in these resorts?" The Lord's Day Alliance is doing a grand work in stopping all that goes to mar the peace and rest of Sunday. The only way is to bring all these criminals in touch with Christ, and He will do the rest.

Rev. Mr. French, of Fenelon Falls, in opening his remarks said that he had risen to his feet to defend himself against a charge which had appeared in the Toronto papers. Mr. French, along with three others of that village, were charged with going on board a steamboat at Fenelon Falls and stopping a Sunday excursion to Lindsay. This was not a true account. All that the ministers did was to look into the legality of the excursion and ask that it be not run. Local option, said Mr. French, may be right, but he believed that there was a better way of solving the liquor problem.

Mr. Anderson, of Brooklyn, gave a very encouraging report on the local option results in towns throughout Ontario. Mr. Anderson is a very earnest local option supporter, and he delivered a stirring address in support of it.

A number of other speakers spoke in support of local option. It was held, however, that while it did a great deal of good those who desired to get drunk would get it no matter how much trouble they had to go to. A man who drinks will get the liquor as long as it is manufactured.

Rev. Mr. Creighton, of Lakefield, "There is a great deal more drinking among the boys in local option towns than in a town not under local option. I am of the opinion that if local option is adopted a crop of drunkards will be brought up, and will they forsake their habits when they grow up?"

The time for adjournment being at hand the subject of discussion was left over until the following day.

PURSE FELL IN THE STOVE

And Fourteen Dollars in Bills Were Lost---Only Twenty Cents Recovered

Sometimes people are accused of throwing money in the fire in a metaphorical sense, but this morning the wife of a George street resident got rid of some real cash by means of the flames route, and there was no metaphor about it either.

In some way or other she dropped her pocketbook into the stove and fourteen dollars in bills were burned. All that was rescued from the fire was twenty-five cents, made up of two ten-cent pieces and a five.

DEFIED POLICE BUT CAPTURED BY A WIDOW

defied police

New York, Nov. 18.—"Jerry" Hunter, a colored man who on Labor day six years ago, held a large force of police at bay in Queen's, shooting nineteen of them and surrendering only when the building he used as a fort was set on fire, popped up yesterday, in a peaceful role when he applied at Hunter's Point for a license to marry. His dusky bride-to-be is a Greenport widow.

Hunter's second wife, who figured with him in the noted battle, died during his four year term in prison The battle, in which Policeman McKenna lost both eyes and Policeman Brill one eye, was caused by a party of idle men who invaded the Thomas estate on the Shore road, Queens Borough, of which Hunter was the caretaker.

They amused themselves by worrying the horses, and Hunter fired at a couple of them. The men went to the police station at Astoria and made complaint. Patrolman McKenna was sent out to arrest Hunter. The colored man met him in the yard and asked to go in to get his coat. McKenna charged that while he was standing in front of the house, Hunter thrust a gun from an upper story window and shot him.

Brill, who was on post in the neighborhood summoned the reserves from half a dozen precincts and they surrounded the house. Hunter had two shotguns and plenty of ammunition. His wife loaded while he fired, and he held the police at bay, until the early morning hours, when a flanking party succeeded in getting under shelter of an outhouse, and from this vantage point set fire to the building.

LIGHTING PLANT FOR CURLING RINK

Change From Former Conditions ---Curlers are Enthusiastic

In connection with the annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club to-morrow night it may be stated that the new rink, which has just been completed, is one of the finest in Canada. There will be seven sheets of ice, and the building has a reception room, recreation room, and is fitted in a manner to afford splendid accommodation to the members. It is proposed to limit the membership to 150 members, and on account of the handsome new quarters the club will be of a more social nature than in the past.

The rink will have its own lighting plant, which will be an improvement over the old rink.

Under the new conditions there is every reason why local curlers should be enthusiastic.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

THREATENED TO USE KNIFE

Man Fined in Police Court To-day --Other Cases

A young lad by the name of Buller was charged with stealing a boiler from Mrs. Ligard, on Bethune st., on Sunday last. The youth pleaded not guilty and after hearing the evidence, his Worship dismissed the case. Mrs. Ligard's little son testified to Buller coming to his home yesterday and giving forty-five cents for the boiler, saying that he would give more again.

Buller, when he was put in the box, stated that he had done that, at his mother's suggestion, in order to avoid being brought to court. He denied having taken the boiler.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

James Tierney pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly. He was allowed to go on the plea that he had a wife and three children and that it was his first offence.

Richard Price was not so fortunate. He was drunk and disorderly last night too and threatened to use a knife on anyone who should come near him. He has no one dependent upon him but himself and his Worship imposed a fine of two dollars to be paid forthwith. The fine was paid.

ANNUAL MEETING CURLING CLUB TO-MORROW EVENING

SOOP 'ER UP!

The curlers are getting busy. The fact that the frost is liable to butt in any day now has caused the local knights of the broom and stones to waken up and preparations are now being made for the coming season.

The game is going to boom in Peterborough this year. Last season the curlers were without a rink and they sorely missed their favorite game. With the commodious new rink erected on Charlotte street and everybody enthusiastic curling is going to be very much to the fore this season.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held in the Dominion Bank Chambers tomorrow (Friday) night at eight o'clock. Every curler and everyone desirous of playing the game is requested to be present. Officers will be elected and other important business transacted. A good annual meeting means a good start so everyone is requested to be on hand to-morrow night

WITH THE BOYS AT THE PETERBOROUGH Y. M. C. A.

Another boys' tea was held at the YMCA on Tuesday night. The supper at 6.30, costing ten cents is very popular among the business boys and they are turning out in good numbers. After supper the boys have a half hour Bible study and then go in the gymnasium for the rest of the evening.

The Order of the Triangle is very popular. The idea is to class every boy in the gymnasium according to his all round work. To get the first degree a boy must attend 75 per cent of his Bible study classes, 75 per cent of his gymnasium classes, swim 90 feet in the tank in 45 seconds and pass a physical test of five events.

The second degree is harder, and the third degree is a test of the boy's greatest ability in all-round work. All the boys who are not trying for a degree and who would like to should hand their names to Mr Evans, Boys' secretary and get a triangle.

BAD ACCIDENT NARROWLY AVERTED ON THE G.T.R.

A bad accident was narrowly averted on the G.T.R. near the swing bridge just below the cemetery early yesterday morning. A double headed freight was going into Peterborough when at Downer's Corners a truck of the third car jumped the track and it dragged along for about a quarter of a mile before it was noticed. Had it not been noticed before it reached the bridge the coupling would no doubt have broken and a serious accident would have occurred. The cars would have gone headlong into the river.

Car-repairer Mr. R. Wareham and some section men were called and the truck was placed on the track again. A number of ties were badly damaged.

HEARD FROM AGAIN

Mr. W. A. Bailey, of postcard fame, writes to the Review as follows;—

Dear Sir.—I don't follow Mr. Murphy in his remarks about rates and taxes, the poorest requiring police protection more than the rich. A A rich man does not require to keep a dog; a poor man sometimes can't. I quite agree the police only seem to make bogus complaints and back up corrupt officials.

SPORTING NEWS

EDMONTON WILL LIKELY HAVE TO PLAY IN DECEMBER

Ottawa, Nov. 18—The games between the Wanderers and Edmonton teams for the Stanley Cup are likely to be played at the Arena, Montreal, on the nights of December 28th and 30th. Edmonton has telegraphed Stanley Cup Trustees Ross and Foran protesting against the dates, but the games are likely to be ordered played on these, regardless of whatever kicks the western challengers may make.

Some time ago the Edmonton officers were requested by the trustees to get in communication with the Wanderers with a view to arranging the series. This the Edmonton people did, and the result was that the Wanderers, having arranged to play their games at the Arena again asked Secretary Northey to give them dates for the two games. Mr. Northey recently announced to the Wanderers that they might have Dec. 28 and 30, and the Wanderers immediately communicated with the challengers saying that the games could be played on these dates.

Messrs. Foran and Ross today received a telegram from Edmonton saying that the dates were unsatisfactory. The Edmonton officers want to play in the first or second week in January, they having suggested January 6th, 8th and 10th. The challengers claim that they will not have sufficient time to practice between now and the first week of the New Year, but Wanderers ask that the games be played before the opening of the Eastern Canada season, the ECHA. having objected to games for the famous trophy being played during its season as they would interfere with the schedule.

Alderman Foran told the Gazette correspondent that the Edmonton team would in all probability be obliged to accept the dates as suggested by the Wanderers and set aside by the Arena, Edmonton he thought would have ample time in which to get in shape for the series. Wanderers, in his opinion are quite within their rights in wishing to play before the opening of the Eastern Hockey season. Consequently the games will most likely be played December 28 and 30. Final arrangements, however, have yet to be made.

BROWNIES WON CRESSMAN TROPHY, DEFEATING TIGERS

The Brownies won the Cressman trophy last night in the final game defeating the Tigers by a score of 36 to 23. The contest was an interesting one, the Brownies showing superior form throughout but their opponents played a good game.

For the winners the work of Fred Cressman was especially effective. He obtained the largest number of points tallying 7 baskets and 6 fouls. Fitzpatrick at centre also played a splendid game for the Brownies.

Staunton was the most conspicuous member of the Tigers' lineup and secured the majority of baskets for that team.

Mr. Len Dobson made a most satisfactory referee and H Laing was umpire.

The half time score was 23-12 in favor of the Brownies.

The teams;

Brownies		Tigers
	Guards
E Payne		P. Weatherstone
R. Hall		D Loomis
	Centre
Fitzpatrick		P Wallace
	Forwards
F Cressman		H Staunton
G Milear		F Hall

The summary of games in the Cressman trophy league is as follows;

Brownies 30; Turners 23. Turners had handicap of 5 points.

Brownies 31; Chieftains 25. Chieftains had 15 points handicap.

Brownies 40; Rustlers 25. Rustlers had 15 points handicap.

Brownies 19; Maple Leafs 16.

Brownies 36; Tigers 23.

Tigers were last year's champions.

SAM ANDERSON ISSUES CHALLENGES TO YOUNG HACK. AND YANKEE ROGERS

Hackenschmidt Says He Will Meet Him in Few Weeks if Suitable Purse is Put up—Challenger is World's Champion Middleweight.

Sam Anderson, the middleweight champion is right after Yankee Rogers and Young Hackenschmidt. The following letter, which is self explanatory, has been received by the sporting editor of the Review;

Canton, Mass., Nov. 18.

Dear Mr. Editor,—Would you please put in a challenge for me against the men named in this letter, namely, Yankee Rogers and Young Hackenschmidt. Both claim they can beat me but still they have refused to wrestle me. Young Hack. I have challenged a number of times, for his own sum, all holds allowed and I stand ready to back it up any time. Just make it understood that he wants to put up or shut up. And I am ready to wrestle Yankee Rogers, toe hold barred, for one or two hundred dollars, any time. I got word through a friend of mine that Young Hack was in Peterborough and as you no doubt want to see good sport and a square deal, make them wrestle me or make them give the reason why.

Enclosed clippings will give you an idea as to my ability, if you have time to look over them. And as they are about the only records of contests that I have to which they refer, I would be much obliged if you would return them.

Trusting that you will do me the favor of challenging men mentioned, I am, believe me,

Yours gratefully,
SAM ANDERSON,
Box 436, Canton, Mass., U.S.A.

Several clippings enclosed tell of Anderson's American and European triumphs and would indicate that he has an undisputed claim to the title of the middleweight champion of the world. His matches on this continent and abroad have been marked by great success and he is one of the best men of his weight the wrestling world has ever known. It was in the international tournament in London, Eng., last June that Anderson first gained the great distinction which is now his, when he decisively defeated his opponents, the best middleweights Europe could produce. Referring to his great showing the well known London publication, "Health and Strength," says;

"The famous veteran, Tom Connors, had to acknowledge defeat to Sam Anderson, in 6 minutes, 39 seconds. Bob Berry and Joe Shambley, on one or other of whom the hopes of Lancashire were fixed, lasted on into the fifth week, when both met their second defeat, Berry going down to Sam Anderson in 15 minutes 45 seconds."

The greatest praise is bestowed upon Anderson by English writers, for his magnificent wrestling and sportsmanlike methods. Anderson is a finely built young fellow, standing 5 feet 9 1-2 inches in height and he strips at 170 pounds. He is a Swede by birth but has lived in America ever since he was eight years of age. He has to his credit victories over top notch heavyweights.

YOUNG HACK REPLIES.

When Hackenschmidt was shown the letter he slightly resented what Anderson had said about him, Hack. trying to avoid him.

"He has issued several challenges to me," said Hack., "but the only reason I have never met him is because a suitable purse was never put up. If a good purse can be guaranteed I am willing to wrestle him at any time and am agreeable to have the match pulled off here, provided Peterborough also suits Anderson."

Yankee Rogers is in Montreal at present, but his manager, W. B. Naylor, will be communicated with at once and his reply to Anderson's challenge will be published when received.

SCHEDULE FOR OPENING WEEK PETERBORO TEN-PIN LEAGUE

The Schedule Committee of the newly organized Peterborough Ten Pin League is still busily engaged arranging the season's dates and the complete schedule will be made public of Saturday.

At a meeting of the Executive last night the schedule so far as arranged was adopted and the proposal to open the league on Monday night next was confirmed. Twelve teams in all have joined the league and the programme is as follows;

Monday, Nov. 23—B.A.C. vs. Gutterson's.
Tuesday, Nov. 24—Belmonts vs. Laing.
Wednesday, Nov. 25—Examiner vs. Bankers.
Thursday, Nov. 26.—Martin vs. McIlroy.
Friday, Nov. 27—T.A.B. vs. Lock Works.
Saturday, Nov. 28—C.G.E. vs. Lillie.

RACING COMES TO AN END ON TRACKS OF NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 18— Racing in New York closed with a programme at Jamaica where the gloom pervading was a fit indication of the feelings of the turfmen. Barely five hundred persons shivered in the big stand as wintry blasts swept over the track and the races were run in a dead silence, not even a handicap signalizing the victories in the first few races.

At the end there was a feeble attempt to raise a sound of applause as a tribute to the outgoing season, but this died away instantly. Whether the closing means that racing in New York is altogether dead remains to be seen. Two tracks have announced meets for next year but in the meantime there is a dark outlook for the turf, as it is as hard to get a bet down on a race as it is to get a drink in a "dry" town, and the racing game cannot exist without the gambling end.

Most of the good horses are already in winter quarters. The result of the election was manifest in the atmosphere which hung over the track and the cheaper kind of racers will be a drug to the market. Many owners are unable to ship through lack of funds and are willing to let their horses go for almost any amount. There is quite an active demand from the members of various country clubs for thoroughbreds, to use as hacks and hunters, but this market is necessarily limited.

So far as the game itself is concerned, some big sums have have been lost and won. James R Keene, although not coming anywhere near his record of last year, heads the winning owners with total earnings of $282,600 and John E Madden is second with $165,000. August Belmont pulled down $94,000 and Harry Payne Whitney was fourth with $75,000.

Joe Notter, who rode for Keene, headed the winning riders for the season. Eddie Dugan was second, while D McCarthy who came to the front with a rush this year, was third.

Reform movements in Southern States have made the meetings schedules for Hot Springs and New Orleans doubtful, and the year which opened with such bright prospects has closed with the turf outlook darker than ever before.

It was a single vote that did the trick. Senator Voelker arose from a sick bed and cast the vote which wiped out the racing game, he made the sport a losing venture in this State. That the Tammany influence is directly responsible for conditions is generally believed. The fashion in which patrons were treated and the fact that no one trusted the manner of conducting the sport at the Tammany tracks led to a general feeling against the game.

SOUTH END CLUB TO HAVE A FINE RINK

The South City AAA's rink is fast rounding into shape. The ground has been levelled and the stakes for the planks are driven. The rink will be 110 feet by 60 feet, and lighted by arc lights. The dressing rooms will be good as the rooms in the old Park street Baptist church have been kindly given by the church for the use of the club and its members. A special meeting of the club will be held on Friday evening to make arrangements for the management of the rink. All members are requested to be present.

HOCKEY TEAM AT ALL SAINTS'

A Men's Association Hockey Club, was formed last night at All Saints' church and will play in the church league. The team will be under the management of Mr H Campbell and the officers of the Men's Association, will be the officers of the club. The Honorary President is Rev Mr Trompour, the president, Mr W G H Armstrong and Mr Douglass Layfield is the secretary.

WRESTLING

George Lillie and B. Guerin will box six rounds as a preliminary to the Fitzpatrick-Burridge bout at the roller rink on Tuesday evening next. The other preliminary will be the handicap wrestling bout which Young Hackenschmidt will try to throw five local men in ten minutes.

HOCKEY

Colborne, Nov. 18.—An enthusiastic meeting was held, when the Colborne Hockey Club was organized for the coming season, with the following officers:—Honorary President, C. Larke; Honorary Vice-President, A. R. Malton; President, A. G. Willoughby; Vice-President, Chas. P. Brown; Manager, E. F. Rawson; Secretary-Treasurer, W. A. Findlay; Management Committee, C. W. Pangman, T. C. O'Donoghue, H. McKenny, W. Cowie and J. H. Gale.

It is the wish of the club to organise a Lake Front League, consisting of Cobourg, Port Hope, Trenton and Brighton.

THE RING

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Prospects for the resumption of boxing in Chicago have been shattered by the arrest of principals and promoters of a boxing match at Billinger's Athletic Club three days ago. Three men were arrested and warrants for two others were issued. The boxing contests, which were of a mild nature, and held in a club to which the general public were not admitted, were believed to be an opening wedge for the resumption of boxing, which has been prohibited in Chicago for four years.

"Boxing will not be tolerated under the present municipal administration," declared Chief Shippy after the men were arrested.

RUGBY

The football artists who represent the town of Brockville will stack up against the Lindsay team in Peterborough next Saturday.

That's good news for you!

Lindsay will run a special train for the occasion, and some five hundred followers are wanted.

The game will decide who will play off with the winners of the Eureka-Capital battle, for the championship.

Wouldn't it wake up this old town if our boys would win the championship?

Brockville has a fast team, however, and utilize every opportunity for practice. The armory is used for signal drill and everybody turns out. Nothing but hard practice between now and Saturday will win for Lindsay, and all the players are requested to turn out and get licked into shape.

And we'll go to Peterborough on Saturday.—Lindsay Warder.

McAUGHEY'S BIG TASK

One more Canadian Marathoner turned pro., in the person of McAughey, of the West End Y.M.C.A.

McAughey is the first and only man to make the Toronto to New York run, which he did last spring under numerous hardships. He will leave the City Hall on Monday morning with a message from Mayor Oliver to the Mayor of New York and will run over practically the same route as he did before. Asked if he would run under West End colors, McAughey replied that he would run as an independent, paying his own expenses.

"When I reach New York, I will enter the professional ranks," said he. "I am now twenty-six, and I think it is about time for me to quit running for the glory; from now on I'm out for what's in it. When I arrive in the American metropolis I will try and make arrangements for a race with Hayes and the Italian, Dorando, or any other professional who is desirous of competing with me." He will make the journey alone, and will run in an ordinary gymnasium suit.

CHAPPED HAND AND COLD SORES

Zam-Buk Gives Speedy Relief

Few women entirely escape the pain and annoyance of rough or chapped hands during the winter season, and most outdoor workers suffer more or less. If your hands are chapped, wash them at night in warm water; cleanse them thoroughly—using Zam-Buk soap if possible—and then anoint them well with Zam-Buk balm. By next morning you will be pleased with the result. Zam-Buk gives almost instant ease, and speedily closes the cracks.

Mrs. Walker, of 14 Manufacturer street, Montreal, says: "My son Henry works with his shirt sleeves rolled up above the elbow, and passing from a warm room to the biting cold, as he was obliged to do he got the worst case of chapped hands and arms I have ever seen. From his fingers to his elbows was one mass of raw flesh, with bad cracks here and there. Whenever he washed, it brought tears to his eyes; the pain was so acute.

"He tried several kinds of salve, but nothing relieved him really until he tried Zam-Buk. This took away the burning and smarting almost at once. The cracks began to heal, and a few applications of the balm cured him. His hands and arms are now smooth and soft.

"We have also used Zam-Buk for other emergencies. I sustained a burn on one of my fingers. Zam-Buk took the fire out and healed up the sore. It really is a wonderful household preparation."

Everybody says so who has tried Zam-Buk. Purely herbal, it is nature's own remedy. Eczema, ulcers and chronic sore it heals and closes. Same with cuts, burns and lacerated wounds. For children's injuries it is without equal. Rubbed on the chest it ends the aching and tightness due to cold. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto for price.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON GAVE ADDRESS ON THE CONGRESS

At Public Meeting in Connection With Archdeaconry Conference at Lindsay—An Interesting Description.

Lindsay, Nov. 18—The public meeting held in connection with the conference of the archdeaconry, in St. Paul's church schoolroom last evening was interesting to a marked degree and the Venerable Archdeacon, Sweeney, MA, BD., and Rev. Canon Davidson, MA., rector of St. John's church, Peterborough, spoke of their impressions of the great Pan Anglican Congress held in England during the past summer. Views of parts of England associated with the congress were shown by Archbishop Sweeney.

Canon Davidson dealt with Church Life and Work in England as an inspiration to the people of Canada.

The speaker stated that those present at the great conference in London, England, were given opportunities for observing the ecclesiastical life of England. The progress of the Church of England could be traced throughout the ages and is at present true to its doctrines and its teaching.

The difference between the Canadian branch of the Anglican church, and the Anglican Church in England is marked. This is due to the difference in character of the citizens of each country. Those from different portions of the empire were urged by those in England to rear up and individuality which would meet the peculiar conditions in different countries. It would seem that we in Canada have been in this matter and it might be better for us to diverge to some extent from the Mother Church. The church in England is very strict but even there they are not bound by the strict ordinances of the church. "I know of no more thrilling moments in the great Pan Anglican Convention," said the speaker "than the few moments in which the vast audience stood in silent worship."

Canadians up to the present have not realized our nationality and the work there is under the wing of the mother church, where, probably, the conditions are not understood as they are here.

It may be ours yet to unite Protestantism and to reform Catholicism in this country if we grasp the opportunity to remove the prejudice of the churches in Canada.

He had witnessed the great suffrage procession to Albert Hall. Women of the highest intellect took part in this procession. "When I saw the earnestness of those women and knew that any man can have a vote to secure franchises, I was persuaded that they should have the right to vote."

The condition of the poor in England is most sorrowful and growing worse every day. One could not admire the means taken to alleviate this poverty. Multitudes of men and women are dependent on the public service to their fellow citizens and a great chasm divides them from the rest of the public. Their self-respect is gone. It is for us in Canada to benefit by the mistakes of the Mother Country.

LOVE IS DIFFERENT

Love-making even is different in England, and a lover there must think his girl can't walk for one arm has to be around the waist and he clutches her hand with the remaining hand, this too, in the public streets.

It is one of the greatest duties of the church in England to teach the Socialists the true brotherhood and educate them in the true way of life. The socialistic problem is a vital one in England at present.

Archbishop Sweeney spoke on the same subject.

WEDDING BELLS

BARNARD—MADILL.

A very pleasant event took place on Wednesday, November 11th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Campbell, Fraserville, when their cousin, Margaret Madill, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Percy C. Barnard, of Bailieboro, in the presence of the immediate friends of the contracting parties, numbering about 35. At 6.30 o'clock, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Miss Cathcart, of Springville, The bride dressed in cream taffeta with lace and insertion trimmings entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father. The bridesmaid was her cousin, Miss Violet Campbell, who wore a pretty cream costume, while Mr. Jeffrey Jewison, cousin of the groom, supported him. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Wetherill, of Fraserville Methodist church, under an arch of evergreens and flowers with horse-shoe in the centre, after which a sumptuous wedding repast was served. A pleasant evening was then spent and Mr. and Mrs. Barnard later left for their new home in South Monaghan followed by the heartiest good wishes of their assembled friends. The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful presents.

THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT

Men's Meeting at St. Andrew's Church Last Night---Addresses by Delegates

The men's meeting at St. Andrew's church last evening was attended by a fairly large number. The addresses given were along the lines of the laymen's missionary movement and were delivered by the delegates to the laymen's banquet recently held in Toronto. Messrs Rich Lees and Clifford, were the gentlemen who represented St Andrew's and who made their reports last night. It was decided to have the same gentlemen speak at some Sunday morning service.

After devotional exercises by Rev. J. G. Potter, Dr McKinnon took the chair. He was of the opinion that the reason that there had been such little interest taken in missions by men in the past was because there had been no sufficient information furnished, and the matters had never been rightly considered. Now business men of the churches had taken up the work and were conducting it in a businesslike way.

Mr Rich Lees in his remarks referred to the largeness of the laymen's movement and the importance of it. To carry the proposed undertaking into effect, to raise annually $4,500,000. Of this about $1,500,000 will be devoted to christianizing the foreign population in Canada.

Mr Clifford also spoke at some length on the missionary work in a very interesting manner.

EXIT THE COMIC SUPPLEMENT

Interesting Statement Made by a Boston Newspaper

Boston Herald, Nov. 15th.—Today the Herald abandons the comic supplement. That accompaniment of Sunday newspaperdom has had its day. We discard it as we would throw aside any mechanism that had reached the end of its usefulness, or any "feature" that had ceased to fulfil the purpose of attraction. Comic supplements become as vulgar in design as they are tawdry in color. There is no longer any semblance of art in them, and if there are any any ideals they are low and descending lower.

Many protests come from the public against a continuance of the comic supplements. Parents and teachers object to them. Most discerning persons throw them aside without inspection experience having taught them that that there is no hope for improvement in these gaudy sheets. The supplements no longer amuse an intelligent public; they serve mainly to depress persons of taste, and distort such growing taste as may struggle for the light in others.

HELP TO BUILD UP PETERBOROUGH

The William Hamilton Manufacturing Company Re-organized Place a Sound Proposition Before Peterborough People.

The Company Begin Operations Again Larger Than Ever---Peterborough Can Become in a Few Years a Very Large Manufacturing Centre With a Population of 50,000 People---Here is the Opportunity to Give the City a Lift.

Its Railway Facilities, its Water Power, its Trent Valley Canal, its magnificent Agricultural Country and its larger accumulations of capital can, if judiciously used, double its present population in the next ten years.

Peterborough is essentially a manufacturing centre. Every factory that can be brought here means increased money to be spent in Peterborough, more pay rolls mean increased number of buyers on the market, at the stores and in the shops. It means more houses to be occupied, more people to buy food and clothes. It means more employment for the people, more money to be handled by our banks, it means in short growth and prosperity to Peterborough and to the farmers in this locality. One of the oldest and best factories—The Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company—a factory that started on a small scale fifty years ago, a factory that has done much for Peterborough in the past, has now been closed for some months, and a systematic and concerted effort is being made at present to have employed by the 1st of January, '09 at least 150 hands. This factory is located almost in the centre of Peterborough and with its grounds covers between six and seven acres

The cost of this factory and its equipment was over $319,000. The present Company have purchased the entire plant, buildings, machinery, patterns, right, title, good will and name and over $20.000 worth of raw material and stock in trade, all for less than one third of the original cost.

Of this plant, the boiler shop and pattern warehouse are new, having been built during the past five years, while the moulding shop, foundry and part of the machine shop have been modernized and equipped with labor-saving devices, and there is over $35,000 worth of modern machinery that has been installed in the last six years; so that the plant to-day is easily worth twice what it has cost the present company, beside the large amount of stock in trade valued conservatively at over $20,000, now on hand.

To get working capital, we are asking the citizens of Peterborough and the surrounding country to subscribe for $30,000 of Preference Stock in this enterprise on the following conditions:

The preference Stock bears interest at the rate of 8% per annum and is cumulative, so that if in any year there were only sufficient earnings to pay 7%, the other 1% is a first charge on the profits of the next year. With each two shares of preference stock, one share of common stock is given as a bonus. Each purchaser will thus receive 8% on the money invested and whatever dividend the common stock may earn. This is a good straightforward proposition, honest from top to bottom, in which there is no watered stock and in which each shareholder is most amply secured.

An enquirer might ask, what has been the output of the factory, what have been its sales? From the signed statements of W. R. Morris, Chartered Accountant, who has audited the books of this company, the net sales for the six years 1901 to 1906, both included have been $1,552,050.00, or average sales for the six years of $258,275 per year, the bulk of the sales being in Ontario, though their customers are found from Vancouver to Halifax. Having been manufacturing for over fifty years and supplying Saw-Mill Machinery, Water Wheels, Boilers, Engines and Mining Machinery to hundreds of mills and factories in Canada, the keeping in repair of which each year gives the company a very large revenue, and as the present company own and hold all the patterns, this repair item alone is a guarantee of a large trade.

If you are one of the citizens who want to knock everything that is coming Peterborough's way, you will go right out and condemn this enterprise; but if on the other hand your business is here, this enterprise asks for your backing, for your co-operation, your good word, and for a careful examination, to see if this is not the very soundest, the safest and sanest investment that has ever been offered the citizens of Peterborough and surrounding country.

Let every business man, every man or woman with idle capital look at the cut of the magnificent buildings shown herewith, covering nearly seven acres in the heart of Peterborough, already equipped and ready for business, and tell us is there is any sane reason why this factory should remain close for the lack of a working capital, when we have $3,000,000.00 in the Savings Banks in this city on which we are receiving 3%. Is there any reason why the trade that this factory has built up should be allowed to go elsewhere to build up other cities and towns, while skilled workmen are here to do the work and the trade legitimately belongs to Peterborough?

Running with the full compliment of men, this factory will pay out $12,000.00 per month in wages. What does that mean to you?—to me?—to the city?—and especially to the country surrounding it?

We ask you to examine what we to offer and give us the opportunity of showing it to you. We can show you an investment in every way sound and reliable, and your money will at the same time help to build up Peterborough. We are asking for neither gifts nor charity but we do ask that every citizen who has the interest of Peterborough at heart to co-operate with us in this movement

The buildings are being put in thorough repair and a large part of the former staff have taken up the matter and are working to the limit of their ability.

Will you co-operate with them and at the same time help yourself? Write for our booklet or call at our office, Room 14, Bank of Commerce Building, or call us up by Bell 'Phone No. 242

THE PROGRESS OF ONE OF GREAT CITIES OF CANADA

Winnipeg Continues to go Ahead—Organizations Formed to Improve Conditions There.

Special to the Review.

Winnipeg, Nov. 18 1908.—Now that the ploughing seed-time and harvest is over and trade conditions so much benefitted by the good things which nature has done for Manitoba this year, questions involving immigration, agriculture and railway extension have largely been diverted toward that of municipal improvement and development. The interest of the average citizen in the west and the activity he displays in promoting the welfare of his community marks a true quality of patriotism—a quality which the west has every reason to be proud of. In the past week there has been formed an organization in Winnipeg called the Citizens Gardening and Villa Association, whose objects are to carry on an educational campaign to improve residential property by means of having citizens beautify their front lawns and to utilize their back yards for the growing of vegetables. W. D. Waugh, ex-president of the Parks Board, its prime mover, has been elected president. The organization has already received the hearty endorsation of the Parks Board, Florists Association Horticultural Association, Health Department, Industrial Bureau and the Community Club.

The Civic Play Grounds Association is another movement started in which the spirit of helpfulness by citizens has been displayed to a remarkable degree, and the idea of providing play grounds that will be supervised by a superintendent for the benefit of the children will be a reality the coming spring.

In the past week many prominent capitalists and manufacturers have visited the city with a view of investment of some kind, or that of establishing western agencies, branch factories or warehouses.

The traveller who enters western Canada from the south or East, almost always does so through the chiefest gateway to this part of the continent—Winnipeg. Probably no other way to enter can be made that will afford the newcomer so accurate and so pleasant a standard for measuring the development and resources of this remarkable section known as western Canada. Out of this fertile prairie Winnipeg has grown. Upwards from a tiny trading post the city has mounted, and stands to-day a living evidence of the wonderful richness of the prairie soil, a magnet to the spirit of progress that seized upon the people of Winnipeg and of the prosperity that has been theirs. One hundred and twenty-five thousand people are now here. Broad, asphalted business streets stretch their lavish length across what was but a few years ago virgin prairie. Miles of boulevarded and smoothly paved streets make up a residential section, favorably comparable with many of the best cities in the world. Splendid hotels, fine stores, banks plentiful in number and ample in their capacity to supply the financial needs of the city; wholesale houses thoroughly equipped to furnish the large mercantile territory to the west; excellent car service, colleges and a public school system that affords ample opportunities for education; public parks, libraries, in short all that goes to make up a well organized and progressive city, has been gathered together, and made a place that in 1870—a time well within the recollection of thousands now alive—had a population of 215. These are facts that clearly set forth why Winnipeg is optimistic, and why her business interests are so clearly allied to the success and general progress of Western Canada.

Fire did two thousand dollars damage to the new Cecil Hotel at North Bay.

DISEASE AMONG CATTLE CAUSES QUARANTINE OF TWO AMERICAN STATES

East Buffalo Stock Yards Are Placed Under Ban for Foot and Mouth Disease Discovered in Two Carloads of Animals—Trouble May Last for Months.

Buffalo, Nov. 19.—For the first time in their history the East Buffalo stock yards are under the ban of a quarantine.

Because two carloads of cattle which were delivered in western Pennsylvania were found to be infected with foot and mouth disease, were traced back to East Buffalo, the federal and state authorities have raised the bars on this market, pending a general clean up of the yards and a further investigation of the outbreak of the disease so much dreaded by stockmen.

As a direct result of the conditions growing ont of the investigation of the Pennsylvania shipment, the word came yesterday from the bureau of animal industry of the Department of Agriculture, ordering the entire States of New York and Pennsylvania to be quarantined. Pennsylvania state authorities have declared a quarantine against New York, and last night Commissioner Pearson of the Department of Agriculture of this state, who is here, ordered that a strict quarantine be placed on five counties in western New York, namely, Erie, Niagara, Orleans, Wyoming and Genesee.

Animals infected with the foot and mouth disease have been discovered in each of these counties by Government inspectors, who have been quietly at work in this vicinity for over a week. Practically all the cases, it is said, have been traced back to Buffalo.

Chief Melvin of the Washington bureau has been here in personal charge of the the crusade to stamp out the disease, and under him are working a score of inspectors from the federal bureau of animals industry.

The federal quarantine will apply to all cattle in this state and Pennsylvania. No one is prepared to say how long the quarantine will last. In the case of Boston, two years ago, the quarantine lasted several months. Over 200 men will be put to work today on the East Buffalo yards disinfecting every inch of ground. This work will take at least three weeks.

It is said that the infected cattle may be traced back to Michigan.

It is supposed that one point of attack which has heretofore escaped the efforts of department regulations has been that poisons thrown off by the afflicted animals have been transmitted to other healthy beasts through barnyard birds, principally sparrows.

Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture Flanders asked the state forest, fish and game department yesterday if a permit to poison sparrows in infected territory could be secured. He was told that while no such permits were granted, if it could be demonstrated with reasonable certainty that the sparrows were agents of transmission of the disease, the fish and game protectors would not interfere with a warfare against them.

Cattle which are victims of the foot and mouth disease suffer the sloughing off of hoofs and attacks of a poisoning foaming at the mouth, many fatalities occurring.

MEMBER OF CITIZENS' LEAGUE CALLS HAMILTON IMMORAL

Hamilton, Nov. 20.—Sensational charges were made at the public meeting of the Citizens' League last night against the police, the police commissioners and license commissioners for the alleged tax administration of the law in this city with regard to disorderly houses, gambling and the liquor business.

Peter Bartram went so far as to say that the police commissioners connived at the existence of many immoral places, and stated that the police magistrate had admitted that they were tolerated. He doubted very much the right of a police commission to tolerate such places, and thought that neither the police nor the commissioners should allow their eyes to be closed to these abuses.

Resolutions were passed condemning the non-enforcement of the law in the matter of gambling, illegal liquor selling and immorality.

"SOME PHASES OF ENGLISH LIFE," SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

By Rev. Canon Davidson Before the Canadian Club Last Evening—Mr. D. O'Connell the New President of the Club—The Other Officers

President, Mr. D. O'Connell.
First Vice-President, Mr. H. R. H. Kenner.
Second Vice-President, Dr. Cameron.
Sec. Treas., Mr. E. L. Goodwill.
Committee, Messrs. J. H. Larmonth, A. H. Stratton, T. E. Matthews, S. R. Armstrong, J. E. Hodgson, H. Le Brun, D. Hughes Charles and Rev. H. J. Keith.

The above are the new officers of the Canadian Club for the coming year. The nominating committee appointed at the last meeting, brought in a report last night recommending the election of the above officers. The report was unanimously carried.

The retiring president, Mr. F. D. Kerr opened the proceedings and after the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, the report of the nominating committee was presented. Mr. Kerr, before calling upon the new president to take the chair, briefly referred to the meetings of the past year. While there had been only a limited number held, the members could not fail to see that the club should play an important part in the life of Peterborough. He thanked the members for the past support given him and bespoke even greater support for the new president and the other officers.

Mr. D. O'Connell, the new president, was enthusiastically received. He expressed his thanks and appreciation for electing him to the office. He referred to the very satisfactory work of Mr. Kerr. The Canadian Club was a new enterprise for Peterborough. It has been attended with success and has been highly instructive. No one, said the chairman, had been more painstaking than Mr. Kerr, and that his efforts were crowned with success must be a source of gratification to him. In concluding, he said that to emulate him during the coming year.

REV. CANON DAVIDSON.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's church who spent several months in England during the past summer. "Some phases of English life." In beginning Canon Davidson said that on his recent visit to the old land he had made a special study of everyday life in England. He had attended the Pan Anglican Conference which has been the most notable event that has taken place for some time.

The political condition of England was undergoing a very radical change. The influence of labor upon the Government was great. No other government had attempted such advanced legislation as has the present one. He referred to the very strong feeling of opposition to the government's licensing bill among the people, and the Old Age Pensions' bill.

Socialism was sweeping northern and central England. It was no wonder either, said the speaker, when it is considered that the land is all owned by a comparatively few people. He had heard a socialistic lecture by Rev. R. J. Campbell, one of the great leaders of the Socialists.

Such strong arguments were advanced, Mr. Davidson remarked, that the people were convinced even

LIBERALS ARE BLUE

In Prince Edward Island.

Conservatives Made Gains—Government Lost Three Cabinet Members.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Nov. 20.—The election returns stand as at first reported, sixteen Liberals, and fourteen Conservatives.

The Conservatives' gain is not only in members, but in fighting strength. John McLean, of Souris, a man of wealth and ability, a former member of the Commons for one term and for several terms in the Legislature, is a distinct acquisition. McNeill and Wyatt of Summerside are also valuable gains.

All Mr. Matheson's fighting lieutenants in the late House—Morson, Prowse, McKinnon and others—are re-elected.

On the other hand the Government has lost three of its nine members by defeat: Reid, commissioner of agriculture; McNutt and Clark, members without portfolios. The defeat of Captain Jos. Reid was due to local causes. He was one of Premier Hazzard's best debaters and one of his most influential supporters.

John Richards, brother of James Richards, Liberal M.P., will probably be made commissioner of agriculture, vice Capt. Reid, defeated. He holds a safe seat.

The Liberal camp is in the blues and Conservatives' hopes of capturing the Government at an early day are strong.

LAST TRIPS

To-morrow will likely see the close of navigation on the Peterborough-Rice Lake section of the Otonabee river. The Rainbow and Monarch will make their regular Saturday trips to the city, to-morrow's being the last of the season. The Grand Trunk swing bridge below Little Lake cemetery has been closed for the season. The boats will stop at the street railway wharf.

NEW THEATRE TUMBLES DOWN

Winnipeg Structure Almost Ready for Opening Night Collapses.

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.—At 8 o'clock last evening the New Grand Theatre collapsed, covering the sidewalk with debris. The building was receiving the finishing touches and had been built at a cost of $30,000.

Fortunately no one was injured though several people passing on the sidewalk had narrow escapes. The theatre was built by a company promoted by W. J. Gillman of New York.

TWELVE MEN ARE REPORTED KILLED

Special to the Review.

New York, Nov. 20—Twelve men are reported killed by the explosion of a gas main excavation in Brooklyn today.

WINDOW FELL TO PAVEMENT

Rather Peculiar Accident at the Snowden House

A rather peculiar accident happened at the Snowden House yesterday afternoon. The storm windows were being put on and in placing one on an upstairs window, it fell and landed with a smash on the pavement on Charlotte street. The glass and the sash were both wrecked beyond repair.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Windsor may vote on a by-law to spend $30,000 on a lighting plant.

Labor Hall, Ottawa, was damaged by fire to the extent of $2,000 yesterday.

Muskrats are damaging the Trent Valley Canal near Peterboro, and will be slaughtered.

The C.N.R. is reported, via Duluth, to have obtained control of the Rainy Lake Railway.

In New Zealand the "no license" proposal carried in fourteen districts and license reduction carried in six.

The new G.T.P. elevator at Fort William will be the largest in the world, with a capacity of 3 1-4 million bushels. It will cost $1,250,000.

John Derbyshire was yesterday morning committed for trial at Brockville on charges of perjury in the recent Dominion election on Oct. 26.

Sir John Ellerman of the Ellerman City and Hall steamship lines, according to a London despatch, has secured control of the Bucknall fleet of 28 vessels.

There will be no criminal prosecution of the Windsor, Essex and Lake Shore Railway or its employes on account of the accident near Pelton, which resulted in the death of three young men.

SURPRISE FOR HOLD-UP MEN

Windsor Man Goes Into Pocket for Money and Brings Out Pistol.

Windsor, Nov. 20.—George McWilliam was attacked by two colored hold-up artists last night.

Reaching to his hip pocket McWilliams remarked: "I haven't got much, but you're welcome to it, since you insist," and with that flashed a 32-calibre revolver, which he fire point blank at his assailants, who turned and fled.

McWilliams fired two more shots, one of which evidently took effect in the body of one of the fleeing men. The men got away.

AT SPRINGVILLE

The anniversary services of the Springville Presbyterian church will be held next Sunday, when Rev. A. R. McLeod, of Brighton, will be the preacher. Miss Heatlie recently of Kingston, will be the soloist. The services will be held morning and evening. the morning service at 11 o'clock, and the evening service at 7.30. The anniversary will mark the second year of Rev. Dr. Marsh's pastorate and during that time the affairs of the church have progressed to the utmost satisfaction of the pastor and his congregation.

FOURTEEN SENTENCED

Ringleader in Attack on Montana Family Gets 35 Years in Prison.

Great Falls, Mont., Nov. 20.—Fourteen men charged with murder in Valley County pleaded guilty to manslaughter and were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

The crime was an attack upon the cabin of John Hayes and his family, which resulted in the death of Hayes and his daughter. Hayes had "jumped" a claim which Walter Long had taken up. The settlers went to the cabin at midnight, shot through it and attempted to set fire to it.

The first trial was that of Walter Long. It was long and expensive and resulted in his conviction to 35 years' imprisonement. His brother Milo was sentenced to 13 years in prison. Two turned state's evidence and got off with a jail sentence.

The rest were given sentences of from six months to one year and nine months.

SHOVED ARM INTO WINDOW

Boy Hurt While Running on Indoor Track at Y.M.C.A.

A boy named Dummitt had one of his arms badly cut at the Y.M.C.A. last night. He was running around the indoor track and in some manner shoved his arm through a window, cutting himself on the glass. The cut bled freely.

Gold Thieves in Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 20.—B. R. Reed, formerly employed by R. T. Barnette, owner of the Dome Creek mine, near Fairbanks, Alaska, arrested on a charge of stealing gold from his employer, has confessed his guilt and implicated other laborers.

Reed said: "I gathered the gold and sand in handfulls out of the riffles, hid it in my handkerchief or gloves or boots, carried it home and washed it out. My cleanings were from 50 cents to $400 a day. Altogether I must have cleaned up $1,800 worth of stolen gold. I know one man who has $30,000 worth of stolen gold salted down."

A Woman's Murder.

Buffalo, Nov. 20.—Robert E. Kinney, a Pennsylvania Railroad yardmaster, was shot dead at Seneca street Wednesday night. Agnes Gatlin, wife of Edward Gatlin of Terre Haute, Ind., is under arrest.

Mrs. Gatlin was captured while trying to force an entrance to a saloon nearby, where her husband was lying in a side room.

She was out searching for her husband when she met Kinney. Asked as to the whereabouts of her husband, Kinney replied: "Oh, he's out with the blonde to-night."

Taken Over the Line.

Emerson, Man., Nov. 20.—Considerable indignation is expressed over the action of a U. S. immigration officer Wednesday night.

At a late hour Officer Smith went to the home of Jas. McQueen, one-armed man, and forcibly ejected him from his house, taking him over the border and then placing him under arrest.

McQueen failed to appear at Fergus Falls, Minn., last May on a summons, and the authorities have been after him ever since. District court opens at Fergus Falls to-day, when McQueen will be given a hearing.

Topsy Turvy at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Judging from the appearance of the Parliament Buildings the opening of the House can hardly take place so early in January as was intended.

Workmen are still busy and the rooms are far from finished. An effort, however, is being made to have them ready for the second Wednesday of the new year.

Meanwhile the main estimates are ready.

Trolley Runs Away.

Montreal, Nov. 20.—While a street car, loaded with C.P.R. mechanics, was proceeding up the hill on Davidson street yesterday morning, to the Angus shops, a fuse blew out, and the car started to back down the hill, and ran into another car following closely.

There was a stampede to get out of the runaway car, and five men were injured, two of whom went to the hospital.

Clerk of Frontenac.

Kingston, Nov. 20.—J. W. Bradshaw, Tichborne, has been appointed clerk of Frontenac County, succeeding Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., resigned.

Alleged Case of Blackmail.

Brantford, Nov. 20.—The police have been asked to investigate a case of blackmail at Burford Village, Brant County, where a prominent resident has recently received two threatening letters.

The first demanded $2,000, declaring if the money was not deposited in a certain spot his barns would be burned. The second threatened him with death.

Must Pay Full Duty Now.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—An afterclap of the general election is the demand made upon Contractor Mayes of St. John, N.B., for duty on the famous dredge Beaver, which was imported in bond from the United States to do work in St. John harbor. The custom officials request the full duty on the ground that the dredge was not sent out of Canada within the specified time.

Seat Found For Calder.

Saltcoats, Sask., Nov. 20.—At a large convention Hon. J. A. Calder, who was defeated in the last provincial election, was nominated for the constituency of Saltcoats, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Thomas MacNutt from the Provincial Legislature.

Smallpox in Lumber Camp.

Peterboro, Nov. 20.—Smallpox has broken out in the lumber camps in Cavendish Township in the north of Peterboro County. There were eight cases. The disease is said to be of a mild type. Dr. Smythe of the provincial board of health has arrived to take charge of the cases.

As Dangerous as Railroading.

Lemans, Nov. 20.—The chain attached to one of the propellers broke when Wlbur Wright was making his second flight on Wednesday afternoon, and the machine began to turn over. Wright re-established the balance of the aeroplane by leaning to one side and cutting off the motor.

Woman Robbed of $1,000.

Montreal, Nov. 20.—A woman who was out to make Christmas purchases went to the bank Wednesday and drew $1,000.

She went into one of the uptown departmental stores and her purse was snatched.

Frost In the South.

Cottonwood, Ala., Nov. 20.—There has been ice here one-eighth of an inch thick for three mornings, and all tender vegetation, both here and across the line in Florida, has been killed.

Nobleman Weds Actress.

London, Nov. 20.—Another romance of the stage was recorded yesterday afternoon, in the marriage of Sileen Orme, a musical comedy actress, to the Hon. Maurice Hood, heir of Viscount Bridgport.

Gregory May Die.

Quebec, Nov. 20.—J. U. Gregory, he former agent of the Marine Department at Quebec, is seriously ill, and his physicians have but slight hopes for his recovery.

Local Option Fights.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—There will be local option campaigns in 93 places in Ontario, at least, on Jan. 7, of which three are places which have before defeated it; 31 where repeal is before the electors, and 59 new contests. There are 216 bars affected in the present "open" municipalities, while where repeal is being sought there are 103.

Woodstock, Owen Sound, Picton, Tillsonburg, Ingersoll and Whitby are in the fray.

In addition, there is the license reduction campaign in Toronto, and possibly one in St. Catharines.

Chinese Government Doing Well.

Pekin, Nov. 20.—Several of the foreign legations here have expressed their surprise and gratification at the manner in which the Government is managing the situation. It had been expected up to the present time that the death of the Dowager Empress would precipitate trouble, but the way in which the new Government has assumed its responsibilities has created confidence among the diplomatists.

Killed at Port Elgin.

Port Elgin, Nov. 20.—Edward Williams lost his life in the Dominion Pressed Steel Works yesterday morning while he and other helpers were moving a riveting machine. It overbalanced and struck a pinch bar, which hit Mr. Williams on the right side and wrist, causing immediate death. Mr. Williams came here from Pittsburg as welder.

Czar Will Walk

St. Petersburg, Nov. 20.—The funeral in St. Petersburg of Grand Duke Alexis, who died in Paris Nov. 14, will be attended by Emperor Nicholas in person.

His Majesty will follow the casket on foot through the streets of the city. This will be the first time the Emperor has been seen on the streets of St. Petersburg since 1904.

Buried Under Wreckage.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 20.—While the steamer John A. McGean was endeavoring to pass out of the canal at the Lackawanna Steel Plant early yesterday her bow caught the rigging of a hoisting machine used in unloading iron ore, tearing the machinery down. The debris fell upon three men, killing two of them, named Malki and Crittenden.

Doctor Dies of Glanders.

New Fire Insurance Company.

Montreal, Nov. 20.—R. Forget, M.P., is the leading figure in a newly-organized fire insurance company, with head office in Montreal. The company will be known as the Imperial Fire Insurance Co. of Canada, and will have a paid-up capital of two millions.

MOST SUCCESSFUL ANNUAL MEETING IN HISTORY OF THE YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

Was Held at the Club Rooms Last Night—Election of Officers for Coming Year—Outlook is Encouraging—An Enthusiastic Gathering

The fourth annual general meeting of the Young Conservative Club was held in the rooms last night.

The meeting was the most successful that the club has yet held. The club rooms were crowded and the outlook for the coming year is most encouraging.

Ald. Buller, the president, occupied the chair.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The financial statement for the year was read by the financial secretary.

The club has made great progress during the past year and the finances are in a good sound codnition. The treasurer succeeded in reducing the liabilities to the extent of between $200 and $300. The report was well received and the club has to be congratulated on its financial success. The report was unanimously adopted.

tI was felt that it would be in the best interests of the club that only Conservatives should be available for membership hereafter and be admitted to the privileges of the rooms.

President Buller thanked the meeting for their warm support during the past year. The club, he said, had had an excellent year and had done good work for the party, the prospects were indeed bright and he only regretted that owing to his time being so much occupied it would be quite impossible for him to again occupy the presidency. He urged upon the young men to take a lively interest in the club and to do all in their power to help it.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows;

Hon. President—James Kendrey.
Hon. Vice-President—T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.
President—J. H. Burnham.
Vice-President—C. N. Brown.
Financial Secretary—R. J. Martin.
Treasurer—Jas. Lang.
Recording Secretary—Peter Gardner.
Finance Committee—E. A. Peck, R. M. Waddell, Jas. Edgar.

Col. Miller moved a vote of confidence in Mr. Borden and Ald. Phelan, a vote of confidence in Sir J. P. Whitney, which were unanimously carried amid cheers.

The most successful meeting of the club was brought to a close about 10 o'clock with cheers for the King.

CANADA IS EULOGIZED AT LARGE BANQUET IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 20.—Over the seat of the chairman at the banquet of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York last night shone a famous portrait of George Washington, to the right was one of President Diaz of the Mexican Republic, and on the left an almost living representation of the grave features of Sir Wilfrid Laurier warmed the hearts of the Canadians who were present. All about the noble banqueting hall of the Waldorf-Astoria were the banners of the states, but in a position apart and alone at the head of the hall was the banner of Great Britain, with the national arms and the Union Jack. The first speaker of the evening called upon by the chairman was Right Hon. James Bryce, Ambassador of Great Britain. The British ambassador is a practiced speaker, and having little of the distinguishing accent of Oxford, thanks to his Irish and Scottish associations, he was heard with splendid effect. He referred to the special position accorded to Canada, and, speaking of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he said he had the highest gifts and of the highest kind.

The toast of King Edward VII. preceded the section devoted to Canada, and it was received with surprising enthusiasm, an enthusiasm in significant contrast to the somewhat pale reception which greeted the name of President Roosevelt.

Chairman Simmons called upon Mr. Byron E. Walker of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The great hall was filled with capitalists and commercial kings of the metropolis of the chief commercial city of the United States, who listened with profound attention to Mr. Walker's rapid sketch of the progress of Canada. His words about the financial relations between the two countries and his contrast between the banking systems of Canada and the United States received equally intent hearing, interrupted momentarily by appreciative applause.

TWO DEAF MUTES ARRESTED; ACCUSED OF STEALING LUMBER

The rail birds at the police court this morning were unable to follow one of the cases before acting magistrate City Clerk Armstrong. Two deaf mutes were charged with stealing a quantity of lumber from Baptie Bros., and Finnie & Son, of Lakefield. His Worshup and the prisoners engaged in a conversation on their fingers, and the spectators, most of them, were none the wiser, for their attendance.

They pleaded not guilty and their case was enlarged until Monday morning. One of them, having property here, was allowed to go on his own own recognizance, but the other was sent to jail awaiting his trial.

COAL IS ON FIRE

At Rear of Quaker Oats Mill.

Large Pile Has Been Burning Since Monday—Difficulty in Putting Fire Out.

The large pile of soft coal slack, at the rear of the Quaker Oats Co's. plant on Hunter street, has been causing a good deal of alarm since Monday. The immense heap of coal, in many places, is on fire, there being little blaze, but the smoke rising from it shows that there must be fire underneath. The fire is due to spontaneous combustion.

Yesterday in the centre of the pile for about ten feet square there was a big blaze. It has been burning since Monday and has had to be watched day and night. Men were drawing the coal away just a little north of where it originally was.

Water will not extinguish the coal fire, but rather makes it worse. The only thing that seems to put it out is the cold air. At noon today it was still smouldering and a man is kept shovelling the coal about. In this way the air is allowed to get at the coal and the fire kept under control.

NO LONGER ANY STANDING ROOM

Toronto, Nov. 19.—Hereafter "standing room only" signs will not be displayed in the lobby of the theatres. As a precaution against a panic in case of fire the city architect's departmenth as ruled that the theatres must discontinue the practice.

The ruling of the city architect means a good deal to the theatres, particularly on holidays and Saturday nights, when the seating capacity of the amusement houses is usually overtaxed.

RAPID PROGRESS IS BEING MADE

On Two New Edifices in South End of the City

The Sunday school hall of St. James's Methodist church at the corner of Romaine and Aylmer streets, is being rushed to completion. The walls are up and the roof will be completed tomorrow. The work on the interior will be pushed with equal rapidity. The building will seat about 500 persons.

Just across the street from St. James' structure, is the new Catholic church. It is going ahead rapidly. Workmen are putting on the roof at the present time and another staff are at work on the interior.

TERRIBLE DAMAGE

PLAY THE GAME

"Prof. Colby, who was brought up among rural politics, and who is spoken of by some as a coming statesman, certainly dealt with the marrow of the electoral corruption question, when he told the ladies of Toronto, that something might be done through the appointment of a public prosecutor and by other amendments to the election law, but what was wanted was a new spirit of honor among those who were playing the game. He wants the politicians to accept the motto of the field of honor in sport. "Play up and play the game."—Montreal Witness.

This extract from a Witness editorial describes the situation very fairly. The louts who would play the political game in Canada to suit themselves will in time be swept aside as common garbage. We are a young people and hitherto have scarcely known what the words "play the game" meant but now in our sports as in our politics we are learning and when we complete our education the "slick gents" and their hangers-on will get theirs. The picture of the political slick gent and his leering admirers might well be perpetuated in oils. They always hunt in packs like jackals and they hunt to kill.

EMANCIPATION OF WOMEN

In Chicago, Equal Suffrage as it is called over there has scored a notable victory. Women are now entitled to vote in all municipal matters. This does not mean only widows and spinsters but married women as well. We have headed our remarks, "The Emancipation of Women," for we cannot bring ourselves to believe that women are not entitled to equal privileges with men. Where is the warrant for denying it? It is true that it might be as well to safeguard the franchise amongst women to a greater degree than has been done amongst men. It is grotesque that the most immoral criminal of either sex should have equal opportunities with regard to the ruin of a state with those who are seeking to build it up and make it better. It is, however, even more grotesque that clever pureminded, wholesome women should have no direct voice in the management of public affairs which indirectly they do as much to improve as the most energetic of men. The voice of a common, polluted, weakling slave to drink may turn an election and the destinies of a nation—may even declare war. But the sweetest voiced woman that ever blossomed in purity and motherly love has not so much direct power as even the echo of that voice. There is something wrong here surely.

THE PRESS AROUSED

"The rumor from Ottawa that Judge Cassels is to be turned loose on the other departments should be true. The revelations regarding the Marine Department have been so startling and so simple of discovery, that the country will not be satisfied until the money-spending methods of the other Government departments are scrutinized."—Montreal Star.

The Montreal Star voices the alarm of the press of Canada at the amazing rottenness of the Laurier Administration of public business. In industrial life the head of a factory or bank conducting it in that way, would even in Canada, go to gaol for such "carelessness." The systematized "carelessness" of the management shows how thoroughly malignant that management has been. The bluff put up by Sir Wilfrid was very dramatic, but must now appear to his most subservient admirer as ridiculous. In Canada this is the age of graft and—craft.

THE GOVERNMENT IS ON TRIAL

From the Farmer's Sun.

The revelations made in connection with the enquiry into the management of the Department of Marine and Fisheries are so astounding that they would be absolutely unbelievable if the sworn testimony of contractors who have paid bribe money, and the hesitating admissions of recipients of bribes, did not compel belief.

SOME OF THE FACTS BROUGHT OUT.

The evidence shows that one firm which did business with the Department to the extent of $146000 in three years, was not even under contract with the Government, and that it paid commissions of $500 a year, for eleven years, to Gregory, the purchasing agent of the department, and through whom orders were placed. A dealer who sold $131,000 worth of supplies to the Government in three years, and still charged retail prices for most of the immense volume of goods sold, admitted having allowed the purchasing agent a rebate of $413 on a personal account. A steamship owner charged the Government up to $400 per day for vessels chartered by Gregory, but allowed other people to use the same vessels for as little as $250 per day. Naturally, in this case also there was a rake-off for the public official. A dealer who sold the Government, through the purchasing agent, goods to the value of $17,000 allowed a personal debt of the agent for $600 to be discharged on payment of $170. One of the most illuminating pieces of evidence was that given by a minor official, who swore that he told Gregory where he could buy bricks at $7.25, equal to those for which the Government was being charged $9, when he was promptly informed that he had better mind his own business.

The purchasing agent was not the only recipient of bribes from people doing business with the Department. Practically every official connected with the Quebec branch seems to have had an itching palm. The inspector of Government steamers admitted having received an aggregate of $1,000 in presents from one firm, and that he had certified to accounts from the same firm, against the Government, without even looking into them. The captains of two Government steamers received presents from men whose accounts they were in the habit of certifying to, and a plumber bribed other officers who certified to his accounts against the Government.

These are merely specimen cases. In the aggregate thousands upon thousands of dollars were paid to officials in what were called "gratuities," "presents," or "commissions," but which were really bribes, and every dollar so paid, with more on top, eventually came out of the public treasury.

MINISTER SHOULD GO

The Minister of Marine has recognized the seriousness of the revelation made by suspending twenty-eight of the officials implicated by the evidence. That may serve as a first step but merely as a first step. The next move is due from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the head of the Government and it should take the form of a prompt demand for the resignation of the Minister in charge of the Department. If Mr. Brodeur knew his officials were regularly taking bribes from contractors doing business with the Government he was a party to the crimes committed. If he did not know this his lack of knowledge demonstrates his utter incapacity for the position he occupies. In any case he should be called on to vacate that position at once.

A CRIMINAL PROSECUTION AS WELL.

Immediate prosecution in the case of the offending officials and contractors is also called for. The Criminal Code, page 67, section 133, sub-sections a and g, provides a penalty not exceeding $1000, and imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year for offences of which these have been proven guilty, and this is undoubtedly a case in which the maximum penalty is called for.

Nor should action end even at this point. The McAvity affidavit is sufficient to at least justify the suspicion that graft exists in the Public Works Department as well as in the Department of Marine and Fisheries. It is not, indeed, going too far, to say that the whole administration is under suspicion, and that public confidence will be restored by nothing short of a general enquiry into every spending department of the Government. Now that the work of house cleaning has begun it must be pushed to completion, even if this involves the resignation of more than one Minister, and the enlargement of penitentiary accommodation to provide room for the offenders.

FUTURE OF LIBERAL PARTY AT STAKE.

The future of the Liberal party and history's verdict on the Laurier Administration will depend on the manner in which the situation is faced. The result of the late election was not so much due to confidence in the present Government as to lack of confidence in the Opposition. The manner in which Ross was thrown out and Whitney put in shows that once the rank and file of the Liberal party is convinced that a Government has become wholly unworthy of confidence it is ready to assist in turning that Government out of office even if it has not much to hope for from the other side. If there is any attempt now to hide official rottenness, if the knife of the surgeon is not relentlessly applied by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his parliamentary majority will not prove sufficient to carry him to the end of the present term; defeat, when it does come, will be overwhelming, and in history more space will be devoted to the story of shame attending the termination of his career than to the achievements of the past twelve years.

The trial is not limited to that of a score of officials. The Government itself is on trial.

Mr. O'Connell is the new president of the Canadian Club. Mr. O'Connell is in every way worthy of the honor. He does not always and in everything see eye to eye with us but he is a strong, sincere and upright man and what can any man be more? It is the privilege only of the great. For who is thus great is, we are told, greater, "than he who taketh a city."

EDITORIAL NOTES

So you have decided to call in another doctor. "I have, was the reply. "The absurdity of the man prescribing linseed tea and mustard plasters for people of our position."

Kingston Whig.

Gregory, of Quebec, is a Conservative appointee. It is pointed out, however, that it was not until 1904 that he accepted gifts—under Liberal rule. Afraid to launch out before that, eh?

One cannot read Rev. Canon Davidson's address before the local Canadian Club last evening without seeing that the reverend gentleman has gone to the root of the matter in his investigation of everyday life in England. He points out the necessity of discriminating between the poor from choice and the poor from compulsion. The latter exist from an improper ordering of industrial affairs. The former are waifs.

OF INTEREST

The Prime Minister spoke at Leeds on Saturday, and made the following reference to the Education question: "First of all let me say two or three things about education. I do not believe there was any question which at the general election two and a half years ago more deeply moved the convictions and the sentiments of the electors of England and Wales, or contributed more largely to the great demonstration of Liberal opinion. Nearly three years have elapsed, and the question still remains unsettled. And yet the grievance, the old grievance—what was it? The grievance that rates, money drawn from the pocket of the ratepayer, was appropriated to the maintenance of sectarian teaching without popular control. That grievance exists as widely, is felt as keenly as it was, three years ago. I tell you frankly I do not, not myself wonder at the uneasiness, and certainly I do not resent the impatience of some of our best friends. But let me say this, and I say it on behalf of my colleagues in the Government and, I believe, in the House of Commons—they must not suppose that their case has been forgotten, or that it will be ignored. I am still myself not without hopes of a settlement of this long vexed question by something in the nature of a general agreement. But you may be assured that we shall assent to no settlement—for it would not be a settlement—which left unredressed and unremoved the greatest and the most sorely felt injustice of the act of 1902. It has also been stated that the Government intend to go through with the bill brought in by Mr. McKenna during the autumn session. The Archbishop of Canterbury has stated that he has not been in communication with Mr. Runciman.

No Nonconformist can affect to be satisfied by the Premier's soothing phrases. "We are not afraid of the Government making an unjust settlement over our heads; what we are afraid of is that the Government will leave us exactly where we were. As for the promise not to forget us, perhaps we can ensure the fulfilment of that. At any rate, the bye-elections will do it for us. As the Government have been informed by the Passive Resistance Committee, the Nonconformists cannot any longer promise them the enthusiastic support which is necessary not only for their existence, but for their keeping or winning a single seat. If the Government, on due consideration and after due conference, are persuaded that it is best to go forward with the present Bill, taking risks in the House of Lords, well and good. What will be absolutely fatal as if they go on with this Bill in a spirit of insincerity. Unless they put their whole heart and strength into a Bill there is no prospect of success either with the Lords or with the constituencies. We earnestly plead that this whole matter shall be considered in a representative conference of both sides. This is a step which the country would welcome. The conference must be prepared to work hard, to hold many sittings, to get to the root of the matter. If it succeeds, there will be a happy issue out of the trouble. If it fails, then at least the points of divergence will be made clear, and each side will know what it is fighting for. Such a conference ought to be presided over by the Prime Minister. We say this without in the least disparaging Mr. Runciman, who will, we fully believe, yet win his spurs. But Secretary has succeeded Secretary, mistake has succeeded mistake, and there will be no confidence felt in any attempt at reconciliation unless it has behind it the Premier himself. Those who say that the Nonconformists are inclined to compromise on any terms, and are ready to tear to pieces any agreement that may be laid before them, are, we believe, utterly mistaken. There are irreconcilables on both sides, but they will not be allowed to rule. Any concession which Nonconformists can make must be consistent with conscience and principle, but with this reservation there is much room for give and take. The position of the Government will be greatly strengthened if with as little delay as possible such a conference were called.—British Weekly.

Cheese—Firm, unchanged; receipts, 1713.

Eggs—Steady, unchanged; receipts, 6283.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Hogs Take an Upturn at Buffalo Market.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—London cables for cattle are steady at 11½c to 13c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 11c to 11⅝c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—The railways again report another heavy run of live stock of 117 carloads for Thursday, consisting of 1657 cattle, 2830 hogs, 1814 sheep and lambs, and 93 calves.

Exporters.

None were offered and none were wanted, owing to there being no shipping space.

Butchers.

We heard of 14 out of 1657 cattle that sold over $4.55 and up to $5 per cwt., none that we could learn, had gone over $5 and the 14 we heard of were good enough for any market. The best loads sold from $4 to $4.37½, and few in comparison brought these figures; medium butchers', $3.75 to $4; common, $2.50 to $3.60; cows, $2.50 to $3.75; canners, $1 to $2 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. & W. Murby report the heaviest run of stockers and feeders this fall, but to offset this the outside demand for anything with quality was the best in some time, which kept prices of this kind pretty well up to past week's quotations. The depreciation in values was more noticeable in the common and medium classes, altho there were many buyers for this kind. There are a few cattle left over, but the market was remarkably well cleared up, considering the enormous run.

The Messrs. Murby bought 500 this week at following quotations: Best feeders, 950 to 1100 lbs. each, at $3.65 to $4 per cwt.; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.25 to $3.75; stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, at $2.90 to $3.15; common and medium stockers, 500 to 600 lbs. each, at $1.75 to $2.80.

Milkers and Springers.

Receipts of milkers and springers during the week were liberal. The market continues strong for the good to choice classes, at prices ranging from $45 to $65 each, with an odd one or two reaching $70 and $71. On the other hand common light cows were hard to dispose of at $25 to $35 each.

Veal Calves.

Few good calves are being offered. Prices were quoted at $3 to $6.25 with an odd calf at $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Export sheep are in demand. Ewes sold at $3.25 to $3.50; rams, $3 to $2.50; lambs, $4 to $4.60 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reported prices unchanged at $6.25 for selects, fed and watered, at the market, and $6 for lights. Prospects are for lower prices.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 250 head. steady; prime steers, $6.25 to $6.50.

Veals—Receipts, 400 head; dull and steady.

Hogs—Receipts, 3800 head; active and 10c to 25c higher; heavy, $5.90 to $6.05; mixed, $5.75 to $6; yorkers, $5 to $5.80; roughs, $5 to $5.40; dairies, $5 to $5.80.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 11,400 head; dull and 25c lower; lambs, $4 to $5.75; a few $5.80; yearlings, $4 to $4.60; wethers, $4 to $4.85; sheep, mixed, $1 to $4.

New York Live Stock.

Calves—Receipts, 663. Market dull and unchanged; veals, $5 to $9.75; a few at $10; fed calves, at $3.50. Good to prime western calves, at $4.50 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5067; sheep, slow but steady; lambs, dull and weak to 25c lower; sheep, $2.50 to $4; culls, $1.50 to $2; lambs, $4 to $6; culls, $3.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 3800; no sales; feeling steady.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 8000; market steady to strong; steers, $4.60 to $7.75; cows, $3 to $5.25; heifers, $2.50 to $4.60; bulls, $2.75 to $4.50; calves, $3 to $7.80; stockers and feeders, $2.60 to $4.35.

Hogs—Receipts, 30,000; market strong; choice heavy shipping, $5.90 to $6.05; butchers', $5.85 to $6; light mixed, $5.40 to $5.65; packing, $5.40 to $5.85; pigs, $4.25 to $5.25; bulk of sales, $5.65 to $5.95.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 20,000; market weak to 25c lower; sheep, $4 to $5; lambs, $4.75 to $5.90; yearlings, $4 to $4.85.

Cheese Markets.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 19.—At the weekly meeting of the cheese board here to-day, 910 boxes colored and 205 of white were offered, making a total of 1115 boxes. The best offer was 11⅝c. None was sold.

Republican Campaign Fund.

New York, Nov. 20.—A campaign fund of $1,500,000, contributed to the national Republican committee in the recent campaign, will be shown when the list of contributors is filed at Albany next Monday, according to The New York Evening Post. It was said that there are 15,000 names on the list.

Arctic Exploration.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 20.—E. Leffingwell, who, with Mikkelsen, headed the Anglo-American expedition to the Arctic Sea in 1906, is here, considering the purchase of the yawl Ariadne. He would take her next April, with provisions, around to the northern shores of Alaska and continue his exploration from a scientific standpoint.

AN AUTUMN NEAR-TRAGEDY.

Through the thicket stealthily
As with dire intent stole he,
In his hand a deadly gun,
In his heart the wish to kill,
In his eye (both eyes, not one),
One might see his cruel will.

Through the graceful reeds that swayed
In the breeze as if they played,
Through the marsh and through the fen
To a covert where he lay.
This may be the ambush, then
For some awful feud affray.

Suddenly arises he,
Aims his gun—ah, sad to see!—
With no warning shout or cry,
Ruthless, heartless, shoots he then;
Then he doth profanely sigh:
"Dern them ducks! I missed again!"

A Progressive Age.

"I'm a practical and experienced widow," said the woman in black, "and I want to look at some coffins without any foolishness."

"We have them all styles and prices," he replied softly and hopefully.

"And how about trading stamps? Give 'em, I suppose?"

"No-o," admitted the proprietor, almost losing his professional poise. "The truth is that at these solemn moments our customers do not, as a rule, indicate any desire for stamps."

"I guess I know a solemn moment all right," rejoined the widow. "But there's no use in making it solemner. I've just lost my third and don't intend to lose a chance at a cuckoo clock into the bargain."

She was gone. The undertaker realized that in the race for business he was being left behind.—Judge.

Why Not?

"This," said the teacher to her class of small arithmeticians, "is a unit." She held up a pencil. "This book is a unit, too," said she. "And these are units." And she showed them a ruler, a flower and an apple.

Then she peeled the apple and, holding up the peel, said, "Now, children, what is this?"

Silence.

"Come, you know what it is," she urged.

Little Bill's hand went up slowly.

"Well, William," said the teacher.

"Pleathe, ma'am, the skin of a unit."—Harper's Weekly.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Wheat For Mexico.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—There is a provision, shortage in Mexico, and the Canadian commissioner there, Mr. Donly, writes that the Government of that country proposes to suspend the customs duty on wheat until June next.

It is thought this will provide a market for Canadian wheat, as the duty is 68 cents per hundred pounds. Canadians can ship by way of either Vancouver or St. John, as there is direct steamship service on both the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards.

Thinks Morris Will Win.

Halifax, Nov. 20.—H. Moulton, who was elected as a supporter of Sir Edward Morris for Burego District, Newfoundland, is now in Halifax. He believes that Sir Edward Morris will soon be Prime Minister of Newfoundland. Judge Seymour, who was defeated by one vote in Harbor Grace, he thinks, will be elected on a recount. This would make the parties standing 19 supporters of Sir Edward Morris and 17 for Sir Robert Bond.

Alleged Swindler Caught.

St. Catharines, Nov. 20.—William Fairwell, believed to be the man for whom the police of Lincoln and Welland Counties have been searching, was arrested Wednesday night at Niagara, in an attempt to swindle the Niagara Electrical Co., and was yesterday afternoon committed for trial.

Women Gets Votes.

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 20.—The Victoria Legislative Council has passed the bill empowering women to vote at state elections. This bill previously has been rejected several times. The women throughout Australia have now won the right of suffrage in both Commonwealth and state elections.

Takes Dr. Withrow's Place.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—The Methodist Book Room committee yesterday appointed Rev. Dr. Crews, general secretary of Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues, to the editorship of the Methodist publications, in succession to the late Rev. Dr. Withrow.

Memorial For Prof. Bell.

Brantford, Nov. 20.—The sites committee of the Bell Memorial Association announced yesterday that the former homestead of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, on Tutela Heights, near this city, where the telephone was invented, will be acquired as part of the memorial scheme. In addition, a $25,000 monument will be erected in the city and unveiled probably in the summer of 1910.

Heavy Snow In the East.

Montreal, Nov. 20.—This section of the country has now enough snow to make fairly good going on runners. A heavy snow storm set in yesterday morning. The ground was covered with snow previous to the present downfall, but not enough to make sleighing.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Winter apparently has set in in the capital. Snow fell all day yesterday and the street sweepers are out.

Thigh Broken by Sign.

Galt, Nov. 20.—Percy, the youngest son of James Munn, met with a painful accident here yesterday, by which he sustained a broken thigh and several painful bruises. The lad was sitting in the doorway of a store over which workmen were erecting a sign, when the scaffolding collapsed, pinning the unfortunate boy to the pavement.

Single Fare For Delegates.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—It is expected that about 350 delegates from outside the city will attend the charities conference next week. Those attending can, on application to the railway agent, on payment of single fare, secure standard certificates, which on endorsement by the secretary of the conference, will entitle the holder to free return transportation.

Runs Into Brick Wall.

St. Catharines, Nov. 20.—William Padgett of Dunnville, Ont., a clerk in the local branch of the Bank of Commerce, participating in the "blind man's" race at the military games on Wednesday night, while going at full speed ran into the brick wall. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the hospital.

Mounted Policeman Suicides.

Regina, Sask., Nov. 20.—Staff-Sergeant Bates of the R.N.W.M.P. suicided yesterday morning by shooting. He was orderly sergeant in the hospital, and had just called the day orderly to relieve the night man. Despondency was the cause. He joined the force twenty-three years ago, and went through the rebellion and the South African war.

Trainer Committed.

Chatham, Nov. 20.—Ernie Crummer, well-known on the track as a trainer and driver, against whom a charge of perjury was preferred by Fred H. Brisco, was sent up for trial by Judge Houston yesterday. Crummer was released on $600 bail. He formerly drove Brisco's racehorse, Gollie Brisco.

Means Business.

Montreal, Nov. 20.—Rodolph Forget, M.P., yesterday deposited security for costs in the case of libel which Hon. Geo. E. Foster is taking against J. W. Levesque, who was returned for the Legislature in Laval at the last election, but is now vacating the seat on account of illegal acts by agents.

To Call Peace Confab.

The Hague, Nov. 20.—The Government of the Netherlands has proposed to advocate the convocation of an international committee to arrange for a third peace conference.

Carroll & Johnson, of the Balmoral Hotel, Belleville, were fined $50 and costs for selling liquor illegally.

A PAIR OF PUMPS.

By LITTELL M'CLUNG.

Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Dick Preston settled back comfortably, opened a magazine and proceeded to forget the downpour that was drenching Boston. But he had read scarcely half a dozen paragraphs when his gaze was off the printed page and leveled at a mass of auburn hair, daintily coiffured, that showed above the second seat in front.

"Jove!" he murmured. "I'd know that hair in Africa! There's only one head of it this side the pearly gates!"

In another moment the girl moved slightly, displaying against the window a clear, delicate profile. Then she turned half around, and Dick's gaze was diverted from the incomparable hair to an incomparable pair of brown eyes that opened wide in wonderment at sight of him.

He smiled, the eyes sparkled invitingly and with a bound he was out of his section and two sections closer both auburn hair and brown eyes.

"Hello, Christine!" he exclaimed. "This is a surprise. May I ask—where are you going?"

She extended her hand in friendly greeting.

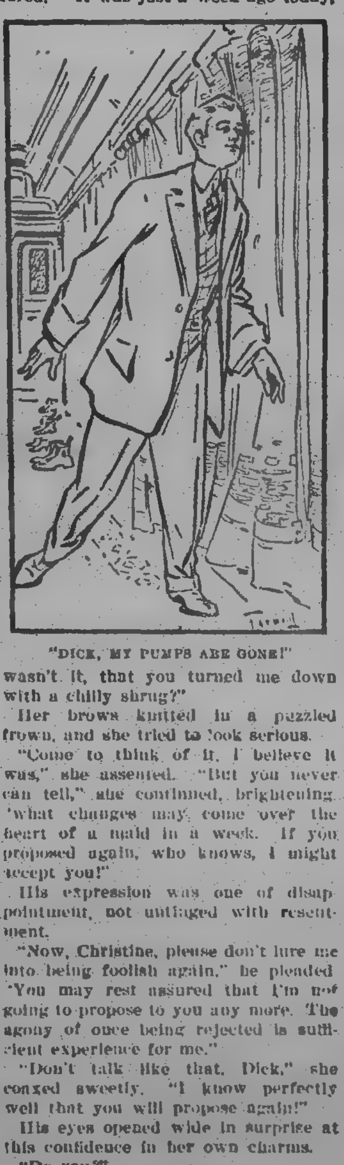
"Dick, dear old chap," she cooed, "it's just as much of a surprise for me seeing you. Where am I going? All the way to Washington to visit an old school chum. How far will I have the pleasure of your society?"

"All the way, if you don't mind," he answered. "I'm going to Washington, too—on business, of course—and I'll be at your service till you arrive in sight of the capitol!"

"To Washington," she repeated. "Well, I'm certainly overjoyed at seeing you."

The young man recoiled instinctively from the coquettish flash of her eyes.

"I'm not so sure about that," he ventured. "It was just a week ago today, wasn't it, that you turned me down with a chilly shrug?"



"DICK, MY PUMPS ARE GONE!"

Her brows knitted in a puzzled frown, and she tried to look serious.

"Come to think of it, I believe it was," she assented. "But you never can tell," she continued, brightening. "what changes may come over the heart of a maid in a week. If you proposed again, who knows, I might accept you!"

His expression was one of disappointment, not untinged with resentment.

"Now, Christine, please don't lure me into being foolish again," he pleaded. "You may rest assured that I'm not going to propose to you any more. The agony of once being rejected is sufficient experience for me."

"Don't talk like that, Dick," she coaxed sweetly. "I know perfectly well that you will propose again!"

His eyes opened wide in surprise at this confidence in her own charms.

"Do you?"

"Yes."

"Sure?"

"Dead sure. I'll wager my boots you will!"

They were tremendously smart boots—if paper weight pumps may be called boots—he thought as he glanced at them.

"Then I'm afraid you'll go into Washington stocking footed!" he laughed.

She laughed, too, as she switched the subject. Then he invited her into the diner, and they had dinner together. When the porter came to make up her berth Dick was able to assist in storing away grips, parasol and other accessories.

"Good night, Dick," she called cheerily as her head disappeared between the curtains. "I'll be out early in the morning."

"All right. See that you are, and we'll take breakfast together," he called back.

Next morning he was awakened by a vagrant beam of sunlight that broke through a crack in the curtain and across his pillow. He threw up the shade and looked out. The train was gliding out of the southern suburbs of Baltimore at a lively clip.

"Well, I've got plenty of time," he thought, "for it's an hour yet to Washington."

He donned his clothes leisurely, wondering if she were up. Then he made his way to the dressing room and after shaving started back to his section. Just as he passed her berth he heard his name called in anxious tones. "Dick, oh, Dick!"

He stopped.

"Dick," urged the voice, "come closer, I've got something dreadful to tell you!"

His heart thumped as he sided up to the curtains. Her lips must have touch his ear almost, for he felt her breath on his cheek.

"Dick, my pumps are gone!"

Though her tone was tragic, he could hardly restrain a laugh.

"Nonsense," he replied through the slight aperture in the curtains, "I guess they're under the berth where the porter put them after polishing them."

"No, they're not," she declared. "The porter gave them to me a moment ago, and I was just admiring them when they both slid out of the window! Oh, what shall I do?"

Try as he might, Dick couldn't keep back a chuckle.

"Well, I've certainly won that bet, Christine!" he said with conviction.

"That bet?" she repeated incredulously. "What on earth are you talking about?"

"You know well enough," he rejoined. "I said you'd go stocking footed into Washington before I proposed again!"

An impatient rustle behind the curtains followed this sally.

"This is no occasion for clever remarks, Dick," she observed coldly. "Maybe you don't realize it, but I'm in a very embarrassing predicament. I can't get out of the berth without any shoes!"

There was silence for a second. Then her tone was softer.

"Oh, Dick, what shall I do? Can't you help me?"

"Sure! I might lend you a pair of mine," he suggested, the smile still lurking on his lips. "They're not so abnormally large."

"Don't be absurd," she protested. "Think of something practical—if you can. There's no time to lose—we're going into Washington now!"

"Don't get nervous, Christine," he cautioned, serious now. "It is early yet, and you can remain in the berth for an hour or so. When we get into the station, I'll go out and buy you another pair of shoes."

"Will you?"

"Certainly."

"Oh, Dick, I could kiss you for it!"

"Don't get flirtatious again," he said sharply. "Just tell me the size of your slippers."

"Three," she answered.

"The last?"

"Double A."

"All right," he commented, jotting down the numbers, "if you'll keep calm for half an hour I'll return with something or other in the line of boots!"

Then he hurried out, for already the train was in the station. In less than ten minutes he was talking to a clerk in a ladies' shoe shop on Pennsylvania avenue.

"I want the neatest, daintiest pair of pumps you've got in the house," he declared. "Size three, last double A."

"What color?" asked the salesman.

For a second Dick was stumped. Then he remembered that the lost pumps he had been fortunate enough to get a glimpse of were brown, a light, delicate brown.

"Brown," he said. "Prettiest shade of brown you've got. I'll leave it to you."

The salesman smiled. "All right," he replied, "I've got something that will suit you, I'm sure."

"Don't reckon he's been married more than a week," the man thought as he pulled a box off the shelves and opened it.

Dick surveyed the pumps. Neat, stylish and pretty they surely were, if he was any judge.

"I'll take them," he said."

In another ten minutes he thrust a bundle between the curtains of the berth that he hoped still contained Christine.

"Here they are," he volunteered.

He heard her tear open the package and toss the paper aside.

"Oh, Dick, they are simply beauties!" she cried. "My, but you are a dear!"

A few minutes later they left the Pullman together.

"Dick," she asked sweetly as he helped her down from the platform, "what can I ever do to repay you?"

The chance, he thought, was now, and he seized it.

"By letting me buy your shoes always, little girl," he pleaded quietly.

"All right, I will, Dick!" she whispered. "For I don't know anybody who knows how better!"

Wanted to Warn Him.

Sir Algernon West tells this story in his "Recollections:" One day the late Sir George Campbell, who had a very strident, loud, rasping voice, called on Sir Algernon, who was then secretary to Mr. Gladstone, to talk over the land question.

After he had been in conversation about three minutes the office keeper appeared, bearing the card of an M. P. who, he said, was very anxious to see Sir Algernon. The latter said he was sorry to be engaged. In another minute he appeared with the card of a well known peer who was most desirous to have a word with him. Again the latter said he was too busy to see him just then. In another minute the man again came in with a huge card saying the lord mayor and sheriffs of London wanted to speak to Sir Algernon West very urgently in the next room.

Sir Algernon apologized to Sir George and went out to such great dignitaries. When he got out of the room the office keeper startled him by saying, "There ain't nobody here, sir, but I was afraid a madman had been shown in to you by mistake, and I wanted to warn you, sir."

BOYS ARE NOT BEHAVING THEMSELVES

Snow-balling in South End of City---Young Lady Had Glasses Broken

Complaint has been made that boys in the south end of the city are not conducting themselves as good boys should. Their conduct has not been the best for some time and yesterday the youngsters were particularly obnoxious. At noon the boys coming from the King Edward school snow balled everybody that came within range of them, ladies and children not excepted. One young lady was struck on the face with a snowball and her glasses were broken.

Some of the citizens of the south end are indignant at the way the boys are conducting themselves and intend to notify the police of what is going on.

In the afternoon there will be an exhibit of class work, such as cake and candy making, etc. besides an exhibit of domestic arts and crafts "Made in Peterborough," and loaned by many kind friends of the YWCA. There will be specimens of needlowork embroidery. lace making, drawn work crochet. knitting, centre piece, doilies embroidered towels and scarfe lace bordered handkerchiefs, sofa pillows, china and oil painting, hammered brass basketry, amateur photography wood carving, and manual dexterity. There will also be a Christmas pudding table, a cake table, and candy table. In the evening there will be introduced a short number entitled "The Reveries of a Bachelor." Further information will be furnished later.

OBITUARY

JOHN HART

After an illness of short duration, John Hart, one of the oldest residents of this city passed away at his home corner Bethune and London streets last night at about seven o'clock. The deceased was born in Manvers 79 years ago, and had resided in this city for a great many years, where he was widely known and highly respected. He was a lifelong member of the Methodist church and was a staunch Liberal. He is survived by a wife, three sons and two daughters. The sons are Dr. E Hart of Brantford; J H Hart, of Edmonton, and Jacob Hart, of Manvers. The daughters are Mrs Robert Arnott, of this city and Mrs R. Grandy of Pontypool.

The funeral service will be conducted at the late residence of the deceased on Monday morning at 10 o'clock and will leave for the GTR. station for Bethany station and from there the remains will be taken to the St. Mary's cemetery for interment.

GIFTS BOYS AND GIRLS CAN MAKE

Pretty Bits That Will Delight the Dear Ones at Christmas

A little fernery that will delight the person who receives it can be easily made from two crescents of birch-bark laced together with light green baby ribbon. Make loops of the ribbon by which it may be hung, and the day before Christmas fill your "canoe" with moist earth, plant in it a tiny asparagus fern, and one with a wider leaf. These may be bought cheap and will keep fresh for weeks if moistened with a few drops of water each day.

You can prepare a Christmas morning surprise for your family by sowing a week or ten days before some flaxseed in rich earth. On Christmas morning transplant the seedlings to half walnut shells, which must be glued to little cards with "Greetings" on them and tied with red bows. Put one at each place at the breakfast table, and see the delight they are sure to produce. If you can get some very small ferns you can add one to each fernery.

Your mother would be pleased with a set of six paper ice cream cups, covered with red crepe paper and tied with red ribbon and a spray of holly, suggests the Delineator. These filled with home-made salted peanuts or candy would make a charming addition to the Christmas dinner table.

If you have heard your father admire a verse in a magazine or a paragraph from a stirring speech, cut it out and mount it on a map of birch-bark or bristol-board and hang it over his desk or chair.

For a girl friend cover a note paper box with crepe paper and tie it with ribbons and paper flowers of the same shade. Fill it with fudge. A box covered with violet paper and trimmed with violets of a deeper shade would be lovely.

TWO HUNTING STORIES FROM THE NORTH OF THE COUNTY

The talk is all of hunting, of dogs and of deer. The woods have been full of hunters and dogs, but not quite so many deer, though most parties got as many as they ought to have, and some more so. Individual hunters snooping around on their own account, did quite as well as many of the parties. There was one man I heard of who was strolling along the ledge one day, when a handsome buck came along, and with one shot he dropped in his tracks. He was just six feet from tip to tip, and would have been a good deal more if he had lived a few years more. He had a fine pair of horns, a man could walk between them easily. He had a mile to haul him and it was quite a job.

There was another young lad, just a boy in his teens, was walking along the road north of the fountain, when a fine big deer bounded out of the woods and as near as possible ran over the boy. The boy was a bit startled at first and shouted "Hi, you. Where are you coming? Shoo!" The little deer was a bit startled, and made a bound across the road, and made for the woods, but the lad up with his old shot gun that happened to be loaded with buck shot, and let blaze. That took the bound out of the frisky bounder, and the boy and the rest of his family have taken fine fat venison three times a day since that.

The Bowen party that camped at Rolly Thurston's house had a good time, and got four deer.

Mr. Arthur Dewdney had the misfortune to lose a fine spring colt, a beautiful little black thing. It strangled itself in its stall.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glesses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

ALMOST A MIRACLE

Rifle Blown to Peices But Man Who Held it Only Slightly Injured.

What might have culminated in a fatal accodent occurred at the home of Mr. John Foley, Irish settlement, near Madoc, one day last week. One of his sons had purchased a magazine rifle in town and had loaded it with shells. Accompanied by his brother, he was extracting the shells when they exploded, blowing the rifle to pieces. The brother received a charge of the powder in the eyes, and it is not known yet whether the sight will be injured or not. Mrs. Foley, who was standing near when the accident occurred, had a slit put in her ear about two inches long from a fragment of the gun. What seems to be a miracle was how the one who held the gun escaped without the slightest injury, as he held the gun across his knee when it exploded. The father was hunting at the Flats when the accident occurred.

HELD PARTY FOR PETERBORO' YOUNG LADY

A very pleasant party and oyster supper was held at the residence of Mrs George Bick, on Wednesday evening in honor of a niece, Miss Stinson, of Peterborough, who has been visiting relatives for the last few weeks. A very select company of about 20 of the leaders of North and South Verulam Society were present, and enjoyed themselves with music and games, etc. Miss Stinson and Miss Davidson were liberal with their musical selections and contributed very much to the pleasure of the evening. About twelve o'clock the oysters were served, and that was where Joe Anderson and Herb McGee came to the front, and displayed a capacity for oyster stew that was good to see. The party broke up about two o'clock after a very pleasant time, all saying good-bye to Miss Stinson, who leaves for home on Thursday morning —North Verulam correspondence of Bobcaygeon Independent.

SOME PHASES OF ENGLISH LIFE

The English voter was vastly different to the Canadian one, he being subject to appeal and because he voted Liberal one time, it was no reason that he should do so again.

Rev. Canon Davidson referred to the striking difference between the rich and the poor in England. A great chasm, he said, seemed to divide two classes. Some features of the upper classes was their high sense of honor, righteousness in civic affairs and their sturdy independence.

The poor are vastly different. The workhouses seem to be a combine to take away their independence of character. They led happy, careless lives nad their hands are ever stretched for money for which no work is done. It is from this class largely that the English immigrants to this country come, and allowance should be made for them. Even in Canadian Houses of Refuge, the speaker thought, that the inmates should be taught independence.

He had witnessed the great suffrage procession to Albert Hall. Women of the highest intellect took part in this procession. "When I saw the earnestness of these women and knew that any man can have a vote to secure franchises, I was persuaded that they should have the right to vote."

In closing the speaker said that twenty years ago, England had contrasted Americans with Canadians unfavorably. Americans stood for something, but Canadians did not stand for much. Now it was quite different. Canada had increased in importance and it was recognized as a great country. The speaker thought that Canadians should strive to have high national ideas.

Mr. L M Hayes in moving the vote of thanks said that he was voicing the sentiments of those present when he said that he had listened with pleasure and much instruction to the address by Rev Canon Davidson. The motion was seconded by Mr Peter Campbell and unanimously carried.

The chairman in tendering the vote of thanks to Canon Davidson, said the meetings had been started under auspicious circumstances. They had listened to some interesting information. The key note of the address was the position of Canada, not only in the eyes of England but in the eyes of the civilized world. He thought that it was the duty of all Canadians to foster a Canadian spirit of nationality.

Mr T F Matthews who was to have given an address on his visit to the Holy Land was unable to be present owing to his being out of the city. The meeting then adjourned.

Geo. Lynch, the peputable comedian takes part in "All the Comforts of Home" at the Grand, to-night. Watch him get half.

Side-by-Side Comparison

Gone are the days of "just as good."

You want something better—the original, and not the counterfeit.

The "just as good" thing is a nameless ware which means more profit to the seller and less value to the buyer.

The meaningless "much cheaper and just as good" argument has gone down before the plain-marked, one-price guaranteed article which appeals to your good sense.

Side-by-side comparison will show the flaws in the "just as good" thing.

MEETING TO FORM JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE LAST NIGHT

Two teams, the Chieftains and Otonabees, were represented at the meeting called at the Examiner office last night to discuss the formation of a junior city league. The interests of the Chieftains were looked after by President F. A. Clarke, and those of the Otonabees by Messrs. Alphonse Coughlin, Howard Anderson and Wallace Harris. A couple of more teams are likely to enter the league.

The age limit was fixed at 18, those eligible for membership must be under 19 before January 1st.

Another meeting of the league will be held at the same place as last night's meeting, on Wednesday evening, when the officers of the league will be chosen

WOLFF DOES NOT WANT A SIDE BET WITH HOAGLAND

Montreal, Nov 20—Mr F Wolff, the amateur champion pedestrian, of Belgium, who issued a general challenge to all walkers recently through the columns of the Star, and whose deft was accepted by two other pedestrians now gives further particulars regarding the conditions under which the competitions should be held. The two challengers are William Gentleman Jr., a local man of quite a little note, and W A Hoagland, of Auburn, NY, calling himself champion of America. The former, Mr Wolff is desirous of meeting on Saturday, November 21st say at two o'clock, in front of the Star office, when they could talk matters over and possibly agree on a time of meeting.

Mr Wolff who is strictly an amateur walker states that while he is willing to meet Hoagland it must not be for an "side bet," as the latter suggested when accepting Wolff's challenge. Wolff proposes that they interest the manager of some rink, for instance, and in repay for having them act as an attraction at the rink to draw a crowd he might offer a prize. The local man intends looking after this matter himself and if possible inducing some rink manager here to accept the proposal.

Mr Wolff has also received a letter from Mr F O'Brien of Mile End, accepting his challenge, and this aspirant will likewise be gladly taken on by olfi preferably for a match of not less than fifty miles at Delorimier park.

T.A.S.A.C. WILL HAVE TEAM IN THE CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

At a meeting of the TASAC. Wednesday night it was decided to place a team in the city league. It was felt by all that they had material good enough to about land the mug but quite a discussion took place as to how to finance a team for the start. It was finally decided to hold a monster "At Home" at which there would be cards, dancing, and refreshments. It will be held November 27, a week from today and should be a success.

It was hinted they would consier the advisability of placing a team in the Intermediate series of the OHA. as several older players have hinted that they would get out again.

SPORTING TALK

A Peterborough report has it that Shrubb is likely to run there on the evenings of Dec. 1st, 2nd and 3rd. in relay races, from one to five miles, against anybody.

Ridpath is one of the fastest and most finished forwards Ontario has ever turned out. Sixsmith has had his eye on Ridpath for the past two months but Bruce has been loth to leave the team which he has worked so hard to build up. Writing to a friend in the city, however, he stated that things were not going to his liking up there.—Pittsburg Despatch.

There is evidently going to be lots of hockey in Lindsay this season. The latest aggregation of puck chasers to be talked of is a junior septette which will be placed on the ice this winter and which will be managed by Messrs. Dick Butler and Leonard Nesbitt. The members are all promising players and in all probability will figure in the junior series of the O.H.A.—Lindsay Post.

TOM LONGBOAT IS KEPT BUSY

Nov. 23—Niagara Falls, 5-mile, against a relay.

Nov. 26—Fall River, Mass., 10 miles, 3-man relay.

Nov. 26—Tauton, Mass., 10 miles, relay, against three men.

Dec. 4—Philadelphia, distance unsettled.

Dec. 6—Collingwood.

His latest challengers are Frank Killaly, of Boston, who was beaten here by Alf. Shrubb, and Black Hawk, the Indian from Carlisle School.

Negotiations for a race at Winnipeg with John D. Marsh are already under way.

YANKEE ROGERS MEETS MAHMOUT

To-night at Sohmer Park He Battles With Big Turkish Wrestler—An Important Match

Yankee Rogers and Yussiff Mahmout, the Turk, meet to-night in Sohmer Park. Outside of his battles with Gotch this match will be the most important one of Roger's career. The Montreal Gazette of yesterday, says;

Yussiff Mahmout, his manager, Antonio Pierri, and their advance man, Harrington, are expected to arrive here to-day, so the Turk will be given a day to rest up before his match with Yankee Rogers at Sohmer Park on Friday evening. Pierri is one of the best known figures in wrestling circles of two cotinnents. He was manager of Madrali, the Turk, whao was considered Hackenschmidt's greatest rival two years ago, and has brought to Europe and America practically all the great Turkish wrestlers of the last fifteen years. Pierri thainks that the one he has now in tow is the most useful of the lot. He is not a giant, as most of theothers were, but is a wrestler who can be matched with most of the European and American heavyweights. The tremendously big fellows proved white elephants on the hands of the former wrestler. No one wanted to meet them. Yussiff is primarily a Graeco-Roman man, and Rogers will have an advantage through the catch-as-catch-can rules being the order for to-morrow night.

DORANDO SAYS HAYES WON THE RACE FAIRLY

New York, Nov. 19.—"Johnny Hayes beat me fairly and squarely. When the Marathon prize was awarded to the great little American runner I didn't feel as if I had been the victim of a wrong decision. It wasn't the first time that I lost a race, and although I had my heart set on returning to my home in Capri, the Marathon champion, I want to say that the best man won. You can understand that it was the disappointment of my life, and one that will be hard to get over. This is my first visit to your beautiful land, and I want to let the wast American public know that Dorando Pietri is not what you would call, a squealer.

Two minutes after Dorando, the hero of the Marathon race held in London several months ago, touched the shores of America, he made the above statement, and made good on the spot.

STORY OF RACE.

"In the Marathon race the cause of my defeat was that I didn't have the proper care. That was nobody's fault but mine. When I entered the Stadium I was running in a dream, and, to tell the truth, didn't have the slightest idea of where I was. They tell me that I stumbled several times and had to be showed along in the right direction. That must be so, but I don't remember it. The final struggle when I was said to be helped over the line by an official is a blank to me. But there is one point that you don't want to overlook. I was the first to cross the line, but when the American officials protested the result and it was allowed, it has never entered my mind that the disqualification was an error. Do you think that if Hayes had robbed me of the race that I would have met him

LACKED CARE.

"If a physician had me in charge during the last few miles of the English Marathon perhaps the positions in that great contest would have been different," said the runner. "I would not have suffered as I did in the last lap, and instead of a weak Italian runner of the name of Dorando being helped over the finish line, there would have been an entirely different man. When I start off with Hayes you will see me at my best, and I promise that I will give a good account of myself."

Dorando is a slightly built man of 125 pounds, but with muscles like iron.

WRESTLING

The Montreal Star says;

Local wrestling patrons will be able to figure out just what chance the Bulgarian Turk, Yussif Mahmout will have against Frank Gotch by the character of his work against Yankee Rogers at Sohmer park, tomorrow night

Mahmout looks every inch a wrestler. He is a powerfully built fellow with huge square shoulders and if he is as active as his backers and friends claim, he certainly is a wonder Rogers is the first man to take on the Turk since his arrival in this country and as Yankee is himself a big husky chap with a propensity for roughing it, when occasion requires the contest on Friday night should be one of the hardest heavyweight battles seen here for a long time.

Rogers, who continues his campaign for premier honors in his class is in perfect condition at the moment and as he is wrestling better today than ever he should make the big Turk travel at a rate that will surprise him.

Whichever man wins will do so only after the hardest kind of a struggle

LAYMEN FROM PETERBOROUGH READ PAPERS AT CONVENTION

Reports Presented by R. J. Devey and A. Kingdon—Convention at Lindsay is Over

Lindsay, Nov. 19.—The first paper of the afternoon was presented to the conference by Rev. F. Louis Barber, of Bobcaygeon, on the subject "Religious Educational Work, including Sunday School Work." Mr. Barber put before the conference in a very plain and able way, the work that is to be done in this world. As we look back, said the speaker, we can remember the day when the church door was shut from Sunday to Sunday. This day however, is past, and the clergymen must now be up and doing. Nearly every parish has a Sunday school connected with the church in this archdeaconry. There are 37 Sunday schools in this archdeaconry, and only one or two places that have not Sunday schools. There are only three churches that make use of the gift of catechising, in this archdeaconry. This is wrong, said Mr. Barber, and should be remedied. There is no Sunday school where this gift of God should not be used. Mr. Barber named the different stages of childhood showing how the mind of the boy will grow. What the Sunday school boy wants is a teacher who will keep the boy or girl interested in what is going on. Some teachers take no interest in the lesson themselves and then they wonder why the boy is sticking pins in his companion. A Sunday school teacher must be trained. They have a great duty to perform, and the only way that they will obtain knowledge is by attending the meetings, and by reading. The Anglican church has the best way, said the speaker. Let us all be proud of it.

The second address of the afternoon was by Mr. R. J. Devey, of Peterborough, on "The Condition of Young People's Work in this Archdeaconry." There are thirty-one branches of this society in this archdeaconry. The report of the Young People's Societies, said Mr. Devey, is very encouraging. There are very few parishes in this branch of the Young People's Society. What these societies need are good people to lead these young people. These leaders, however need the help of the clergy, and Mr. Devey said that he thought that the clergy should give more of their time to that work.

The report upon work of the "Brotherhood of St. Andrew," was the subject on which Mr. A. Kingdon, of Peterborough, addressed the conference. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew, said Mr. Kingdon is doing a great work. There is much work for the members to do if the young man is to be saved. The Brotherhood is divided into three parts—the past, present and future. In the past the Brotherhood had done a wonderful work in looking after the stranger in the city. At the present time the Brotherhood is doing a good work amongst the poor and sick, lifting up the fallen and bringing them to the light. In the future the Brotherhood has a still greater work to do but if everybody gives a certain amount of time to the work it will be accomplished.

Ven. Archdeacon Warren had to leave early in order to catch a catch a train and in bidding everybody good-bye, thanked them for their courtesy to him. He was sure that the seed sown would not fall on barren ground.

A vote of thanks was extended to Archdeacon Warren for his services while in Lindsay.

The paper by Rev. E. Soward, of Peterborough, will be read at the regular deanery meeting. The conference was then brought to a close by votes of thanks to the press, the rector and church officers, the Venerable Archdeacon Sweeney, and Venerable Archdeacon Warren.

The programme given will undoubtedly be an interesting one and a large attendance is anticipated.

PORT HOPE IS COMPLAINING

About Price of Sugar There as Compared With Peterboro'

The Port Hope Guide has the following letter of local interest.

Editor of the Guide.

Dear Sir,—I have been reading your issue of the 14th instant about the increase in the price of "Clover Leaf" and "Horse Shoe" salmon from 15c to 20c, which we all know is true and cannot be denied even by the Retailers' political secretary, Mr Trowern. We have to pay the same price here, but do you know our retailers in Peterborough have an advantage over your retailers in Port Hope—they get it at the combine price yours have to pay, but they get it delivered, freight prepaid, while your retailers have to pay the freight. The wholesale grocer at Lindsay can also deliver it in Peterborough at the same price your Port Hope storekeepers have to pay for it f.o.b. Toronto. Your sugar arrangements made for you by that wicked Guild is the daddy of them all. They won't let you pay your own freight on your sugar; they soak you 26c, and carry it past your own door to our town, Peterborough, for 13c, per 100 lbs. —half the price—. The Port Hope consumer must pay this extra 13c per 100 lbs. for your storekeeper pays it to the wholesale grocer in Toronto he gets his sugar off and has no other way of getting it back but from the consumer, who is his customer.

Yours truly,
FRANK WHYTE.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rambling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

WEDDING BELLS

CHISHOLM --- HUDSPETH

Port Hope, Nov. 19—At St John's church, at high noon yesterday, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Helen Wyndham Hudspeth, daughter of the late Mr Adam Hudspeth of Lindsay to Mr Duncan Henry Chisholm, son of his Honor Judge Chisholm, of Berlin

The chancel of the church was profusely decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums and lent an attractive background for the ceremony, which was witnessed by a large and fashionable assembly.

Rev Edwin Daniel, rector of St. John's performed the ceremony assisted by Rev R B Crobbe. Miss Mellish, the organist, played softly throughout the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr Hamilton Hudspeth, of the Bank of Montreal, Chicago, wore a beautiful gown of Liberty satin made semi-empire with chiffon yoke and old rose point bertha. She wore a wreath of orchid blossoms and a tulle veil which fell in graceful folds to the end of her train and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom.

Dr J D Chisholm, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers, Mr F J A Morris, Trinity College School, Mr John Grey, Mr Angus Heighington of Toronto and Dr E. A Hammond of Peterborough, preceded the bridal party up the aisle. Miss Gertrude Hudspeth was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Alice Chisholm, sister of the groom, Miss Burnham, Toronto, Miss Helen Burn, New Haven, and Miss Edith Smith

WILL GO WITH HER HUSBAND

To Leper Settlement---Decision of Wife of Soldier Stricken With Leprosy

Washington, D.C., Nov. 19. —Mrs. John R. Early, wife of the leper whose case has attracted much attention, declares that if the Government sends him to the leper settlement on the Island of Molokai, Hawaii, she will follow and end her days with him. She says:

"I will follow John to the end of the world, if need be. There is no life for me without him, and if he is sent to the leper colony at Molokai, as seems to have just been decided, I with baby John, and the little one to come, will follow him and try to persuade the authorities to allow us to enter the leper colony with him.

"Then he can at least have the comfort of having us with him. I am not afraid of being infected with leprosy. In the first place, I think John will be cured, if he has faith, and then we have already be exposed to the disease, anyway. For myself I do not care.

"I believe it is only my wifely duty to stand by my husband in the worst things as well as the best.

"'Oh, it is so hard not to be able to be near him, to kiss him, but the doctors say 'No.' I know he longs to caress baby John, too; he looks at him so pitifully when the baby stretches out his hands to him.

"'Two years ago we were married; we promised to love and cherish each other. I meant it, and so did he. Why can't I not share his burden? It is my joy and my only consolation for his affliction."

LABOR MARKET IN THE WEST

Winnipeg, Nov. 18.—Trains coming in from the west are bringing to the city many of the harvest hands and farm laborers who find that the work is now practically over in the country. A large number of homesteaders who have been putting in the necessary six months residence on their free farm grants, are also coming in, and many are leaving to pass the holiday season in their home countries in the east or south.

Construction work on the Grand Trunk Pacific, west of Winnipeg, is largely completed for this year. The new railway has had a share in the moving of a considerable portion of the 1908 wheat crop, which has required the use of over 5,000 new freight cars this season on the prairie section west. There has been great progress in the growth of the towns along the line and several depots have been completed at many of the more important terminal points between Winnipeg and Wainwright, Sask.

PROSPEROUS CONDITIONS.

The magnitude of the operations of the crop money this year can be appreciated when bank clearings are compared. The Winnipeg bank clearings for the week ending last Thursday were $18,465,071, as compared with $14,897,081 last year, and $14,694,182 in the banner year of 1906.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario, are located the curasaline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where tratments for nerous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and all particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

Rev. R. W. Wood, of Dunbarton, has been called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian church at Claremont.

TWO MONEY BY-LAWS WILL BE SUBMITTED IN JANUARY

One for $6,000 for Expense Incurred in Building Up Water Front, and the Other for $15,000 for Street Extensions

Among the matters to be voted on by the ratepayers of the city in January will be two money bylaws. One is for $6000 for the purpose of meeting the expenditure on the waterfront between Simcoe and King streets.

Two or three years ago this land was covered with water, but is now reclaimed and is an ideal place for manufacturers, graneries, dockages or railway sidings, and is worth many thousands of dollars to the city. The earth used in the filling was secured from the Department of Public Works, whose dredge was engaged in digging a channel from the C.P.R. bridge to the Quaker Oats Company's mills. The Government also dumped the material over the C.P.R. sidings free of any cost to the city. It was necessary, however, for the city to spread the dredgings and this run into considerable money. A lot more earth is required and if it can be obtained at the same cheap rate the by-law it is proposed to submit for $6,000 allows $1000 for future expenditure. Thus to reclaim a property worth easily $20,000 has cost only $5000.

The other by-law is for $15,000 to cover the cost of street extensions which include extending George St. south Aylmer street south, except through one park lot, Hunter street east to the Lift Lock, and grading all those streets; as well as some shorter pieces; also to provide for the opening of Wescott street across the park lot and continuing it to Lock street. The total of the two by-laws is $21,000.

The two by-laws were discussed at a meeting of the Finance committee held yesterday and it was decided to submit them at the elections in January.

The finance committee also authorized that a by-law be prepared extending the time for selling the land in arrears of taxes.

On motion it was recommended that 500 copies of the Industrial Edition of the Morning Times be purchased.

On motion Mrs M King was refunded $2 dog tax.

The chairman and Ald Bradburn were appointed a committee to settle the taxes on lots 12 and 13, plan 24, part of which was taken for the extension of Aylmer street.

It was decided that the rate of interest on debentures this year be on the basis of 4 1-4 per cent. and on sinking fund on the basis of 3 1-4 per cent

The city trust commissioners will be asked if any of the city's debentures are short of the sinking fund account.

Owing to existing circumstances it was decided that the previous intention to widen Louis street be abandoned and for the present no action will be taken.

Whitby will vote on local option on January 4.

TO-DAY IS THE DAY THAT EVERYONE SHOULD BE TAGGED

St. James' Church Tag Day—Big Staff of Tag Sellers on the Alert—Have You Been Tagged?

4,000 TAGS TO SELL.

That was the motto of the Ladies' Aid Society of Peterborough's new Methodist church being constructed in the south end of the city, the St. James. The campaign commenced on November 1st, and ends to-day. The object of the tag sale is to secure money to be used towards obtaining seats for the church. The work of selling the tags has been pursued with energy and system, and the returns will be large. As the treasurer of the society has not yet made up the financial statement and cannot do so until all the revenue from the tags is in it is impossible to say just what the returns will be. However as this is the last day, it is probable that the local papers will be able to publish on Monday full information of the sum realized.

FIVE CENTS A TAG.

Five cents is the nominal price asked for each tag, and for 4 000 tags at 5 cents each $2000 would be obtained, but much more than that is expected, as many citizens are prompted to give more than the trifling amount asked for the privilege of being tagged, and in view of the worthy cause in which the taggers are working. The work is carried on in happy mood by those industriously engaged and is really more of a pleasure than labor. Those approached to buy a tag are usually very good natured, and take on in much the same spirit of cordiality with which the dispenser asks them to buy. Some rebuffs are met with from persons of a grouchy or unsympathetic character, such as were spoken of by the Toronto press, when the "taggers" up there were upsetting the general dignity of cosmopolitan life by hustling here and there in the busy sections or quieter suburban portions of the city in their efforts to get rid of the multitude of tags which were disposed of. Generally speaking, however, tag selling in Peterborough has proved quite lucrative for the reason perhaps that the good purpose for they are being sold and the novelty of the movement has appealed alike to the eager seller and the sympathetic buyer. And then the amount asked for is very small.

THOSE WHO HAVE TAGS

As has been mentioned the movement is being carried on under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the new Methodist church. The president of the society is Mrs Robinson, the treasurer, Mrs Brown and the secretary, Mrs Mann and altogether it has twelve members. Tags have been given out among the members of the different leagues and Ladies Aid Societies of the Methodist churches of the city, the YWCA, and YMCA, so it will be seen there are a large number of workers in the field.

OUTSIDE PLACES TOO

But Peterborough is not the only place in which the tag distributers is more activity locally than in outside places. Tags are being sold for the St. James' church, cause in Montreal, Toronto, Clinton, Whitby, Warsaw and Bridgenorth. The highest price yet paid for a tag, as far as is known, was obtained in Montreal when three dollars was the sum received.

THIS IS TAG DAY.

It behooves everyone who has a tag to wear it today for this is tag day and the day on which the tags are to be worn in badge fashion. The tags are quite a common adornment in the city today and those who wear them are ticketed as having given at least five cents towards the raising of the money required and besides have the distinction of being identified with the popular local institution of the day.

HIGH PRAISE FOR CADETS OF COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

The principal of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute has received the following report upon the inspection of the Peterborough Institute Cadet Corps from Lieut. Col. Strange, of Kingston, who is acting for Lieut.-Col. Hemming, who is absent on duty.

Kingston, Nov. 17, '08

To the Principal, Peterborough Collegiate Institute, Peterborough, Ontario,

Annual Inspection report 1908, No. 13, Cadet Corps, Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

Sir,—I am directed by the OC Eastern Ontario, to enclose herewith, for your information, copy of the Inspecting officer's report upon his inspection for 1908, of the Cadet Corps marginally noted.

The excellent report submitted upon this corps has given much satisfaction to the Militia Council, and you will please convey to the Officer Commanding the Corps the commendation of the Hon. the Minister and Members of the Militia Council upon the good showing made at the inspection in question.

It is particularly gratifying to observe the ability shown by the Company officers in handling their companies as also the steadiness and silence of all ranks.

You will specially convey thanks to Lieut. J E Hodgson, 57th Regiment for his good work as Instructor.

Has this unit got a Sub-Target Gun If not it is desired that one should be provided for this school, in view of their efficient condition and excellent inspection.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

F. STRANGE,

Lieut Col, SOC, MD, No 3

For, CSO, EO, absent on duty

TORONTO'S OPINION OF "DIVORCE"

"Divorce," which will appear at the Grand Opera House here on Wednesday, Nov. 25th, was presented at the Princess Theatre, Toronto last night, and among the comment on the production in to-day's papers is the following;—

Paul Bourget's remarkable drama, "Divorce," held a large audience spell-bound during its presentation last night at the Princess Theatre. It is not, strictly speaking, a problem play, because it begins years after the problem play usually ends. That it should have this when adapted to another environment testifies to the genius and skill of the dramatist, who has deftly paralleled the conduct of those who revolt from the sacramental view of the marriage relationship with the practice of other rebels who cast aside the sanctions of the civil law. "Divorce" had an entirely admirable and convincing presentation. The part of Gabrielle Darras, as rendered by Miss Marion Terry, was powerful and pathetic. Miss Ida Conquest was no less convincing as Bertha Planat, and Miss Julia Hanshet did full justice to the role of Albert Darras' mother. Gladys O'Neil was natural and unaffected as Joanne, the child of Gabrielle's second marriage.

The male parts were admirably filled. Mr. John Glendenning showed real force in the character of Darras. Vincent Serrano gave a satisfactory interpretation of the role of Lucien, and Eben Plympton made a dignified and impressive personality of Pere Euvrard, the Catholic priest. "Divorce" was finely staged, and from its abundant human interest and appeal to high moral ideals should find a generous response in Toronto.

MEAT SELLING CASE ARGUED

In County Court Yesterday Morning—Judgment Was Reserved

County Magistrate Edmison, of Peterborough, held court in Havelock on Thursday last, when the enlarged case of the municipality of Havelock vs. Robert N. Simpson, of Campbellford, for a breach of the Transient Traders' By-law came up. This action was laid at the instigation of the authorities here. Mr. Simpson has been selling meat here and taking orders for the same, and this case is for the alleged selling of meat without taking orders previously, contrary to the conditions of the by-law. At the conclusion of the case on Thursday it was further adjourned until yesterday.

Mr. George J. Sherry, of Norwood, appeared on behalf of the municipality of Havelock, and Mr. Colville, of Campbellford was in court in the interest of the defendant. The case was argued at the Court House before the Magistrate all yesterday morning. His Worship reserved judgment.

Rev James Masson a retired Methodist preacher is dead at Belwood aged eighty-two.

REVIEW'S NEW SERIAL

A new serial story commences in to-day's Review. It is "The Ghost of Lochrain Castle," and is from the pen of that gifted authoress, Mrs. C. N. Williamson, author of "The Princess Passes," "The Lightning Conductor" and other books that have delighted thousands of readers. "The Ghost of Lochrain Castle" is a tale of absorbing interest and readers of the Review are advised to read every chapter.

A generous instalment of the story appears in to-day's Review on page nine, and a portion of it will appear daily until the story is completed.

TWENTY-FIVE ARE KILLED IN NEW YORK EXPLOSION

Sewer Blows up and Men Entombed.

Surface of Street Was Torn up—Woman and Five Children Swept Into Hole.

New York, Nov. 21.—Twenty-five persons are believed to have lost their lives in an explosion of gas, which tore up a great section of Gold street, Brooklyn, yesterday.

It is definitely known that fifteen persons were buried under the hundreds of tons of earth and timber that were thrown into the air by the explosion and ten more persons are missing.

The exact number of dead cannot be determined yet, for those working to recover the entombed bodies must dig through fifty feet of dirt, rock and a tangle of pipes and timbers.

The explosion occurred in a fifty-foot deep excavation that had been made in Gold street between York and Front streets, where a water main was being laid. The gas main recently sprung a leak and in a manner unknown a spark came in contact with the escaping gas. There was a terrific explosion that lifted the surface of the street for half a block in both directions and hurled dirt, paving stones and debris into the air.

When the smoke and dirt had been cleared away it was seen that the street had been opened from doorstep to doorstep over an area of nearly a block. The loosened earth and debris had fallen into the excavation, burying the score of laborers who were at work when the accident happened. Great tongues of flame leaped into the air from a water main that had been shattered by the explosion. Two bodies were sticking out of the wreckage.

Gold street was crowded with school children when the explosion occurred, and that scores of children were not killed or injured was remarkable. A woman and three children were almost opposite the excavation when the earth crumbled under their feet and they were swept down into the hole under tons of wreckage. The other children were on the opposite side of the street when the sidewalk caved in and they lost their lives.

Samuel Trout, foreman of the gang of laborers, who were laying the watermain, was near the woman and children who lost their lives. He rushed forward as he felt the street tremble from the explosion in an endeavor to save them, but he too was drawn into the death hole. His body was the first to be recovered. Trout was roasted to a cinder.

Only four of the men working in the excavation escaped. They were: Arthur Strand, Frank Sohlnwood, John Crain and an Italian laborer known as "John." These men were digging near the opening of a four-foot sewer and the force of the explosion blew them to the entrance of it. Strand was hurled farther down, and he pulled the other three men after him.

Water from the broken main began to pour into the sewer and the four men were in danger of being drowned. They began to run toward the river, where there was an outlet to the river.

AN EVENT OF IMPORTANCE

Prominent educationists will visit Peterborough next Friday in connection with the formal opening of the Collegiate Institute. Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education; Deputy Minister Calquhoun; Dr. Seath, Supt. of Education, and Dr Pakenham, a professor in the University of Toronto, will arrive here on the 11.38 C.P.R. train from Toronto, and will be met at the station by the chairmen and members of the Board of Education and other prominent citizens. They will proceed to the Oriental Hotel, where luncheon will be had, the party including His Worship Mayor Rush, Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., and Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.

At 1.30 o'clock the party will leave on an inspection of the Queen Alexandra Public School and the Normal School, and will then return to the Collegiate Institute, the formal opening of which will take place at three o'clock. An address will be presented to the Minister of Education, and addresses will be given by the visitors from Toronto and several local speakers.

The function will be held in the assembly hall of the Institute, and the citizens of Peterborough are cordiall yinvited.

THE DROUGHT IN BACK COUNTRY

Rain is Very Badly Needed in Spite of Recent Showers and Snowfalls

Rain is very badly needed in the back country. Despite the recent falls of snow and rain, many pools and watering places where cattle and horses obtain water, are dried up.

Those driving through the northern part of the county have in several localities to drive from one to two miles out of their way to obtain water for their horses.

LARGE MARKET THIS MORNING

Fowl Was Plentiful—Butter 25 and 27 Cents per Pound

The attendance at the market this morning was large. Both buyers and sellers were present in large numbers. Upstairs fowl was as usual, very plentiful. Turkeys sold as from $1.00 to $2.25, geese at 90c. and $1.00, ducks at $1.00 a pair, and chickens at 60 to 75 cents per pair. Butter was 25 to 27 cents per lb. and eggs brought thirty cents per dozen.

On the outside market beef was 4 1-2 and 6 1-2 cents per lb., pork 9 and 10 cents, and lamb 8 and 11 cents.

A MURDER IN MONTREAL TORONTO TRAVELLER DEAD

Montreal Police Are Scouring the City for Drayman Thought to Have Been Responsible for Death of Andrew Fox.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—The body of Andrew Fox, a Toronto commercial traveler who boarded at 32 West Gerrard street, in this city, was found on St. James street early yesterday morning, and there is every reason to believe that he was murdered.

Fox had a deep gash in his right arm, probably inflicted by a knife, and a gash on the side of his head. The latter wound was the cause of death.

The police are after a carter who is stated to have treated the man brutally, if he did not cause his death.

Some time after 1 o'clock in the morning, a St. Denis car was boarded west of Inspector street by a couple of young fellows who remained on the rear platform and engaged in conversation with an elderly man who had boarded the car before them. The conductor of the car is named Forget. Forget informed the police that the elderly man, whose name he did not know, got off the car at St. Elizabeth street, St. Henri, some time after the young fellows.

But before he left the car he said that the young fellows told him they had seen a man thrown out of a sleigh at the corner of Inspector street and St. James street. The carter had smashed the man in the face and knocked him, apparently unconscious, to the ground.

After knocking the man down, the carter got into the sleigh, caught hold of the unconscious man by the foot and drove off down the street in an easterly direction at a furious pace, dragging the man after him over the rough snow.

Conductor Forget said that he was so astonished at what he heard that he believed it to be a made-up story, and did not even ask the old man where he lived. As for the boys, he did not have any conception as to where they lived.

After Forget came around his route again, down St. Denis and along St. James street, he was astonished to see police officers on the street. There were there Detective Charbonneau, Sergt. Lanteigne and Constables Charland and St. Pierre. He immediately stopped the car and told them what he had heard in his car. There is plenty of corroboration of the story told by the young fellows on the car.

When the body was picked up on the street by Constable Lafrance, it was lying extended full length between the sidewalk and car tracks. The overcoat was stretched out at full length too, behind the body, and was almost completely covered with mud.

Fox left Toronto two weeks ago for Montreal, saying he would return not later than January. He was an unmarried man, about 50 years of age, who had no regular occupation, but received an allowance from friends in Edinburgh, Scotland.

PROTEST HAS BEEN ENTERED PETITION FYLED AT TORONTO

Proceedings Taken to Unseat Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P.—Word Received From Toronto That Petition Has Been Fyled.

Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., solicitor for Mr J. H. Burnham, received the following telegram from his agents in Toronto today:

"PETITION FYLED AND ALL NECESSARY PROCEEDINGS TAKEN."

Below will be found a copy of the petition presented the court and Mr. Burnham's affidavit verifying it:

WHAT THE KAISER SAID INTERVIEW IS GETTING OUT

London, Nov. 21.—Exactly what Emperor William said on world politics to Dr. William [illegible]yard Hale, distinguished clergyman, traveler and writer, on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern at Bergen, Norway, July 19, in the famous interview which was suppressed, is now being given out.

The Emperor talked to Dr. Hale for several hours. He was very bitter against England and full of the "yellow peril." He declared that England was a traitor to the white man's cause. He predicted she would ultimately lose some of her colonies through her treaty with Japan.

The Emperor declared Japan was fomenting an insurrection in India. This insurrection might break out within six months.

Germany and the United States would, however, find a solution of the eastern question. There is a complete understanding between Emperor William and President Roosevelt on this point. They intend to divide the east against itself by becoming the recognized friends of China.

Berlin, Nov. 21.—Acting upon the advice of Chancellor Von Buelow, Count Von Stolberg, the president of the Reichstag, will endeavor to prevent all reference to Emperor William, for the present in the Reichstag discussions.

This course has been decided upon in order to quiet public feeling and to lessen the opportunities for agitation.

Prince Von Buelow was reported yesterday to be nervously depressed and more than ever disposed to resign from office when a good opportunity arises.

CABLE AND TELEGRAPHIC

Grand Jury For Booth Co.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—At a meeting of the creditors committee of bankers, the question was seriously discussed, it is said, of asking the state attorney to use his judgment of laying the failure of A. Booth & Co., known as the "fish trust," before the Cook County Grand Jury.

The creditors will receive, it is claimed, only 35 cents on the dollar.

The receivership discloses the fact that banks in Chicago, New York and other cities held $5,695,000 of the corporation's paper.

U. S. Tariff on Timber.

Washington, Nov. 21.—A number of lumbermen from the northwest want the tariff on timber taken off, and W. H. Parrish of Richmond, Va., wants cedar admitted free of duty.

The National Association of Furniture Manufacturers has declared that there should be immediate reduction on certain tariff rates, which they claim have enabled a few beneficiaries to combine and destroy competition.

Joseph Phillips' New Job.

Kingston, Nov. 21.—Cleaning dormitories in the penitentiary is the new job given to Joseph Phillips, late president of the York County Loan Co.

When he first entered he was given a position as clerk and the change made was by his own choice.

Allowing eight months off for good behavior he has still two years and nine months to serve. He is a model prisoner.

French Cruiser on Rocks.

Ajaccio, Corsica, Nov. 21.—The French cruiser Conde ran on the rocks off the Corsican coast yesterday during a heavy storm, and her position is critical. There was no loss of life. The accident occurred during manoeuvres.

The Conde is a cruiser of 10,000 tons displacement, and is 400 feet long. She was launched in 1902. She has a complement of 615 men.

Sir Wilfrid's Birthday.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier received yesterday hosts of felicitous telegrams of congratulations upon his birthday.

Sir Wilfrid was born at St. Lin, Que., Nov. 20, 1841.

Killed by the Fall.

St. Catharines, Nov. 21.—George Dawson, employed as foreman of the repair gang of the N. S. & T. Electric Railway, was killed at noon yesterday by falling off a ladder.

Historical Pageant.

Windsor, Nov. 21.—The executive of the Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich Old Boys' Association is planning to have an historical pageant in connection with the re-union celebration next August.

It is proposed to reproduce the landing of the Jesuit Fathers at Sandwich, nearly two centuries ago, and also hold a sham-battle to represent the stirring scenes which took place in this vicinity during war of 1812.

A Madri Gras festival and military demonstration will likely be held in Windsor, and a regatta at Walkerville.

McVety Criticizes Lemieux Act.

Winnipeg, Nov. 21.—In a statement given out yesterday, J. H. McVety, organizer of the International Machinists' Union, says regarding the recent C.P.R. machinists' strike.

"The laws of the country were not enforced, mandates of the Railway Commission were disregarded, and if the Government had publicly stated its intention of supporting the company, very little more practical assistance could have been given."

Mr. McVety freely criticizes the Lemieux Act.

Taft Cabinet Not Formed.

Hot Springs, Va., Nov. 21.—"I wish you would say that my Cabinet is not made up nor started. No one has been decided upon for any place in it, and no offers of any Cabinet position have been made to anyone."

This was the response of President-elect Taft yesterday to the statement from Minneapolis that Frank B. Kellogg had been invited to become Attorney-General in the Taft Cabinet.

Why He Stabbed Her.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—Pasquele Vespe, an Italian youth who stabbed Mrs. Sangole in the neck with a stiletto on Thursday, pleaded not guilty to a charge of attempted murder yesterday. He said he tried to kill the woman because she threatened to kill him. He had lived with her for five months, he said, and now she wanted to get rid of him.

The woman may die.

Canadian Life Guards.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—There is a well-founded rumor emanating from headquarters at Ottawa, that a new permanent corps is soon to be formed in the capital, and that this corps will wear the uniform of the Life Guards. The new command will be under Leslie Masoun, one of the prominent members of the younger set in Ottawa.

Pastor Ruined.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 21.—Alleged by relatives to have contracted the liquor habit at society functions in Newport, where he was pastor of members of the Vanderbilt family, Rev. S. W. Moran, Episcopal clergyman, was committed to the Wisconsin State Hospital for the Insane at Mendota, yesterday.

Assignment to a fashionable parish in Newport, where he became an habitual user of liquor and where he acquired other expensive habits, is said to have caused his downfall.

New Sheriff of Essex.

Windsor, Nov. 21.—Joseph Eugene d'Avignon, Windsor, has been appointed sheriff of Essex County, in place of the late Sheriff Iler. Mr. d'Avignon is well known in the county. He has been a member of the Ontario Pharmacy Board. He is a member of the English Church and a prominent Mason.

James Reed, ex-M.P.P., Addington, has been appointed registrar of Lennox and Addington in place of the late Stephen Gibson.

Indians Near Starvation.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 21.—Five hundred northern Indians are on the verge of starvation, according to information received yesterday from Fort George. A tribe 200 miles east of that supply post had run altogether out of supplies three weeks ago and were living on what they could beg from white prospectors.

The overrunning of the country by packs of wolves is primarily responsible for the condition of the Indians.

Fog Horn Adrift.

Parry Sound, Nov. 21.—During the heavy southwest gale last Sunday the gas and fog horn buoy broke away from Lone Rock on the Waubine Channel. It has not been recovered as yet.

Mariners are asked by the Marine Department to look out for it.

Carnegie and Steel Tariff.

New York, Nov. 21.—When questioned concerning an article by him on the tariff which is soon to appear in a New York magazine, Andrew Carnegie declined to deny that he had advocated the removal of the entire tariff on steel.

French Warships to Sail.

Cherbourg, Nov. 21.—The French cruisers Amiral Aube and Gueydon yesterday received orders to take on board provisions for a long cruise. The destination is believed to be St. Pierre, Miquelon.

BURIED AT WINDSOR

Special to the Review.

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 20.—The funeral of Robert P. Davidson, late manager of the Lakefield branch of the Traders Bank, and at one time a well-known Windsorite, who committed suicide by shooting himself at Lakefield a few days ago, took place yesterday afternoon, with burial in Sandwich cemetery.

A large number of friends were in the funeral cortege, which left the Grand Trunk station in Windsor on the arrival of the 1.50 train. The casket was born by W. F. Carter, W. C. Kennedy, Dr. J. A. Ashbaugh, J. A. Mooney, A. B. Bartlett and J. H. Rodd.

CHILDREN GET THE DISEASE CATTLE EPIDEMIC SPREADS

To the Youngsters at Danville, Pa.

Advices at Washington Are That Four Are Suffering From Foot and Mouth Disease.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Alarming results following the outbreak of a contagious foot and mouth disease in New York and Pennsylvania, causing those states to be quarantined against interstate shipments of cattle, were shown yesterday in advices that reached Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, stating that four children in Danville, Pa., had contracted the disease.

The officials believe that the spread of the contagion will be checked, although admitting that the situation is grave and will require energetic and concerted action by the state and federal authorities.

New York, Nov. 21.—Shipments of cattle to foreign ports from New York and Philadelphia were brought to an abrupt close yesterday by a cattle quarantine established in this state and in Pennsylvania. The quarantine does not affect parts outside of New York and Pennsylvania, except as to cattle from the two states affected by the ruling. Western cattle may still be shipped abroad from either Boston or Baltimore. While there is not likely to be any scarcity of beef or raise in prices as a result of the cattle quarantine, the foreign trade will be undoubtedly seriously hampered for a time.

Even Canadian cattle received in these ports in bond and dealers with such consignments on hand will be forced to send them back, because the duty on Canadian cattle makes their local use prohibitive.

Buffalo, Nov. 21.—Sheriff Smith yesterday swore in six extra deputy sheriffs, who are directed to see that no cattle or sheep are imported into Buffalo from Canada while the quarantine is in force.

All stock received last night and today will be disposed of immediately, and after that time no more shipments will be received, from whatever sources they come.

Especial attention will be given to the Niagara river, where it is comparatively easy to bring stock into the city.

All available men in the sheriff's department are detailed to this duty of maintaining the quarantine. Men have been stationed at the ferry landings, at the International Bridge and at various points on the river bank where there is a boat service or a landing place. All railroads have been instructed that no stock will be received.

London, Nov. 21.—The announcement of the outbreak in New York State, as well as in Pennsylvania of the foot and mouth disease among cattle, has caused considerable perturbation here, as the prohibition of the importation of cattle from the port of New York opens up the prospect of a serious shortage in the meat supply of Great Britain and a consequent rise in prices. As soon as the first information of the outbreak of the disease reached the British Board of Agriculture two days ago, the entire staff of inspectors was at once mobilised to inspect all incoming ships to prevent the introduction of the disease into this country. The importation of hay and straw, as well as live stock from Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey has been prohibited.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—Telegraph orders were sent to all customs officers along the frontier to establish a rigid quarantine against cattle and hides from the United States.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The local option campaign in Brantford may knock out the proposed old boys' reunion there next summer.

A swindler got next to several Sarnia folks by selling three tons of chesnut coal for $7.50, cash in advance, and skipping out.

The Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association have announced that no reduction of wages would be made on Dec. 17, as anticipated.

Charles E. Keniston, head of a large real estate concern on Fifth avenue, New York, committed suicide in the Hotel Seville by shooting himself in the temple.

At Brownsville, Pa., one man was blown to pieces and five others probably fatally injured when a quantity of dynamite exploded in the shaft of the Simpson coal mine.

Several hundred warlike Moros have gathered near Malabong, P. I. A column of five companies of infantry with a couple of guns has been sent out to make a reconnaissance.

A Mena, Ark., despatch says that fifteen miles of solid fire is sweeping through the Kiamish Mountains, in Eastern Oklahoma, and threatens to destroy the Arkansas national forest preserves.

At Oswego, Benjamin Lee, a private of the 24th United States Infantry, stationed at Fort Ontario, was arrested, charged with the murder of Emma Leicher, with whom he has lived as his wife.

A police court case, in which the defendants were mutes, was heard by City Clerk Armstrong of Peterboro yesterday in the absence of Magistrate Dumble. The men were charged with theft. No interpreter was needed because the acting "beak" knew the sign talk.

ST. LUKE'S A.Y.P.A. HELD MEETING

Address Last Evening by Mr. H. C. M. Potter on His Recent Trip to the Old Country

St. Luke's Young People's Society held their fortnightly meeting last evening, when the Sunday school was filled with a good representation of members. The feature of the evening was the address by Mr. H. C. M. Potter, on his recent trip to the Old Country.

The chair was taken by Miss Ethel Pakenham, vice-president of the society. She introduced the speaker.

Mr. Potter referred to the Franco-British exhibition, which he had the pleasure of visiting. He pointed out most clearly the cause of trouble with the United States team at the Olympic games. He also described the beauties of English scenery and some of the great sights that he saw in London.

During the evening, Mr. C. Coleman sang a solo which was heartily encored.

At the conclusion refreshments were served by the gentlemen.

Temperance Meeting

A gospel temperance meeting will be held at the Crystal tomorrow evening at eight thirty o'clock. The speaker will be Rev J. R. Webb, and the musical part of the programme will be supplied by the Murray street choir

MONTREAL MAN ROBBED OF $4,000 ON BUSY STREET

Montreal, Nov. 21.—One of the most barefaced hold-ups of recent years was attempted yesterday afternoon in a thickly-populated section of the business part of St. Henri ward.

R. G. Tolmie, cashier of the Colonial Bleaching & Printing Co., while on his way from the bank to the firm's promises in St. Henri, carrying a satchel containing $4,000, was stopped by a man who snatched the valise, and, pointing a revolver at Tolmie, exclaimed: "I'll shoot you if you follow me."

Then the hold-up man wheeled round and ran along Notre Dame street, the cashier in hot pursuit. The thief seemed to lose his nerve and dropped the bag containing the money, climbing up a hayloft. Although every effort was made to effect his capture he is still at large. The streets were crowded at the time of the affair, and it is regarded by the authorities as one of the boldest attempts at robbery for a long time.

COCKING MAIN TO TAKE PLACE IN COURT IN OLD KENTUCKY

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 21.—In a pit built on the judge's rostrum in the courthouse in this city there will be several cock-fights in the first week in December for the purpose of determining the best game cock in Kentucky.

This is a new departure in judging cooks at a poultry exhibition, for heretofore it has been beauty, size, and style that have won the blue ribbon, but this year the best "scrapper" will be rewarded.

The fights will be conducted in the presence of all comers, men, women and children, and they will have an opportunity to see, many of them for the first time in their lives, the principal pastime of Southern men.

It is a felony to fight cocks in Kentucky, so that when the county officials are among the spectators the cocks will spar with muffs, but when the county officials are not on duty there will be something doing in the oldest courthouse in Kentucky.

THE JAPANESE IN INDIA SEDITION THERE AND ITS CAUSE

London, Nov. 19—The daily record of violence and seditious acts in India has long shown that the unrest there is increasing rather than abating, and the opinion is becoming general that the situation is becoming more serious. One of the latest indications that the trouble is growing is the sudden determination of the Viceroy to cut short a visit he intended to make to the Indian princess and to return to Calcutta.

Some of the newspapers here advocate sterner methods in suppressing the sedition which, in their opinion, signifies a revival of the race hatred which has not been known since the mutiny. The Standard says it learns that the apparent failure of the appeal to the natives in the King's recent message is causing anxiety. It adds that as a consequence of this and other marked indications of increasing unrest there is reason to believe that greater powers are about to be given to the Indian authorities to deal with the situation. Among the measures contemplated is believed to be the establishment of special courts to deal summarily with outrage mongers.

The Daily Mail published conspicuously an article by an anonymous Anglo-Indian official of wide experience, who it is declared, is incapable of entertaining panic views. He takes a serious view of the situation, the gravity of which he says is not realized in Great Britain. The truth however, is that race hatred has reached the high water mark of danger. It is indubitable that the native states are leavened with treason and their chief watch wonderingly the manifestations of British weakness. He declares it is time that the Viceroy bestirred himself.

LATE HAVELOCK ITEMS

Special to the Review.

Havelock, November 2 .—Mr. Wm. Quackenbsh, of Belmment, sold his far, stock and implements by auction on Wednesday, H. T. Andrews being the auctioneer. At this sale oats sold for 58 cents per bushel, and other things went up accordingly. Cows sold from $15 to $24.

The tenders for carrying mail to and from the station to the post office has resulted in Mr. D. Hogg securing the carrying of the same for the next four years. Mr. Robt. Curry has secured the contract for the mail to Rockdale and Cordova. The new arrangements of the daily stage to Cordova is causing considerable dissatisfaction among the residents of Cordova and those living on the Cordova road. Under the old system the stage left Cordova in the morning, returning in the afternoon with mail off the noon train. Under the new schedule the stage leaves Havelock every morning at nine o'clock, returning in the afternoon. This way the noon mail does not reach Cordova until the next day. Under the old arrangement persons could come out from Cordova on the stage in the morning, returning in the afternoon. If they wish to come out on the stage now they must come in the afternoon, stay over night, returning next day. It is reported that steps are being taken to petition the Postoffice Department to readjust this matter.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ritchie are visiting with friends in Waberly.

Mr. R. P. Nolan of West Toronto, was in town on Monday last.

Rev. H. Caplan was in Lindsay this week attending the Archidiaconal conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough.

Miss Floe Jewel is visiting at her home in Toronto.

The hunters have all retrned from the wilds and are busy with their narrow escape stories and eating venison. All the Havelock hunters had very good luck this year. Mr. M. Hogan, the old reliable Oak Lake dead shot, was successful last week in bringing home a fine large wolf. The wolf attacked one of the dogs and would have soon killed it had not Mr. Hogan come to the rescue and put a bullet through the vicious wolf.

Sunday next, Nov. 22nd, is the exact anniversary of the induction of Rev. J. A. G. Stirling as pastor of the Havelock Presbyterian church. On that date special services will be held in the church both morning and evening. Rev. P. B. Thornton, B.A., of Colborne and Lakeport, will conduct the services and also assist in the service of praise.

The annual convention of the Belmont Township Sabbath School Association was held in the Methodist church on Friday last. There were two very successfl meetings and both were largely attended. In the afternoon Mr. H. W. Brown, B.A., Training Secretary of the Provincial Sunday School Association, delivered a ver interesting address.

At the evening meeting addresses were delivered by the following: Mr. R. Lees, M.A., secretary of the County S.S.A., on "The Teaching of Temperance in the Sunday School"; by Mr. Brown on "The Average Sunday School"; by Rev. Mr. Stirling on "The Essential Requirements of a Sunday School Teacher," and by Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Cordova, on "Teachers' Influence on Character." During the evening those present were delighted with duets and solos from local artists. The new officers of Association are;—

President—Mr. P. O. Nelson.
Vice-President—E. O. Pace.
Secretary—P. Baines.

The executive committee will consist of the resident clergymen and superintendents of the district Sunday schools.

Mr. Gallaher, of Cordova, secured a splendid specimen of a wolf during his hunt.

Mrs. George Dennis, of Cordova, was in town on Thursday last.

The 1908 voters' lists have been printed for the village, and are now in the hands of the clerk, Mr. W. J. Bryans.

Mr. Carman Holcombe, while getting over a train this week, was struck in the back with a semaphore board and laid up for a few days.

Mr. J. A. Culverwell, manager of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., was in town on Monday last.

Wednesday, Nov. 18th, was pay day for the employees of the C.P.R., and many a man has increased his bank account by a goodly lot. Last month was a busy one on the railroad, which is shown by some of the large pay checks. This month has been just as busy, and one man remarked that he would lay off one trip as he had made exactly 30 days up to the 18th. If they could keep on making 30 days in 18 they would sooon get rich.

The address given by the Rev. Bernard Anderson, under the auspices of St John's church, held in the opera house on Wednesday evening was very poorly attended, but those present had a decided treat in the imaginary journey on which Mr. Anderson took them, to the "Midnight Sun." Mr. Anderson is an able and interesting speaker, and, if he ever revisits Havelock, as he intends to do, he will be sure of a much larger audience.

Rev. George McConnel, of Roblin, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Webb.

A shooting match for turkeys was held in the park on Friday afternoon.

A number of men from the Ottawa and Smith Falls division of the C.P.R., have been changed to Havelock.

Mr. George Sherry, of Norwood, was in town on Friday on business.

Aftermath of the Protest Against the Horse Walter G at Races at Peterborough Fair

It is understood that Mr. G. W. Hatton has been instructed to collect as solicitor, the money from the Fair Association that was paid to the owner of Walter G the horse that was protested in the races at the Peterborough Fair last winter. The money was paid to Hodgins, of Orillia, the owner of the horse while the horse was under protest.

The other horses for whom the money is claimed are Harry K., Hazel Bell and Holland Boy. The result of the proceedings will be awaited with interest by local horsemen and to many horsemen in fact, throughout the province.

HAS CURE FOR SEASICKNESS

London, Nov. 20.—The London Daily Express, which has been conducting a series of experiments as to the cure of sea-sickness, announces that it is convinced that T. B. Mothersill, a Canadian, has discovered the nearest to a complete and preventive cure. One of the last of the experiments conducted by the Express was to send a test party of two ladies and two city business men, all of whom were very bad sailors, on trips from Dover to Calais, from Holyhead to Dublin, the last especially, being in what sailors call "dirty weather." The Express claims that the Canadian remedy enabled men already sea-sick to enjoy the table d'hote in the saloon of the steamer without unpleasant after effects.—Montreal Star.

DON'T BLAME HER

For she cannot help it. Women are often cross, irritable, hysteric, and declare they are driven to distraction at the slightest provocation.

Men cannot understand why this should be so. To them it is a mystery because in nine times out of ten this condition is caused by a serious feminine derangement.

A remedy is necessary which acts directly upon the organs afflicted, restoring a healthy normal condition to the feminine system, which will quickly dispel all hysterical, nervous and irritable conditions. Such is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. Henry Clark, Glandford Station, Ont., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years, and never found any medicine to compare with it for sick women.

"I had ulcers and a displacement of the female organs, and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which has cured me."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

OBITUARY

DENNIS DELANEY

The death occurred on Thursday morning of Mr Dennis Delaney, who resided about a mile east of Warsaw. He was seventy-two years of age and one of the early settlers of the district.

The funeral took place yesterday morning to the Roman Catholic cemetery at Douro and was largely attended.

DIED.

HAWES.—On Friday, Nov. 20th, 1908, Dorothy Lenore, youngest daughter of Mr. Geo. Hawes, aged four years, 7 months.

Funeral on Monday, 3.30 p.m., from No 676 Water street, to Little Lake cemetery.

FOORD.—On Saturday, Nov. 21st, 1908, at the residence of her son, Mr. W. H. Foord, superintendent of Mount Pleasant cemetery, Deer Park, Ontario, Charlotte, relict of the late Thomas Kent, aged 75 years. Interment at Little Lake cemetery, Peterborough, on arrival of the Grand Trunk train at 11.38, Monday, Nov. 23.

EXHIBITION FOR MONTREAL.

Biggest Annual Show In Canada Is Proposed by Citizens.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—At a meeting of ex-mayors and prominent citizens yesterday it was decided to hold a permanent exhibition in Montreal each year from now on like the exhibition in Toronto, only it is to be held on a much bigger scale.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has promised $50,000 towards the accomplishment of the object, and the Provincial Legislature $10,000.

Although no site has been decided upon, it is more than likely that the exhibition may go on St. Helen's Island, which, some day or other will be connected with Montreal by a bridge.

Empress' Fast Trip.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Ireland arrived at Liverpool at 5.35 a.m. yesterday and has completed the voyage from Rimouski, where the mails for Europe are taken aboard, in 5 days, 15 hours and 20 minutes. This is considered a remarkable achievement at this season of the year.

Killed In Quarry.

Kingston, Nov. 21.—Robert Moxley, aged 28, unmarried, was killed in Tait's stone quarry yesterday. He was working near a derrick when one of the legs fell, striking him on the head and jamming him against the boiler. He lived two hours.

Fewer Seek Homes.

For the first eight months of the present fiscal year there was a net increase of 2,235 in number of homestead entries made in the Canadian west. The total number of entries was 18,423, as against 20,658 last year. During the month of August there were 1,859 entries, representing 4,467 souls. Americans headed the list with 424, English come next with 287, and Canadians from Ontario third with 245. Of foreigners Austro-Hungarians head the list with 128 entries.

Bear Scared Firemen.

While fighting an early morning fire in the rear of a grocery store in Ottawa recently, two firemen were suddenly given a rude alarm by the appearance of a bear walking towards them on his hind legs from a corner of the yard. They found out after a few moments that it was only a pet bruin.

Flashlight Taken

At the conclusion of "All the Comforts of Home" at the Opera House last night, a flashlight picture of the company was taken by Mr Louis Mendel. Afterwards the company had a supper at the Dominion Chinese cafe when a most enjoyable time was spent

KEEP BABY WELL

No matter whether baby is sick or well Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in the house. They not only cure the minor disorders of childhood, but prevent them and should be given whenever the little ones show the slightest sign of illness. Children take the Tablets as readily as candy, and they are absolutely safe. Mrs. Geo. Howell, Sandy Beach, Que., says:—"My baby was greatly troubled with colic and cried night and day, but after giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared. I advise all mothers to use this medicine." Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FIRE INSURANCE Policy

Is ever entertained by the man who carries an insurance policy that will cover the loss of, or damage to, his home or property through the ravages of fire. He has a safe-guard against loss, and it gives him a spirit of confidence that he is protected from one of the worst dangers to which we are all daily exposed. A fire insurance policy is the best investment any business man can make.

This is the season of the year when fires are most prevalent and also the time when a person most wishes protection against such misfortune. We shall write a policy for you in one of the oldest and strongest companies in existence. For particulars apply to

FUNERAL OF THE LATE PROF. BAIN

Took Place This Afternoon in Cobourg--Services Yesterday in Toronto

A memorial service was held yesterday afternoon at Victoria College at three o'clock, to honor the memory of the late Prof. Abraham Robert Bain, registrar at the college for the past twenty years.

The service was attended in a body by the faculty and students of Victoria, and by representatives of the other colleges. The lesson was read by Rev. Prof. Burwash, and the prayer offered by Rev. Prof. Bowles. Memorial addresses were given by Rev. Prof. Wallace and Prof. Bell.

A private service was held at the house at two o'clock, Rev. Dr. Wilson and Rev. Mr. Armstrong, officiating. After the service at the house the body was taken to the chapel at Victoria College for the service there.

The body was taken to Cobourg yesterday afternoon on the five o'clock train, and the funeral was held in that town this afternoon at two o'clock, from the residence of Mrs. John D. Hayden.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Dumble, relations of the deceased, attended the funeral from this city.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM. CONSULTATION FREE. CHARGES MODERATE.

YOUTH MADE AN ASSAULT UPON WOMAN

Somewhat Sensational Story From the Vicinity of the Scotch Line

Lindsay, Nov. 19.—A report reached town this morning that a dastardly attack was made upon a widow woman living in the vicinity of the Scotch Line, by a young fellow, fifteen years of age, also a resident of that locality, last night. The assault-woman lives in an isolated spot and her physical strength saved her from serious injury. She grabbed her assailant and threw him to the floor, holding him there until aid had arrived.

The noise the young fellow made in entering the house aroused the woman and she went down stairs. He made a savage blow at her with a bludgeon he carried, and succeeded in hitting the woman on the temple. She was partially stunned, but even then she was able to grab the youth and hurl him to the floor. Her son ran for assistance and the young ruffian was still on the floor with the woman holding him down when neighbors reached the place. The assailantt was taken to Bobcaygeon and placed in the hands of the village constable.

W. O. W. NOTICE

The members of Sherwood Forest Camp No. 50, are requested to remember the open meeting to be held on Monday evening, November 23rd, at 8 o'clock. An interesting programme has been prepared and refreshments will be served.

ANNUAL RE-UNION OF CONGREGATION

Held at Murray St. Church Last Evening---An Enjoyable Function

The annual congregational re-union of Murray-st. Baptist church was held last evening. The Sunday school hall was filled with a large gathering and an enjoyable time was spent in a social manner.

Rev. J. R. Webb, the pastor, occupied the chair and extended a welcome to those present.

An interesting programme was given consisting of vocal solos by Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Showalter and Miss Clara Kidd, piano duets by Misses Walker and Quinn, and Misses Eleome, a violin solo by Miss Hope Miller and readings by Mrs. J. A. Morgan and Miss Browett.

Short addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Riddiford of Park-st. church, and Messrs. V. Eastwood and Wm. J. Dunlop.

At the conclusion refreshments were served.

LECTURE ON "THE BOYS OF INDIA

By Rev. H. J. Keith in St. Andrew's Hall Was Largely Attended

The lecture on "The Boys of India" by Rev. H. J. Keith in St. Andrew's hall last night was largely attended. It was held under the auspices of the Boys' Guild in charge of the Missionary Committee.

The chair was taken by the pastor, Rev. J. G. Potter, who introduced the speaker of the evening. Missionary hymns were thrown on the canvas and heartily sung by those present.

The lecture, which was decidedly interesting, was illustrated by stereoptican views. Rev. Mr. Keith in his able manner, referred to the lives of the Indian boys, their training until they became men. The address was instructive as well as interesting and at the conclusion of it, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Rev. Mr. Keith.

PROCEEDS OF TAG DAY SO FAR ARE $150

Enjoyable "At Home" at St. James' Parsonge Last Evening ---Large Attendance

The "At Home" in aid of St. James' church yesterday afternoon and evening at the St James' parsonage, Crescent street, was largely attended, the people coming and going in largen numbers from four o'clock in the afternoon until six and then from 8 until 10 o'clock in the evening. The event was a happy culmination to tag day and everyone present was tagged. The function was quite informal. It was very enjoyable and the large number present was encouraging to the new congregation of St James' church.

During the evening vocal and instrumental solos were given by Mrs Hughes, and Misses Olarry, Morris, Manning and V Palmer, and Mr. Downey. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The proceeds of tag day, so far, received, are $150, but there are many places where tags were disposed of that have not been heard from.

"ALL THE COMFORTS OF HOME" PRESENTED FOR THIRD TIME

And Greeted by Larger Audience Than on Two Former Occasions—Presentation of Road Race Prizes.

"All the Comforts of Home," was presented for the third time at the Grand Opera House last night and the local amateurs were greeted by a big house. The comedy was put on in a manner that left nothing to be desired and the audience was kept in continual laughter. The cast was the same as that which handled the play on two former occasions and every role was portrayed in an almost faultless manner.

Special mention must be made of the work of Mrs. J. N. Barber in the part of Mrs. Bender. Until a short time before the hour of the performance it was feared that Mrs. Barber would be unable to appear as she was suffering from a severe illness and her doctor had advised her to remain in her room. Rather than disappoint the large audience, however, Mrs. Barber literally left her bed, went to the Opera House, and although in a very weak condition from the effects of her illness, gave an admirable portrayal of her part. Few in the audience were aware of the difficult task essayed by Mrs. Barber. Too much credit cannot be given her for the pluck displayed.

The vocal solo by Miss L. Hallihan and Miss Pearl Morgan were received with enthusiasm. Both young ladies had to respond to encores.

Great credit is due Mr. Irving Beers, the talented and energetic director and also Mr. Geo. Lynch, the efficient stage manager.

Between the second and third acts the prizes won by competitors in the Examiner road races on Thanksgiving Day were presented by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner. Mr. Kenner gave an address in connection with the presentation, urging among other things, the amalgamation of the different sporting bodies in the city.

Mr. J. H. Adams, who came first in the senior race, was presented with the silver cup, to hold for one year, and a gold watch, Mr. Chas. Thorpe, who finished second, got a valuable vase, and Mr. E. Wilson, the third man, received a valuable stick pin. Mr. Hanlon Howard, who came in fourth, was not present. A pair of gold cuff links has been sent him.

1. Bertram Cross, gold ring.
2. Garnet Tovey, fob and locket.
3. Jimmy McMartin, gold stick pin.
4. Ormie Sp Spillsbury, gold pencil.

A special prize of a watch was given to Harry Nellise, the nine-year-old boy, who made such a good showing in the junior races. The boys got a big reception as they came forward and received their prizes.

Mr. Adams, the winner of the senior race, made a neat speech upon being presented with his prizes.

CONTRACTS LET FOR SNOW PLOUGHING IN THE CITY

Twenty-right tenders for snow-ploughing of the city streets for 1908-1909, were opened at the meeting of teh Board of Works last night. The city will this year be divided into eight districts and the tenders accepted are as follows:

District No. 1—City.
District No. 2—E. Flaherty, $187.
District No. 3—Jas. A. Reid, $150.
District No. 4—S. Harper, $125.
District No. 5—Robert Nicholls, $127.50.
District No. 6—M. Rischie, $110.
District No. 7—R. Mitchell, $114.
District No. 8—Ben Rovoy, $100.

The contractors for snow ploughing this year will be compelled to carry out their contracts, and in case they fail to do so their sureties will be called upon to pay. No one will be given any bonus at the end of the season, as several have asked for in the past.

On motion it was decided that the bondsmen must be satisfactory to the chairman.

ORGANIZATION OF CAMERA CLUB WAS A SPLENDID MOVE

The advantages offered for those who indulge in the making of photos are not considered by those who use the kodak and folding hand camera, or there would not be room in any one of the small assembly halls for those who would wish to attend their meetings.

Photography is essentially conducive to sociability and it may be said with a due regard to truth that amateur photographers are among the most sociable people on earth consequently constituting a class particularly available for club membership; and it is astonishing to note how small a percentage of the ever increasing brotherhood of the camera is to be found in the organizations devoted to their interest. This can only be explained by that the real advantages to be derived from our fraternal societies have not been fully appreciated by the uncounted thousands who press the button and leave the rest to fate. It is safe to assume that few beginners ever enter the photographic field without a hope of ultimately comprehending something of the higher phases of the art, or even if it is taken up as a passing fad, will sooner or later awaken a commendable ambition to know more of its inner mysteries.

Let such a beginner meet with fair success, working as an independent or unattached recruit of the great army of the camera, and it will not be long before he will reach a point where further advancement seems well nigh impossible to him, for without the association of other more proficient in the art, he will fall uncorrected into habits that only seem to confirm him in his faults, and render his pictures an unchanging series of conventional and stereotyped views. Whereas if the earlier days of his novitiate he is fortunate enough to join a camera club, he will not only find associates ready and able to save him from many of his early failures, but will find encouragement and inspiration from the successes of experts daily achieved and exhibited in the camera club. All this is only the personal side of this matter, and affecting individual members, while the true and lasting motions of maintaining our photographic clubs should be found in a desire to encourage experiments and raise the standard of photography to higher artistic and scientific planes. The majority of photographic clubs are so limited in membership and finances that their habitations partake of little more than work rooms while in clubs founded upon other ideas, the social side is placed well to the front. The local club is endeavoring to bring together those interested for social and mutual benefit to each other and to the photographic art. They hope to have salons, exhibitions both private, —for members only—and public, papers and addresses on subject which will be a benefit to all, and demonstrations on many of the finer phases of the art.

The club meets on Tuesday evening next in the Tate Taylor Optical Co's. parlors and hope to enlist as many as possible in the material benemany as possible in the mutual benefit, which may be derived from co-operation and association.

PROTEST HAS BEEN ENTERED

moneys expended in bribery and corrupt practices thereat.

9 And your petitioner says that the said James Robert Stratton was by himself or his agent or agents with his knowledge and consent and by other person or persons on his behalf with like knowledge and consent guilty of the corrupt act of giving or causing other or others on his behalf to give large subscriptions and sums of moneys to churches and charities in anticipation of and during the time of the holding of the said election with the corrupt purpose and intent of unlawfully and unduly influencing large numbers of the electors of the said Riding in the choice of a member and to vote for Respondent at the said election.

10 And your petitioner says that the said James Robert Stratton at the time of the said election had directly or indirectly alone or with other person or persons by the interposition of a trustee or third party holding or enjoying, undertaking or executing a contract or agreement with and for the Government of Canada on behalf of the Crown or with or for some officers of the Government of Canada for which public money of Canada was to be paid during the time he was so holding, enjoying or undertaking or executing whereby the said James Robert Stratton was ineligible as a candidate at the said election, and his election in consequence thereof was and is void.

11 And your petitioner further shews that the said James Robert Stratton, before, during and after the said election was by himself and his agent or agents or other person or persons on his behalf, and with his knowledge and consent, guilty of other corrupt practices as defined by the Dominion Elections Act and Amending Acts and other Acts of the Parliament of Canada or recognized as such by the Common Law of Parliament.

12 By reason of the commission by the said James Robert Stratton, or by his agent or agents or other person or persons on his behalf and with his knowledge and consent, of the said corrupt acts, he, the said James Robert Stratton, was and is disqualified and incapacitated from being elected or for sitting in the House of Commons or for voting at any election or as a member of the said House or for holding an office in the nomination of the Crown or Governor General of Canada.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that it may be determined that the said James Robert Stratton was not duly elected or returned, and that the election of the said James Robert Stratton was void, and that he may be declared guilty of the said several corrupt and illegal acts hereinbefore alleged and charged as being committed by him and by his agents and by other persons on his behalf and with his knowledge and consent.

And your petitioner will ever pray.

J. H. BURNHAM,
Petitioner.

YOU NEED FEAR IT NO LONGER

Gravel Warded off and Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Manitoba Man Tells How His Urinary Troubles Vanished Before the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Hamrlik, Man., Nov. 20. (Special.)—Probably there is no disease to which man is heir that causes such a general dread as Gravel or Stone in the Bladder. The frightful pains it brings and the terrible operations it necessitates cause a shudder of apprehension whenever it is mentioned. But there is really no reason why any man or woman should fear Gravel. It is purely and simply a Kidney disease, and as such can be either cured or guarded against by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Take the case of Mr. Calvin R. Snyder, well known here. He says;—

"In the spring of 1907 I was almost laid up from a lame back and most laid up from a lame back and was also troubled with excessive urination. I got a box of Dodd's Kidney Kidney Pills, and used them with satisfactory results. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best Kidney medicine I ever heard of."

If you follow Mr. Snyder's example and use Dodd's Kidney Pills for slight urinary disorders, you will never be troubled with Gravel. If you have Gravel Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

FUNERAL WAS HELD TO-DAY

Of the Late Chester Marks Who Passed Away in Collingwood on Thursday

The remains of the late Chester Marks, who passed away at his home in Collingwood, on Thursday, arrived here last night and the funeral took place this afternoon at three o'clock, from the residence of his uncle, Mr. Albert Duncan, 371 Bethune street, to the Little Lake cemetery. Rev. E. A. Pearson conducted the funeral service.

The deceased was 16 years of age and was the son of Wm. Marks, of Collingwood, who, until three months ago resided here. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents, as only six weeks ago their seventeen-year-old daughter was buried here.

Besides his parents, one brother, Earl, and one sister, Beatrice, are left to mourn his loss.

Seventy-eight guesses were recorded Wednesday in the guessing contest for ladies at th Arcade Store. d3

STARS OF THE STAGE AT GRAND

A Company of Very Great Excellence to Appear Next Week

An event of unusual importance is announced for Wednesday night, November 25th, at the Grand Opera House when F C Whitney will present here for the first time Paul Bourget's remarkable drama, "Divorce" the English version of which has been made by Mr Stanislaus Stange.

In order to present this play in a manner befitting the varied play of emotions which it embodies, Mr. Whitney has gotten together a cast of extraordinary excellence headed by Miss Marion Terry a sister of Ellen Terry and the youngest of the famous Terry family, and accredited in her own country as the greatest emotional actress on the English stage. Associated in the cast is Miss Ida Conquest, who is known to audiences as an actress of remarkable charm and power and in the male division are such sterling actors as Vincent Serrano, Eben Plympton and John Glendinning. The balance of the cast includes Miss Julia Hanchet, Miss Florence Howard and little Gladys O'Neil who assays a child's role with considerable ability.

In Montreal, Detroit and Toronto, where "Divorce" was played during the past three weeks, the critics were unanimous in their praise, not only of the play itself, but of the players who interpreted it. The Montreal Herald commenting on the opening performance said;

"We are shown human beings under the strongest emotional strain and portrayed with the exquisiteness of physchology that no pen but Bourgett's can rival."

The Montreal Star said; "Divorce" might best be characterized as a drama of conscience. There is real sincerity underlying the problem and the way in which it is handled. Certainly its treatment is broadminded, while from the point of view of the churchman its argument is flawless."

Inthon Bible Class

The second literary meeting of the season was held in the church parlor last night. A good enjoyable time was participated in by those present.

Mr R J Soden, the chairman of the literary committee was unable to be present. But notwithstanding the fact an improvised programme was successfully carried through and the evening passed all too quickly.

The main feature of the evening was a spelling match. Two Normal school boys, Messrs Clancy and Leary acted as captains and they acquitted themselves admirably. Mr George Robertson called the words and it seemed to be an especial delight for him to pick out the hardest words in the Practical Speller.

It was the cause of much humor and knowledge and some very queer combinations of letters were made up from comparatively easy words such as piassaza, dittice and furtill for piazza, lettuce and fertile.

Before the lineup for the spelling match, six fellows were called upon for impromptu speeches which were also the cause of much laughter.

The meeting came to a close about ten-fifteen and everyone went home happy.

Thus ended the fourth meeting of the Inthon Bible Class.

COURT CHEMONG HOLDING CONCERT

Arrangements Made for Fine Entertainment on Thursday Evening, Nov. 26th

A concert under the auspices of Court Chemong, No. 530, Independent Order of Foresters, will be held in the Sons of England hall, Hunter St. on Thursday evening, November 26th, at 8.30 pm. The committee in charge of the arrangements have pleasure in announcing that the famous singer, elocutionist and reciter, Mr J. O. Morwan, MA., Supreme IOF. Organiser of Toronto, has consented to be present and take part in the programme. A variety of songs and recitations will be contributed by first class local talent and the inspiring notes of the bagpipes will also be heard in the "Glens of the Forest."

A limited number of complimentary tickets have been sent to the members for them to present to their friends. Any friends, however, who may probably have been overlooked, are nevertheless cordially invited to attend and the committee will be pleased to furnish them with these free tickets at the ante-room of the hall on the night of the concert.

Court Chemong has always made special occasions so very interesting that we have the foregone assurance of an enjoyable evening for all who avail themselves of the Foresters' kindness.

GANTHONY ENTERTAINMENT.

Mr. Robert Ganthony, as a humorous entertainer, has a world-wide reputation, and last night appeared before a Canadian audience for the first time. As a lightning sketcher and quick change artist he excels, and his personations of the various villagers taking part in the Weathercock Concert, organized by Major Muddle, were very clever; the whole of the entertainment delighting everyone present and fully sustaining this talented artist's reputation.—Daily Witness.

ROBT. GANTHONY VERY CLEVER.

Delightful program given by English Humorist.

Robert Ganthony may well be called the prince of entertainers. Before a well filled house last night he demonstrated that as a humorist of the most delightfully refined character he has no superior if any equal.—Guelph Daily Mercury.

HOAGLAND GAINED TWO LAPS ON WEIRER BUT LOST RACE

The Trenton State Gazette is to hand telling of the race between Hoagland and Ed. Weier, at Trenton on November 13th. The paper says:

That Edward Weier, Trentons foremost exponent of the heel and toe walking game has not lost any of the speed that has placed him in the front ranks of American walkers, was conclusively demonstrated last evening in the Alcazar rink when he defeated Willard A. Hoagland, the champion of the world, in a ten-mile race before a small but appreciative audience.

Hoagland conceded the local walker six laps in the ten mile grind, but at the end of the tenth mile the champion had succeeded in gaining but two laps on the Trenton ped., which gave the honors of victory to Weier although Hoagland made the best actual time.

Both men had an abundance of reserve speed and tore around the circular ring with alarming rapidity, but the Auburn walker was the best of the two in the strenuous sprints and managed to gain a lap for each five miles of the distance.

Hoagland went out at the crack of the gun to gain the advantage of a lap on his adversary, but Weier, who was walking in magnificent form stuck close to the champion and hung on with bull dog tenacity until five miles had been reeled off, when he fell by the wayside and Hoagland gained his coveted lap.

Weier again followed the pace of Hoagland until the eighth mile was passed when the visiting celebrity managed to again shake his persistent opponent long enough to put another lap to his credit.

Weier then showed his class by remaining close to Hoagland's heels during the final mile and on the signal for the last lap both men cut loose a burst of speed that was a revelation to the spectators, considering the fact that they had negotiated ten miles. Both walkers were given a splendid ovation at the conclusion of their meritorious performance.

Two weeks ago Weier and Hoagland met in a similar race in Auburn, New York, and on this occasion Weier was also the victor, but Hoagland cut down the handicap to two laps before the winner was decided.

TURF CLUB GETTING READY FOR ITS WINTER RACES

A meeting of the Peterborough Turf Club was held on Thursday night, when preparations were made in connection with the Club's matinee on December 24th, and for the winter race meet of the club. Application for the bookmaking privileges was received from Cooling, of Columbus, O., and as he has always given every satisfaction, it is probable that they will be accorded him.

The Turf Club has been negotiating with the manger of Tom Longboat to get the Indian to run here against some other runner, or a horse. If he runs against a horse, Longboat wants the distance to be 15 miles. Either this or a five mile run would prove a race of great interest.

It is not probable, however, that Longboat will be brought here this year on account of the lateness of the season, but he may appear in Peterborough under the auspices of the Turf Club next spring.

RUNNING

LONGBOAT TO MEET MARSH.

The long anticipated meeting between Longboat and Shrubb is now almost a certainty for the near future.

The Englishman and Buffalo promoters have been communicating with Tom Flanagan about it, and they will come together Monday to arrange details Monday night at Niagara Falls, where the Indian is to run

"We're ready for them," said Flanagan this morning.

"We are going over there with a genuine Irish black thorn, and something will take place, sure. They must come to our terms, however."

"What are they?"

"We will insist," he replied, "on the first race being for twenty miles or over. If a series is run, the others can be determined after the first meeting."

Flanagan has come to terms with John D. Marsh, of Winnipeg. Longboat will meet him at Winnipeg or Toronto at twenty or twenty-five miles, the winner to take the gate receipts. This will come off whenever Marsh is ready.

Tom is back in the city now ready to go to Buffalo Monday morning.

"He has gained five or six pounds," said Flanagan, "but he is in fine shape all round and his conduct is good."

If Queen's wins from Varsity, what a fine task Tigers will have beating them in the Queen City.

After his poor showing in the recent games Montreal should be glad that they did not get Pete Flett.

BURRIDGE AND FITZPATRICK

In Fine Shape for Their Bout on Tuesday Night

Yesterday marked the last heavy training of Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick, who have been getting into shape for some time past for their wrestling match at the roller rink on Tuesday night.

Both are in splendid condition and equally confident of winning the match and the substantial side bet.

The main preliminary will be one of a much more interesting character than those that usually hold the boards. Young Hackenschmidt will attempt to throw five men in ten minutes and a mighty lively time of it is sure to result. Hack's proposition looks to be a big one and it will be interesting to see him move at his fastest. He went at Rogers like a young whirlwind when he wrestled the Yankee there and will probably have to let out a link or two more when he attempts to upset the handicap men.

Lillie vs. Guerin in a six round bout will be the other preliminary.

THE RING

The sporting editor of the Times demanded a correction, not an apology, from the Spectator. He got an apology, but not a correction. He is still after the correction—and he generally gets what he goes after. Tommy Daly will be at the boxing tournament on Friday night. The Spectator's sporting editor will likely have a military escort if he attends.—Hamilton Times.

WRESTLING

The names of three good sized men who will be available for the handicap match in which Young Hackenschmidt offers to throw five men in ten minutes have been handed in. Any others who desire to compete against the visiting heavyweight in the bout may leave their names with the sporting editor of the Review. Those leaving their names first will be the first considered. Personal applications or any sent by mail will be received.

Toronto, Nov. 21—A good crowd turned out to see the wrestling bouts at the Riverdale roller rink last night. The main show was a contest between Eugene Tremblay of Montreal and Artie Edmunds, Toronto. Tremblay was to throw Edmunds twice in an hour for a purse. Tremblay secured the first fall in 33½ minutes on a combination arm and scissors hold but was unable to throw Edmunds the second time. The wrestling was of good order and clean throughout.

WITH THE HOCKEYISTS

BRANTFORD HASN'T MANY.

Brantford, Nov. 20.—At present it looks as if McDonald, Ward and possibly Marks and Miller, of last year's professionals, are about the only ones available in Brantford this winter. The Brantford pro. team will have a big hole in it, with Roy Brown not playing point. The manager was a tower of strength last year, and even though not in condition half the time he infused lots of ginger and fighting spirit into the bunch.

THE SEVEN SMITH'S.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Henry Smith, father of the famous Ottawa hockey family of that name, makes the announcement this morning that he will take his seven sons on a hockey tour shortly, playing exhibition games with the strongest teams in Canada and the United States.

The trip will start from Pittsburg after the close of the season there, Feb. 15th. Games will be played in Cleveland, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Canadian and American Soo, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and wind up with a clash against the Ottawa team.

Jack, the oldest member of family, who played with Ottawa the first year the Stanley Cup came here, is at present in Fernie, B.C.

Dan, better known as "Moxey," is at St. Alphonse, Saguenay River. Alf., Harry and Tom, all of whom have played with the Ottawas, are at present in Pittsburg, while Billy and George, the youngest, are in Ottawa.

ROSS FOR EDMONTON.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Hugh Ross, who played three years ago with Smith's Falls and last season with Portage La Prairie, has been transferred to Edmonton.

If Cornwall gets into the E.C.H.L. Newsy Lalonde and Donald Smith will stay at the Factory town instead of going to Toronto.

Shamrocks have signed no players for their hockey team as yet. Wanderers claim to have landed McNamara of last year's Wanderers.

ROGERS LOST TO THE TURK

Special to the Review.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—Yussiff Mahmout, the Bulgarian Turk, made his first appearance at Sohmer Park, last night. He clearly outclassed his opponent, Yankee Rogers, whom he defeated in two straight falls in nine and eleven minutes. The Turk proved to be a pretty good all round wrestler, but it's doubtful what chance he would have against men like Gotch and Jenkins.

Mahmout secured the first fall after 9 minutes. Yussiff was under Rogers for a moment, secured a crotch hold when he turned Rogers over his back and secured a body scissors and gradually forced him to the mat. The next period was taken up by much sparring, the Turk being the agressor. Finally Yussiff secured a waist hold and heel lock and forced Rogers' shoulders to the mat. Peirrie, Yussiff's manager, has challenged any man in the world, Gotch preferred.

Japs Play Baseball

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 21.—After spending ten weeks in Japan, 12 youths composing the baseball squad of the University of Washington have arrived home on the Nippon-Yusen-Kaisha Japanese line steamship, Tosa Maru.

"The Japanese boys played better ball than we thought they would and our work was hardly up to the standard," said Manager Howard Gillette. "The Japanese players proved the shiftiest men on their feet I ever saw on a baseball diamond, and their fielding was probably superior to that of the average American amateurs. Our pitchers were considerably distressed by bad arms throughout our stay in Japan but in spite of this there was not a game in which we did not get more hits than our opponents. Our reception by the Japanese from the hour we left Seattle could not have been more cordial. Every detail and arrangement was carried out harmoniously and the cordiality provoked makes us all feel that Japan's ball players and their loyal fans constitute sportsmen to emulate."

In ten games a total attendance of 70,000 was reported. In the drizzling rain 6000 people paid to see the opening game at Tokyo.

The spirit of fairness that marked the treatment of the Washington team was the subject of favorable remark by each of the returning players.

FOR THE KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Mix This at Home if You Have Kidney or Bladder Trouble or Rheumatism

Recent hospital reports show that the dread disease, rheumatism, is steadily increasing throughout the country. All known means of relief are being suggested to save the great amount of suffering this winter, especially among those who are not in a position to pack up and visit the noted health resorts to be treated. Recent tests prove rheumatism not exactly a disease in itself, but a severe symptom of kidney trouble, a condition caused by clogged up pores of the eliminative tissues of the kidneys which fail to filter the poisonous waste matter and uric acid from the blood, permitting these substances to remain in the veins and decompose, usually settling about the joints and muscles, causing the intense pain, swelling and stiffness of rheumatism.

The following simple home treatment will cure Rheumatism and is harmless and inexpensive, and so simple that anybody can mix it at home.

The ingredients are: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Go to any good prescription pharmacy and get these three harmless ingredients and mix them by shaking in a bottle, taking as a dose a teaspoonful after each meal and again at bedtime.

There is nothing better in the world for backache, kidney and bladder trouble too. Such symptoms as frequent and painful urination, soreness, weakness, general and nervous debility are caused by certain acids and poisonous waste matter, decayed tissues, etc. in the blood, which the kidneys will clear and purify after a few doses of this prescription.

Young Folks

AMUSING WAR GAME.

Slate and Pencil the Harmless Weapons of Mimic Battle.

Draw on your slate or paper a plan like that in the cut below. The dots represent soldiers, one side being French and the other side German. Each player is provided with a sharply pointed pencil, and the game is played thus:

The German, keeping the point of his pencil on a spot denoted by a cannon, draws it quickly across the slate in the direction of the other army. The pencil naturally leaves a line to mark his track, and if this mark passes through any of the men belonging to the other side they are considered dead. The game is over as soon as all the men on one side are dead. Each player has a certain space on the slate allotted to him, and he may dispose his men in whatever part of it he pleases.

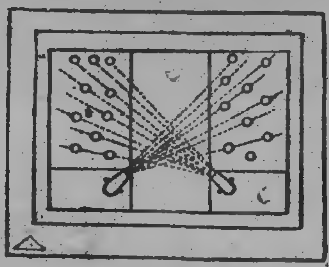

DIAGRAM OF GAME.

The track of the pencil must be straight or curved. Any shot in which there is an angle does not count. We here give a battlefield where the strife is ended. In this the German side has killed all the opposite side in eight shots, while the French in eight have been able to kill only nine men.

ANIMAL DETECTIVES.

Bird and Insect Policemen Punish Rogues of Their Kind.

Birds and insects are wonderfully clever detectives. Upon one occasion a gentleman living in India observed a large flock of crows leaving a tree near his house. Shortly after they were gone violent disease broke out in that vicinity.

An English beekeeper placed a quantity of what he believed to be the best quality of sugar in his hives. But the bees promptly turned it out, and the man found later that the sugar was a cheap imitation.

Swallows and other birds that migrate always choose as their dwelling places localities which are healthful. People, knowing this, watch these birds and build their own houses accordingly.

Then there are bird and insect policemen which kill the rogues among their kindred. Ladybirds, for instance, keep the queen flies off roses, and the reddish brown ant patrols the cotton fields and keeps them clear of the destructive cotton boll weevil.

The Admirable Crichton.

The bearer of this honorable name was James Crichton, who was born in Scotland in 1560. He was the wonder of his age in scholarship and in all the accomplishments that could distinguish a gentleman. At the age of seventeen in Paris he challenged all the most famous scholars of the time to a public discussion, in which he held himself ready to answer any question in theology, jurisprudence, medicine, logic, mathematics or in any other science in any one of twelve languages and in either prose or verse. In this boast he succeeded, and it was then that the title of admirable was given to him. The Duke of Mantua in 1582 employed him as tutor for his son, a dissipated young man. One year later Crichton was one night during the carnival assailed by three masked men. He succeeded in disarming and unmasking the leader, in whom he discovered his pupil, the duke's son. He at once knelt down and offered the prince his own sword, and the young reprobate ran it through Crichton's heart.—Chicago News.

Conundrums.

Where can one always find happiness? In the dictionary.

A man and a goose fell from a balloon and landed on a church tower. How did the man get down? He picked the goose.

Why does a sculptor die a most horrible death? Because he makes faces and busts.

Why is life the greatest conundrum? Because we must all give it up.

The Weather Vane Says—

Ah, who else sees so much as the wind and I?
We see the sun get up and the clouds sail high.
We see the stars a-lighted in the evening sky,
And when all the birds are sleeping then the moon comes by.
I turn to east and see the sun just getting out of bed,
Or west and see him drowsily a-getting in instead,
Or north, and winter's storms and snows they blow all white and chill,
But to the south and springtime is coming o'er the hill.
On Sunday all the people come slowly sauntering
To the church beneath my steeple and enter in and sing.
But I need not wait to hear them a week nor half so long,
For every day I hear the wind that sings a sweeter song.
Sometimes the children fly their kites. They come quite close to me.
All red and blue and white and pink; they're very fine to see.
But sometimes if they float too near back they are pulled again,
And all the little children shout: "Look out! The weather vane!"

Rev. James Masson, a retired Methodist preacher is dead at Belwood, aged eighty-two.

Cold Settles in Kidneys Pe-ru-na Restores Health

Catarrh of the Kidneys An Insidious Disease.

Many People Have it In Slight Form and Do Not Know It.

Mr. Isaac Rosenzveig, 9 Dumarais street, Montreal, Can., writes:

"About three years ago, I suffered with a bad cold. It settled in the bladder and kidneys, causing serious trouble.

"I tried several advertised remedies, but it was Peruna which finally cured me, and I had taken only a few bottles.

"I feel that it saved me, and it certainly restored me to such perfect health as I had not known in years.

"I have good reason to give your remedy my highest endorsement. It cleaned out the system, leaving me well and strong and feeling better than I have in years."

MR. ISAAC ROSENZVEIG.

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease.

It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs.

The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked.

They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work.

INTERNAL CATARRH REACHES THE KIDNEYS.

Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognise the difficulty as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed.

However, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate.

Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body.

In the kidneys it is liable to terminate in Bright's Disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal.

The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal, systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty.

Such a remedy has been found in Peruna. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys.

PE-RU-NA AN INTERNAL CATARRH REMEDY.

That Peruna is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits.

The testimonials given here are only specimens of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peruna in severe cases of kidney trouble.

Kidney Disease of Long Standing.

Mr. Samuel A. Paxton, 1118 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo., member I.O.O.F., and National Annuity Association, writes: "I am a well man today, thanks to Peruna. I was troubled with catarrh and kidney disease of long standing when I first began using Peruna."

CRUSHED GRANITE FOR THE STREETS OF PETERBOROUGH

Mr. R. Sheehy Makes Proposition to Board of Works—Matter Will be Taken into Consideration.

Mr Richard Sheehy was present at last night's meeting of the Board of Works and addressed the members regarding a proposition to supply the city with crushed granite for use on the city streets. As is generally known Mr Sheehy has a quarry at Stony Lake.

The members of the Board present, were: Ald Phelan, chairman, Mayor Rush Aldermen Elliott, Buller, McIntyre and Bradburn.

Mr Sheehy said he understood that the city was spending considerable money in making good roadbed. He said that he would like to make a suggestion to supply the city with its crushed stone. He now has a boat and scow and is in good shape to bring the stone down. He would furnish granite crushed ready for the roads. There is lots of granite in and around Stony Lake. He thought he could supply it for $1.50 per cubic yard laid down on the dock or in wagons so long as the scow is there.

City Engineer Hay said that a year ago he estimated that the stone cost the city on the streets and rolled about $1.41 per yard. This included some 200 cords of stone the city took out of its own gravel pit. He stated however, that if the city could get all granite stone at that price it would be much more satisfactory and far more superior for road purposes. The city ran out of stone the past year, but as it was over 3500 cords were used, and had they not run short they would have used much more.

Mr Sheehy said that he would be willing to take a chance upon investing his money in a plant. He would expect a contract from the city for at least five years. A stone crushing plant is expensive and at the price of $1.50 per cubic yard there is not very much margin.

City Engineer Hay notified the committee that when Mr Fitzgerald was repairing the Hunter St. bridge he found that it was so bad that the whole floor would have to be replanked. It will require 850 feet of elm plank and as the work was very necessary the chairman ordered the work to be done.

HAVELOCK NOW HAS ONE OF BEST SCHOOLS IN DISTRICT

New Addition Has Been Completed and the Frontage of the School is Now Seventy-five Feet.

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 20—Havelock's new $4000 school addition is nearing completion and Havelock is proud of the fact that it has the prettiest and best equipped school in this part of the country.

Last year the school was very crowded and when they started to teach High School work it was even more so and as a result the old Baptist church had to be brought into service in order to leave room for all the pupils. During the building of the new addition the council chamber was also used as a school room.

But when the citizens of this town see that they need anything they go to work and get it, and so in this case in August a by-law to build a new addition to the school was carried by a large majority.

Havelock had a very good school before the new part was added, so a person can imagine what it is like now. Before it contained five rooms and was heated by two furnaces, now it contains eight large rooms and three furnaces are needed to heat it. Only seven rooms are necessary at the present to accommodate the children so one room will be unused.

The new addition which is 35 by 35 feet, is built of solid cement blocks and the old part has also been covered with cement blocks, so that the new school, standing on a small hill directly opposite the town hall and with a frontage of 75 feet is indeed a fine building.

There will be lots of room now and the town will have a school large enough to last for a good long time. It is expected that the new rooms will be ready about the first of December but it is not likely they will be used until after Christmas.

CURLERS ENTHUSIASTIC ANNUAL MEETING HELD

Officers Re-elected—An Active Canvas For Members Will be Made—Prospects are Bright.

With the splendid new rink one of the finest that can be seen anywhere, and with an enthusiasm which is earnand with an enthusiasm which is earnest and well directed and with every prospect for a very large membership, curling should boom in Peterborough this year as it never has done before in the history of the game in Peterborough.

The Peterborough Curling Club held its annual meeting last night in the Dominion Bank Chambers and about fifty curling enthusiasts were in attendance. They entered into the various discussions very earnestly, and the spirit they showed indicates a most successful year, provided the club has the co-operation of new members. And as the roarin' game in the past couple of years has taken a strong hold on the young men of the city there is good reason to believe that the younger element will be well represented.

At last night's meeting Mr. C. N. Brown the president, occupied the chair. Mr R M Waddell, the secretary, was unable to be present and Mr. J H Ferguson was appointed to act in his place. He read over the minutes of the last annual meeting held at the club rooms on November 28th 1907, and those of a special meeting in the council chamber on January 12th.

The minutes were adopted as read. The financial statement was then read and adopted. It showed a balance in the bank of $30.36. The amount taken in in membership fees was $334.00.

MEMBERSHIP FEE

It was moved that all the old officers of last year be reappointed. This motion met with the pleasure of the meeting and was unanimously carried.

Mr. Neill thought that if the membership was to be encouraged the membership fee should be kept at a low figure and this would encourage the membership. He suggested charging the skips $8 and the ordinary curlers $6.50.

Mr. Ferguson said he thought the price should be uniform and that skips and curlers should be charged alike. He thought the general price of $7 should be maintained.

Mr Neill said it was largely along the lines that he had advocated that the successful Lindsay curling club was carried on.

A discussion was carried on for some time as to the advisability of charging the same membership be as last year or a higher or lower one.

Mr Hicks read a statement, not figuring on a dividend paid to the shareholders, on the expense in connection with the new curling rink. The approximate was $990. Over $1000 should at least be obtained from the membership monies with the ordinary membership ticket $6.50. In this statement depreciation was not allowed for.

Mr Neill said the idea was to make the figure reasonable and get desirable members interested and then limit the membership.

Mr. Harry Webb made a motion that the fee be $8 for the old members and $7 for incoming ones.

Mr. Hicks seconded that motion.

This was made in amendment to a motion by Mr. Ferguson that a uniform fee of $8 be charged. Mr Cameron seconding this motion.

Mr Webb withdrew his amendment in favor of Mr Ferguson's as he did not know the latter had made a motion to the effect he did

The meeting decided to adopt a fee of $8

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE

It was moved and seconded that Mr R Hicks, Mr J H Ferguson and Mr Dickson Davidson be appointed a committee to appoint a janitor and arrange for his salary. This committee was instructed to report at the next meeting of the club.

Mr Neill said that an order for 32 parts of Andew K. stones had been placed with the Kingan Hardware Co The names of those desiring to secure the stones were recorded.

The following membership committee was appointed;

Messrs Laing, Talbot, Webb, Hall, Foote, Waddell, Neill, Hicks, Davidson Brightman, J H Ferguson, Sturgeon, Yeates.

Mr. Cameron said that "Sailor Boy" would give prizes to each of the four members of the rink winning the schedule games.

A large membership roll was signed at the conclusion of the meeting.

During the evening the election of officers for the year took place, and resulted in all those of last year being re-elected by acclamation.

The officers are:

Hon Pres, T F Matthews.

Pres, T M Brown.

Vice-Pres, R M Waddell.

Sec.-Treas, H Foote.

Representative members, W. G. Ferguson, T F Matthews.

Chaplain, Rev E A Pearson.

Executive Committee, R Neill, W G Ferguson, J H Connal, J E A Fitzgerald, and C Rutherford.

HAVELOCK RECTOR TO BE MISSIONARY TO THE JEWS

It is learned that there is a movement on foot in the Anglican Diocese of Toronto to appoint a city missionary to the Jews. The clergyman whose name is being mentioned in this connection is Rev. H. Caplan, at present rector of the Anglican Church at Havelock. Mr. Caplan has been at his present location for about four years. He is a Hebrew by birth, but embraced the Christian faith some years since. Accordingly, he is well fitted to instruct the people of his own race in Toronto's ghetto. The Presbyterian Church appointed Mr. Rohold this fall, but there is ample room for all denominations among the Jews of Toronto, who are said to number 30,000 It is stated that the official appointment has not yet been made by His Grace the Archbishop, but that it is expected to take place in the near future—Mail and Empire.

The Peterborough Operatic Society will rehearse to-night in the school room at eight o'clock. Mr. Ernie Dalton, of Toronto, will be present to take the part of Koko.

ONE "O" TOO MANY

In yesterday's Review there appeared a typographical error to the effect that if the 4,000 tags offered for sale by the Ladies' Aid of St. James' church were disposed of at 5 cents each, $2000 would be realized. The one "o" magnified the amount ten-fold. It was not a mistake in arithmetic but simply a typographical error.

LEMON EXTRACT IS LIQUOR LIKEWISE WORCESTER SAUCE

Is lemon extract an intoxicating liquor under the law? Such is the point the courts are called upon to decide in the appeal of U. F. Bender of Victoria, B.C. Mr. Bender was recently in Alberni on a fishing trip, where he caught an unusual number of fish. An Indian known as Cultus John helped Mr. Bender with the fish, and carried some of them up to the hotel. He then asked Bender to get him a bottle of lemon extract, which he said his daughter liked to use in making cakes. This Mr. Bender did, making a present of the bottle to the Siwash by way of recognition of his services.

An Indian policeman was in the vicinity, and saw the lemon extract incident. Next morning Mr. Bender received a summons citing him to appear before the local magistrate to answer to the charge of selling an Indian intoxicating liquor. He admitted freely having given the man a bottle of lemon extract, but said that he had no idea it was intoxicating, and that he gave it to him just as he would have given a bottle of Worcestershire sauce.

"Worcestershire sauce is also intoxicating. Fifty dollars and costs," was the reply of the rural dignitary.

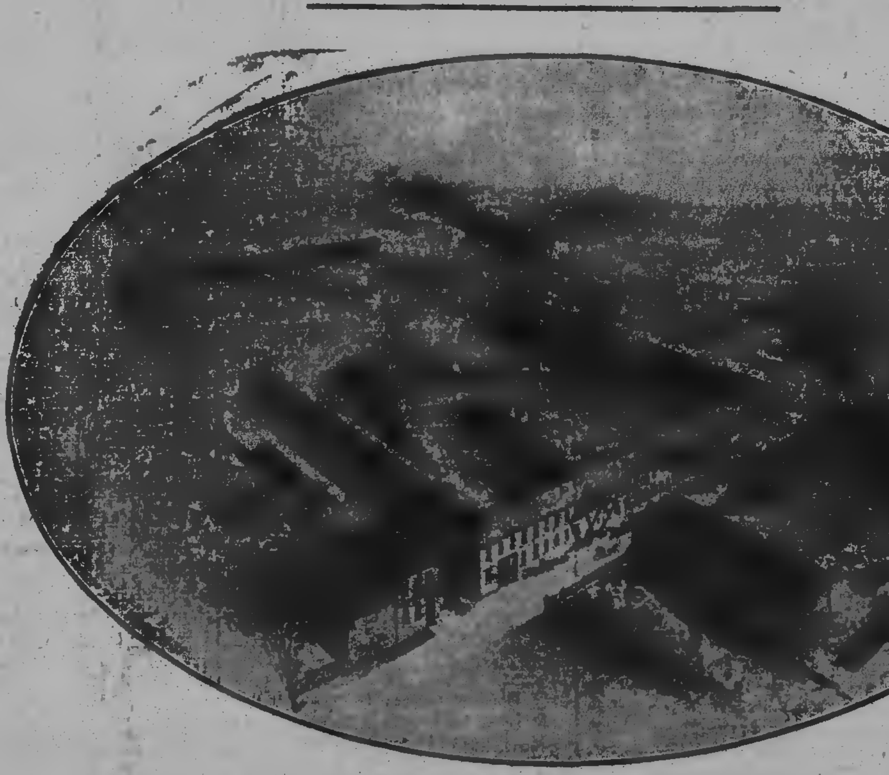
WILLIAM HAMILTON COMPANY, Limited

Your Money Secured on Principal and Interest



THE WM. HAMILTON WORKS, PETERBOROUGH.

The company owns in the centre of the city of Peterborough six and one half acres of valuable property on which are buildings containing 75,000 square feet of floor area, besides sheds and storehouses covering 12,000 square feet more.

From the auditor's report, made on September 29th, 1908 the present value of this plant is fixed at $238,045.00 which includes besides the land and buildings also the machinery and patterns, For a detailed statement see prospectus.

The company has on hand raw material and stock in trade worth upwards of $25,000.00 which is not included in the value of the plant given above.

The working cash capital required is $30,000. $130,000. of Preference Stock pays for the entire plant, the stock-in-trade and provides the working cash capital of $30,000.00.

THEREFORE back of the Preference Stock stands assets which secures your investment (the principal) more than twice over.

ASSETS		LIABILITIES
Plant	$238,045.00	Preference Stock	$130,000.00
Stock-in-Trade	25,000.00
Cash	30,000.00	Surplus	$163,000.00
	$293,045.00		$293.045.00

EARNING POWER

The company can easily earn the money to pay the dividend (or interest) of 8%. The average sales per year, for the six years prior to 1907, was $258,675.00. A profit over all charges of 15% of the amount of sales is a very conservative estimate. This would give a net profit of upwards of $38,000.00 a year on the average sales.

To pay a dividend of 8% on $130,000.00 of Preference Stock requires only $10,400.00, leaving $27,600.00 for a reserve fund and a dividend on the Common Stock.

One share of Common Stock is given as a bonus with every two shares of Preference Stock you buy.

THEREFORE you share in all the surplus earnings of the company.

You are invited to inspect the plant and the books of the company.

HERD OF BUFFALO WILL REMAIN IN NATIVE HAUNTS

Attempt to Corral Pablo Herd at Missoula Ends in Failure—Abandoned for Winter—Another Effort to Ship Bison to Canada Will be Made Next Summer.

Missoula, Mont., Nov. 19.—Despite all the care and precaution exercised in the preparation for the shipment of the remainder of the Pablo bison herd to the national park in Alberta, the herd will remain on the Flathead reservation until the spring. The bison themselves upset all plans and are now roaming at will on their native heath. The corral in which they were to be herded prior to the drive to the railway at Ravalli, had been built with great care and was supposed to be proof against the strength of the biggest bison. When the corral was planned it was located against a bluff that was so steep that it was thought to be an impossible barrier to the bison. The fence was built against this bluff, which formed a side of corral the fence being built to form the other three sides of the enclosure. According to the plan the bison were rounded up and were slowly worked towards the corral.

Everything worked according to schedule and the wing fences swung the animals towards the corral gate and the scheme was pronounced a complete success. The shaggy brutes trotted through the gates into the corral with an indifference that should have aroused the suspicion of the men who were driving them. It was not according to the obstinate nature of the beasts to act that way unless there was something doing. But the herders took no thought of anything but getting the bison through that gate. That much they did and did well. In the performance they had the complete co-operation of the bison, which were more than eager to get into the corral, for they could see across the enclosure an easy avenue to liberty which was not visible to the naked eye of the herder.

CHARGED THE BLUFF.

There was a rumble of the heavy mass getting into motion. Then the dog trot of the bison quickened into a gallop with the response of a troop of cavalry horses to a bugle call and in a cloud of dust the unweildly beasts charged across the enclosure straight at the high bluff, whose vertical face had been supposed to be insurmountable by anything on feet.

Dust obscured the flight of the beasts but it hung over them like a dense mantle and its movement marked the course of the quondam property of the Dominion. Straight toward the foot of the bluff the herd charged and those who were watching the movement expected that they would see a mass of buffalo meat piled up at the foot of the steep cliff.

SCALED STEEP WALL

The herd rushed to the foot of the bluff all right, but it didn't stop there. It scaled that cliff as if the steep wall was the easiest thing in the world. There was not a moment of hesitation not a falter. Right up the abrupt wall the bison charged, each making a trail that was a little easier for the one that was following him. Up the bluff and over the ridge, bellowing in triumph, and twisting their short tails in victory the ungainly gallopers passed and then they spread out, scattered in three different directions until the work of months was undone and they were their own masters, defiant and unconquered.

A short distance up the bluff a photographer from Butte had stationed himself, selecting what he thought was a good vantage point from which to get pictures of the last of the bison while they were yet on American soil. His station was directly in the path of the onrushing beasts and he had not the skill that was necessary to get out of their way. All he knows is that he grabbed something in the dust and next instant he found himself riding up the cliff. He rode at a pace that away but he hung on and as the summit of the bluff was reached the bison upon which the photographer was riding sprung under a tree and the man grabbed a limb and swung off his mount but he was too weak to swing himself up, so he continued his hanging-on performance and remained suspended there among the rushing bison. They banged against his legs and battered his shins but the limb of the tree held and he held to it. The herd was soon out of the way.

There will be no shipment of buffalo this year. Perhaps there will be one next summer. That remains to be seen. The bison will spend the winter in the usual place and the quarters prepared for them in the Canadian park will be empty.

TOUGH ON READERS

A verse appears in the Bowmanville News that was evidently published to show how bad poetry sometimes is.

Should you ever visit Bowmanville,
Come to see our new High School,
For dispensing light and knowledge,
She's the equal of a college.
She's our beloved Alma Mater,
And none dare to underrate her.
Let all about for our new High School.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario are located the curasaline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where tratments for nerous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

During the past two months 32,301 homestead entries have been made in the west.

The Daily Review

SATURDAY, NOV. 21, 1908.

THE TOPIC OF THE HOUR

The topic of the hour is unquestionably "Socialism." The endorsement of it by the Pan-Anglican Conference, recently held in London, England, has brought it to the front with a bound. On this point as on many others the Anglican and the Roman Catholic churches are at variance. As on these questions no Roman Catholic layman has the right or privilege to speak in view of the fact that it concerns morals and apparently faith as well, we quote a very clear and specific utterance of a representative Catholic clergyman. It is taken from the Catholic Record of Toronto and is as follows:—

"Right Rev. Monsignor John H. Fox, vicar-general of the diocese of Trenton, N.J., attacked the doctrines of socialism in his sermon at the Cathedral last Sunday. He said;

"The Catholic Church is not in politics and does not try to influence her members in things purely political. But when a party invades the domain of morals, it is her duty, as a teacher of truth and morality, to expose its dangerous and false teachings. If socialism confined its doctrines to social and political economy and did not interfere with religion and morality, the Church would treat it with indifference. The preachers of socialism tells their audience that the sole object of socialism is to improve the conditions of the laboring classes and do away with the existing social and economical trouble. They work upon the passions of the laboring classes by exaggerating their burdens and hardships and the ease and luxury of the rich. They attribute this disparity of conditions to a defect in our government and use it as an argument in favor of their revolutionary doctrines.

"Political dishonesty, the conflict between labor and capital and the hardships of the poor are not the result of any defect in our government. The real cause of all the social and political evils in our country is an overpowering greed for money. Men have forgotten God and spiritual things and are worshipping at the shrine of mammon. Society cannot be regenerated by the destructive theories of socialism, which would abolish religion, do away with the present form of marriage and substitute free love take individual ownership of lands and the means of production and change our very form of government.

"Society can be purified only by creating in it through the individual a Christian conscience."—Catholic Record.

There can be no doubt, as Monsignor observes, as to the grossness and banality of the western greed for money, but while we do not think that State Socialism is the panacea, we cannot agree that socialism is what Monsignor says it is. Neither the Vienna nor the French school nor even Carl Mark himself, advocates the doing away with religion, marriage, etc. State socialism, as all the leaders in it define it to be, is statecontrol in industrial affairs only. A man's conscience must always be the only and indeed can be the only, arbiter of his thoughts and actions. He may surrender his private judgment but it is his private judgment that tells him to do so and decides in the first place. Nothing but death can destroy that privilege. Hence neither state nor church can control it. Therefore state socialism cannot destroy religion as the learned prelate contends. It is true that men can destroy all visible evidences of religion but then these are not religion or even part and parcel of it.

The time is at hand as all indications point out when man must choose between the supremacy of the State and the supremacy of the individual. Are we mortals living, moving, acting independently or together? With, as we have contended the freedom of the mind guaranteed by the very necessity of the case, are we mortals living as to other things independently or as a united mutually-helpful mass? How should we live? In either case a man must be good to be true. But only in the latter case can he reach the highest acme of his purely physical existence. Pure individuality is Rousseau's Indian who bowed to nothing and no one but the law of natural necessity. Hence to live in a condition of civilisation men must be ruled and guided in the mass by a system of government. It then becomes a question of what that system of government shall be, popular or religious? Church or State? That is the question not of the day, for it has long been that, not even of the hour, but of the very moment itself. All forces have been converging to it for centuries. The world moves quickly. History is now made in a day. The battle is on. It is not the battle for principle but for form. It is wholly the form of government that is at stake. But the form is what binds the body which is important. That is the only form of freedom that ever has been or can ever be at stake. It may mean physical torture or physical comfort. It may mean all that mankind understands by Liberty. Socialism means the final triumph of the popular will. It is government by majority in industrial and similar affairs. It does not, however pretend to harness the mind. Nothing can do that. All forms of government therefore are merely forms. They do not constitute therefore life and death, fate and eternal salvation nor anything but the wisdom or unwisdom of conducting our worldly affairs in this way or that. It would still remain open to every man to love God in his own way. What is all the excitement about? That is the question that naturally arises. But it must always be borne in mind that if the proper theory is that the individual is master of himself then he is so and nothing else is master of him. This is significant and it is an idea that needs elaborating. It is old but it is not made enough of. It is the rock upon which not one but all theories of control must break if any break.

THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC

The turning of the first sod of the great Hydro-Electric scheme of Niagara power at first cost for Ontario took place on Thursday. The papers have been full of it and have done justice to the importance of the occasion. It is one of the crowning achievements of Sir James Whitney's administration. The Government is honest and capable. It gives us a wise, economical and most efficient administration. It is a great contrast to the Ross Government, and even to that at Ottawa.

EDITORIAL NOTES

From a lengthy account in the Witness, Mr. Ames, M.P., seems to have made an attempt at saw-off, with Mr. Bickerdike, M.P. When will people learn the immorality of saw-offs?

The police and the students in Montreal came together in savage conflict the other evening. The students complain. But what have they been doing all these years but laying up trouble for themselves? Do the callow youths at 'Varsity, Toronto, who hail from Brown's Corners, expect that what they say and do shall "go?" It will "go" and must "go," but not in the way they expect.

The London Advertiser asks if any Conservative organ has been caught calling for the abolition of the Ontario Government patronage list. If there is such a list by all means let it be wiped out at once. Any such list is inexcusable. The Advertiser however, should admit that Conservative organs did not limit its criticism to Ottawa. They demand the abolition of the patronage list, not a patronage list. But what is the 'tiser doing about oven the Ottawa list?

The Catholic Record attacks the Christian Guardian for objecting to the spectacular part of the London Eucharistic Congress. The Record avers that the spectacular part is adopted to render it less unworthy of Christ. Surely the mere meretricious vestments of human device and wearing are not Christlike or less unworthy of Him who spoke "as never man spake."

One would think as the Guardian contends that humility in garb as in mind and act is the true badge of that sweet servitude to the Son of God, which the Christian prizes most,

LAST RITES OF THE CHURCH ADMINISTERED

Miraculous Escape From Death of Mme. Lirette, of Sorel, Que.

"I look upon my recovery from approaching death as a miracle and it was "Fruit-a-tives" alone that cured me. I suffered from severe womb disease for seven years, and I suffered from severe constipation, great weakness and constant pain all the time. I was treated by six different physicians without any benefit and took every medicine I heard of, but nothing gave me any relief. My suffering was so intense that for a year I was unable to get out of bed—and I became so ill that my friends did not expect me to recover and the last rites of the Church were administered to me. At this time I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives" and at once I began to improve. These tablets cured the constipation and relieved the dreadful womb pains. I began to improve and "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cured me. Nothing did me any good but "Fruit-a-tives." I took in all 18 boxes and I am quite as well as ever I was, entirely due to the use of this great medicine."

"Fruit-a-tives" is put up in a new 25c trial size as well as the regular 50c boxes, in order to enable everyone to try these wonderful fruit juice tablets. Sent on receipt of price if your dealer does not have them.

A Highland Regiment.

Winnipeg, Nov. 21.—The military spirit is certainly abroad in the west at the present time, and almost every town and village is aspiring to have either a foot or cavalry corps. A highland regiment is being organized in Winnipeg, and will be on parade next season. Another battalion of foot is talked of for the provincial towns, and the latest suggestion is an all-French-Canadian corps to be known as the Chasseurs la Verendrye.

Conceal Opium In Cement.

Manila, Nov. 21.—Evidences of an extensive plot to smuggle opium here from China have been discovered. A fortnight ago workmen employed on the military building at Camp Stotzenberg discovered a quantity of opium concealed in cement, which had been shipped from Hong Kong.

Four Killed.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—Four track laborers on a handcar were run down by a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad passenger train between Highland and La Grange, Ill., yesterday and killed. Five were hurt and three escaped.

Marie LeBlanc Dying.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—Marie LeBlanc, the young woman who fell at the exhibition on Labor Day while doing a tightwire act and has been lingering on at the General Hospital with her back broken, is now said to be dying.

Chinese Smugglers Convicted.

Buffalo, Nov. 21.—Charles Slossberg and Henry Reischle were convicted of being implicated in the smuggling of five Chinamen into this country from Canada last August.

Both Drowned.

Gimli, Man., Nov. 21.—Capt. John Stevenson, while setting nets on the ice, broke through and was drowned. His partner, Henry Vidal, went to his assistance, and was also drowned.

Child Killed In Fall.

London, Nov. 21.—Harriet Durdin, a two-year-old girl, fell from a chair Thursday afternoon and died as a result of concussion of the brain.

"TO THEM THAT HATH"

A Short Sermon to Fat Folks.

"To them that hath shall be given" is a sentence that applies to fat people very neatly. It is common knowledge that once a human being begins to fatten up, to what they have already is added more than they want until finally a stage is reached where reduction must be made or decided disadvantage results.

Then comes forward the ages-old query, "Reduce—but how?" To the uninformed nothing suggests itself but the (to them) twin evils—less eating—more activity. They contemplate a more or less lengthy siege of dieting and exercising. So it may be said safely that every man or woman in the land now undergoing the fattening-up process has his or mental eye fixed dubiously on that not distant day when he or she will have to don the "ashes and sackcloth of reduction."

This is not an enlivening prospect, and so it is with considerable satisfaction that we announce the emancipation of the fat. Nowadays one may reduce much or little, a pound a day if desired, or hold their fat in check, absolutely stationary, without doing a tap of exercise, missing a single meal, doing a particle of harm or causing a solitary wrinkle. All that's required, was hundreds testify, is the taking after meals and at bedtime of one Marmola Prescription Tablet, which tablets are sold by the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., of any good druggist at the uniform price of 75 cents, this sum being accepted for a case of tablets so well and generously filled that even one produces desirable results.

MONTH FOR MURDER.

Indiana Jury Lenient With Slayer and Gives Thief Eight Years.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 21.—Thirty days in jail for a man charged with murder, who had slashed his victim's throat with a razor, stabbed another man and crushed the skull of a third, and eight years in the penitentiary for a man who had stolen a pair of boots because he had none, were sentences imposed by a jury which tried the two defendants in the Lake County, Indiana, superior court sitting at Hammond. The man charged with murder was Joseph Mahovski. The other defendant was Lawrence Ryan. His sentence was adjudged under the indeterminate act.

C.P.R. Tuber Scalded.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—John Marriott, 34 years of age, married, residing at 260 West Wellington street, a tuber for the C.P.R., was probably fatally scalded while repairing defective tubes in passenger engine No. 820 at the company's roundhouse, foot of John street, at 9.30 last night.

He was in the firebox of the locomotive, which carried a considerable head of steam, repairing one tube when another gave out.

Mysterious Death.

Binscarth, Man., Nov. 21.—On the road home on Tuesday, Joseph L. Johnston, a prosperous farmer, sent his team home with a hired man as he wished to visit a neighbor. He was not seen alive again. A search party was organized, and one of the searchers, putting his horse in a disused stable, stumbled on Johnston's body, covered with a blanket and straw. The cause of death is a mystery.

Suit For False Detention.

Windsor, Nov. 21.—Miss Jennie Alexander, formerly a nurse in Port Huron, but now residing in St. Thomas, has filed suit for $25,000 damages against Dr. Albert Thompson of St. Clair, Mich., and ex-Sheriff Moore of the same place, alleging that she was falsely imprisoned in the London Insane Asylum.

Daring Robbery.

Attica, O., Nov. 21.—Robbers held several citizens at bay early yesterday while they blew open and robbed the safe of Renninger & Silcox of $6,000 in cash.

W. L. M. King Goes to Pekin.

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—An interesting interchange of correspondence has taken place between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and W. L. Mackenzie King, M.P.-elect for North Waterloo, in respect to King's appointment as one of the British commissioners on the anti-opium commission, which is to meet at Shanghai on Jan. 1.

The net result of correspondence is that King, who raised some objections to being sent, has given way, and will sail from Vancouver on Dec. 2nd.

The appointment was made by the British Government, and received the approval of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues.

Samuel Carsley Dead.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—The great drygoods man, Samuel Carsley, died last evening after three days' illness, which was brought on by being thrown from his carriage.

Samuel Carsley, who was perhaps the best known departmental store proprietor in this part of Canada, came from England when he was 22 years old, and after passing a few years in Kingston, came to Montreal. He was several times a millionaire.

Twenty Men Entombed.

Butte, Mont., Nov. 21.—Fire in the Northwestern Improvement Co.'s mine at Red Lodge yesterday caused the death of six miners and entombed about 20 others, who have a slim chance to escape.

A local fire department and 50 local volunteers took out of the mine more than 100 men, many of them completely exhausted.

Unknown Man Killed by Train.

Port Arthur, Nov. 21.—The body of an unknown man was found on the C.P.R. track Thursday two and a half miles east of Pearl. Evidently the man was struck by a train, as there was a deep cut on his face. The body was dressed in blue serge and a peak cap lay not far distant. Coroner Jury was notified.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

CHAPTER I.

Elspeth Dean was almost ashamed to go again into the Agency to ask the same question: "Is there anything for me?" and to hear the same answer, "Nothing to-day." She hesitated at the door a moment, but she had come out on purpose to make the call, and it was a confession of failure to steal away discouraged.

Elspeth hated to fail, so she summoned up her courage and marched in.

The same young woman sat at the same desk, with the same rather waspish expression on her face. Elspeth would have envied her a little for her secure position in life, if it had not been for that expression. But Elspeth would not willingly have changed hers (which was attractive, even in a greenish lodging house mirror, with a crack across the middle) for that other, in spite of the material advantages which might go with it.

"Good morning. Is there"—— she had begun as usual, when the young woman with the expression cut her short.

"The manager will see you in her private room," she said, with a nod toward the door, succeeded instantly by a fishlike gaze of discouragement for the applicant who followed on Elspeth's heels.

A small boy in livery, sitting by the door in question, knocked, mentioned the name of Miss Dean, and after a murmur from some one unseen, invited Elspeth to pass through.

"Ah, Miss Dean, it's you, is it? I was expecting you," she remarked. "You generally come in about this time. How would you like to go up to Scotland, and be a kind of secretary in a big Hydro?"

Elspeth's gray eyes opened. She had dreamed of nothing more exciting than a place in a London office, and it had appeared enormously difficult to get even that. But Scotland—dear, beautiful Scotland in August, and a big Hydro! It seemed too good to be true. She was almost sure it would end in nothing, but she did not show her lack of faith in her attainments and her luck; she was far too shrewd a girl in spite of her inexperience, to make such a mistake.

"I should like it, I think," she said with creditable calmness. "Exactly what would I have to do?"

"Well, it's not quite an ordinary secretarial position," replied Miss Smith. "You would have to take down the manager's letters from dictation, of course. Let me see, what's your rate per minute?"

"A hundred and thirty words is my average speed. I can do a hundred and fifty for a spurt."

"Good. But I believe you have only had home practice as yet."

"I used to work from my brother's dictation. He could hardly speak too fast for me."

"One doesn't lose one's head with one's brother. Whereas with strangers, and a great many strangers at whose beck and call you'd have to be, you'd find it different."

"If you think I am too inexperienced for the place"— began Elspeth flushing.

"Frankly, I do think you too inexperienced, but you seem a quick-witted, sensible girl, who ought to get on; and the manager of Lochrain Castle Hydro makes it a point that the person engaged shall be Scotch, well-educated, a lady, not over twenty-five, and—er—prepossessing. You happen at this moment to be the only young Scotchwoman I have on my books as a stenographer. Otherwise I should have preferred some one more experienced and nearer the age limit mentioned."

"I'm twenty-two," said Elspeth.

"And look nineteen, but it can't be helped. Mr. McGowan wants some one at once. If you go, you'll have to start to-morrow. Can you do that?"

"Easily," replied Elspeth, who lived in one room, and whose worldly possessions would all go into a box not too large for use as a cabin trunk. "You say it isn't an ordinary place. What is there to do besides attending to the manager's correspondence?"

"His correspondence would probably be the least part of your work, as there's already a young man who helps with that; but he has other duties, bookkeeping and so on, and can't devote his whole time to correspondence. A local young woman was tried, but failed, and a new person is wanted in a hurry, because there are guests in the hotel who need secretarial work done, and haven't brought their own secretaries. That is why I said you would have to be at the beck and call of a good many strangers; authors, clergymen, politicians, financiers perhaps—oh, all sorts of people."

"I think that would be very interesting," said Elspeth.

"Yes; but distracting and confusing. People of that sort have odd ways, and are often impatient, and hard to please. You would need tact as well as presence of mind. However, it's a great chance. You couldn't have hoped for anything half as good, with your inexperience. Lochrain Castle Hydro is new as a hotel, opened only this season, and one of the finest in Scotland. The salary is two guineas a week, and you're sure to have presents. But mind, you must do us credit. I don't want Mr. McGowan to think I've made a mistake. That would be a bad advertisement for the Agency."

"I will do my best," said Elspeth, to whom a weekly two guineas seemed a fortune. She had lived on fifteen shillings a week for two years, since her father had died, and her brother (now in Australia seeking his fortune) had insisted on giving her the whole of that father's pension as a Major in the Seventieth Scottish Borderers. London, and her training as a shorthand writer and typist, had strained her resources, and for months she had been trying in vain for work, calling every day at several agencies.

In a few minutes everything was arranged, and Miss Smith was able to send a satisfactory telegram to the manager of the Lochrain Castle Hydropathic Hotel. Elspeth went home to her lodgings, packed up her typewriter, which she had bought on the "instalment plan," and all her other belongings. Her railway ticket was paid for by her new employer, and the next morning she was at Euston Station, one small unit in a crowd for the Scotch express.

When Elspeth was a little girl, she had been taken once to Scotland to see the place where she was born, but she had not been there since. Her father's people had never forgiven him for marrying a pretty girl somewhere beneath him in station, and absolutely penniless, therefore Elspeth knew nothing about them. Major Dean had left his son and daughter at school in a suburb of London when they were small, and later he could never afford to take Elspeth out to India. She had done very little traveling in her life, and was much excited this morning. She had not dreamed that there would be so many people going by train, though—she told herself—she might have thought of it, as Town was now "dead," and everybody running up to Scotland for what was left of August and September.

Elspeth had a third class ticket, but the crush was so great that no place could be found for her. Neither was there anything left in the second class compartments, by the time the porter who had registered her box and taken charge of her handbag began to search for a seat.

"You'll have to go first class, Miss," said he.

The girl demurred.

"But they won't let me, and I can't afford"— she had begun, when the porter broke in reassuringly:

"That's all right, Miss; they'll have to let you. There's no room in the thirds or seconds, and they're bound to carry you."

They hurried from door to door, but everything was full, until at last they came to a compartment occupied only by two ladies. To be sure the remaining seats were covered with small luggage, a couple of smart dressing-bags with gold monograms (one of them surmouted with a coronet) and a dust-coat or two. But the porter was not easily beguiled.

"These places all taken, madam?" he asked briskly of the elder lady, a very handsome woman, whose admirers would have pronounced her thirty-three, whose enemies would have placed her past forty.

She glanced up from reading a letter, and stared haughtily at Elspeth and the porter.

"Yes—" she began, when the girl who was with her interrupted:

"Oh, mother, it is only one seat beside ours that is engaged, and we aren't quite sure about that."

The other frowned with vexation, and she did not look half so handsome, or nearly so young, when she frowned.

"You are ridiculous, Hilary!" she snapped, in a low but angry voice. Then, to the porter: "There is no room here. Don't you see, the racks are already full of luggage, and we need the disengaged seat for our bags."

"Very sorry, madam, but this is the only compartment with a place free, and this lady must ride somewhere," replied the man, already beginning to find space for the gorgeous dressing bags in the racks.

"Impudent creature!" exclaimed the lady, flushing deeply under a delicate film of liquid powder, and a veil which heightened its flower-like effect. "I am the Coun—"

"Oh, mother, don't!" implored the girl, her face—which Elspeth thought the prettiest she had ever seen—scarlet with humiliation and distress. "See, he is making room. We can't expect to have the whole compartment to ourselves."

The elder woman bit her lip and was silent, realizing, perhaps, that it was she who was on the point of making herself ridiculous. But she twitched aside her dress with such an air of disgust as Elspeth meekly passed to the seat which had been cleared by the porter that the unfortunate newcomer felt that she was regarded as some inferior sort of animal.

"I am sorry," she said, looking straight at the girl.

"Please don't be. It doesn't matter in the least," answered the beautiful creature, with a smile so charming that Elspeth's heart warmed to her. "I'm sure she's as nice as she's pretty," the typist said to herself, "though how she can be, with such a mother, is a miracle."

The intruder smiled a grateful answer, and then tried to appear oblivious to her traveling companions. She opened her handbag, which she had on her lap, and pretended to be deeply interested in its contents, but she could not help hearing their conversation. It was all but time for the train to start now, and the elder of the two ladies, apparently forgetting the unwelcome third in the compartment, did not attempt to conceal her excitement.

"What a shame! I believe he's not coming," she exclaimed, looking eagerly out of the window. "Another minute, and it will be too late. I do hope Lady Melton's news wasn't a mistake or made up out of the whole cloth, and our time wasted. It would be like her. I always did think Maud Melton a cat."

"Mother, do be careful," whispered her daughter.

"What do I care for a person of that sort?" asked the other, with a quick glance of contempt at pretty, plainly-dressed Elspeth. "It's bad enough having her stuffed in with us, without having to think about her, with every word one speaks. She doesn't matter any more than one's maid matters; indeed, she is probably someone's maid. What is the use of spending a lot of money to travel first-class, if third-class creatures are to be squeezed in, without paying a penny?"

"Here comes Mr. Kenrith," broke in the girl, as if thankful to make a diversion.

Instantly an extraordinary change came over her mother. The handsome, though rather sharp features, were softened with a charming smile, which irradiated them as the rose of a sun-set glow irradiates a bleak landscape in the north. The dark eyes sparkled, the frown that had drawn the straight black brows together was smoothed out. She looked suddenly almost girlish and prettily feminine as she patted her beautifully undulated auburn hair.

Elspeth, though angry, was interested, wondering what sort of man would appear. The name, Kenrith, sounded faintly familiar, as if she had heard it before, but if so she could not remember where.

In another second her curiosity was satisfied. A tall, broad-shouldered man of about forty, with a nice brown face, was at the door.

"Here I am, just in time," said he in a pleasant voice, which proclaimed him from the north country. "May I really travel with you, Lady Lambart and Lady Hilary?"

"We are delighted. You won't let us be dull," replied Lady Lambart.

The new comer glanced at Elspeth, as if expecting to find that she was an acquaintance also, saw she was a stranger, and begging her pardon as he passed took the unoccupied seat.

By this time the young typist knew why the name of Kenrith had sounded familiar. She had never heard it, but she had read about it in the papers. There was a millionaire named John Kenrith, who was very charitable, and whose good works she had seen mentioned. If she remembered aright, he came from Lancashire, and she wondered if this nice, brown, rather ugly man were he. "If he is, I do believe this horrid woman is being sweet to him on account of his money," thought the girl, "for he doesn't seem her sort at all. I do hope he sees through her. He looks clever, but I suppose men never do see through handsome women, especially countesses, and this evidently is one, because now I come to look at it, that's a Countess's coronet on her dressing bag."

SOME VERY INTERESTING SUBJECTS BY NOTED WRITERS

Wanted: A Practical Man; He Wins All the Prizes.

By Dr. Madison C. Peters.

THE world is full of theorists who imagine that if their plans and schemes were put into operation the millennium would dawn before its time. Earth would be transformed into a bowery of happiness and delight where care and worry would be unknown. Men and women would bask in an eternal sunshine with never a cloud to overcast the brightness of their bliss. But the trouble is that the beautiful designs of these visionaries and dreamers never can assume real forms. They are impracticable, impossible.

We do not want men to tell us how to do things, but we want them to do the things themselves and thus show us how to do them. A man may describe a beautiful way for getting to the planet Mars, but as long as he never has tried that way himself and so demonstrated its practicability we have little or no faith in his plans.

* *

Availability Wins the Prize.

A man's success depends largely upon his practical capabilities. Not ability, but availability, wins the prize. Availability is the capacity to use to advantage all of one's powers. A college diploma does not secure success. An educated pig remains a pig, an educated fool remains himself.

Education must be sown on good soil to produce a good crop; if the ground is shallow and devoid of the right constituents there will be but a poor return. A silk purse never can be made from a pig's ear, so a gentleman never can be made from a cad, a wise man from a fool, nor a practical man from an idealist.

Men who can accomplish, who can bring about results, are needed in every condition of life today. Of such men there is a dearth everywhere and the consequence is that owing to the limited competition between them they are able to command large salaries and occupy influential positions among their fellows.

* *

Make the Wheels Revolve.

These are the men who make the wheels of the world revolve, who are the guiding hands at the levers of commerce, business, and trade, who speed the train and steer the ship to the destinations of progress and prosperity. Without them the world would degenerate, go back to the primitive, and the greatest institutions of man would crumble and decay. Such men teach us the true education, the education of both head and hand, the hand to do what the head directs. They need no college diploma to recommend them, their certificate of merit is the actions they perform.

Book education without the ability to turn it to practical account is a drug on the market. Gold is of little service to a man starving in a desert for want of bread and water. Book knowledge may be a hindrance to a man, inasmuch as he may by it become too refined for any practical purpose.

Many men are so polished and refined by higher education that they become like a finely tempered steel instrument ground down to the sharpest point, and which flies in pieces the moment it strikes the hard surface of the world. The heavy, blunt instrument, by the power of its own force, is able to bore its way through.

* *

Head Trained Too Much.

Many of our young men are so exquisitely cultivated as to be good for nothing but to be kept in a showcase as specimens of what the most approved systems of education can do. They emerge annually from our colleges utterly unfit to take even the most obscure place, totally unequipped for the battle of life into which they must enter, and this simply because all their time has been given to the dry "isms," "ologies," and "osophies" of the schools—the head altogether trained at the expense of the hand.

However, a change is coming. Hard headed, practical men have begun to see the folly of sending their sons to colleges merely to learn the wisdom of the dead past. The past is gone and what suited it will not do for the present.

What was new twenty years ago is antiquated today. There are no better scholars than formerly, but systems are different and the necessities of the times have changed.

* *

Know One Thing and Do It.

What the times now demand is a sound, practical education along definite lines. The encyclopedic man of the past, who knew a thousand subjects in a general way, but had not knowledge to put one of them into practical use, is obsolete. We want the man who knows one thing and can do it, and do it well. This is the man of the hour, this is the man who is in demand, this is the man who gets to the front when the man whose head is almost bursting with all kinds of book knowledge is left far behind in the race.

The man who knows how to drive a steam engine has the advantage of the man who can teach Greek and Latin; of course if the engineer knows Greek and Latin, all the better, they will not mar his skill in driving the engine, but if he does not know them he will be just as useful a man in the business in which he is engaged.

The man who to book knowledge adds practical ability has the right kind of an education. He who can mend a hole in a pot when the pot is required to cook a dinner for a hungry traveler is of more benefit to that traveler than the most learned savant on earth who could not mend the pot.

* *

Trade Schools Are Increasing.

That the trend of the times is towards practicability in education is evidenced by the number of trade schools and industrial institutions which are springing up all over the country. Yearly they are turning out well equipped men with a sound, practical knowledge of the mechanical callings and crafts upon which rests to a great extent our prestige as a nation.

It is the workers, the artisans, mechanics, and tradesmen who are at the base of our national welfare; they are the props on which rests the structure of our power. Take them away and it will totter and fall.

Burke wisely said: "There is no force in mere intellectual ability standing in all the nakedness and solitude of metaphysical abstraction." What we need is a curriculum dealing with the practical affairs of life. Schiller designated the final education of the human race to consist in action, which fits man for the proper performance of the duties of life.

* *

We Live in a Fast Age.

We are living in a fast age; we have no time to do anything properly. Where is the American youth who would spend twelve years with Angelo studying anatomy to be perfect in his work as a sculptor? In one-tenth of that time the young American would undertake to chisel an Apollo Belvedere.

We do everything in a hurry. We rush through school, jump into business, do feverish work, break down in middle life, and die when we should only be beginning in reality to live.

We take short cuts and have abridged methods; the work is all done to please the eye, and as a consequence soundness and solidity have been neglected. But we are now trying to remedy this, and in the future this country promises to be without a rival in every field of human endeavor, for she is making it imperative for her institutions to educate in the right direction and so turn out such practical men and women as will build the ramparts of strength around her and make her impregnable to the rest of the world.

Learn Fine Cooking in Paris; Americans Make Good Chefs

By John Trainer.

GO to Paris and become a French chef, then come home and make money.

Though good chefs are not well paid in France, French chefs are greatly in demand and command high wages in foreign countries. Overcrowding is the explanation for the poor pay at home. This is caused in two ways. Frenchmen are born cooks, so when young men go to work in hotels they believe that the cuisine is the easiest and most remunerative work. Then, every year hundreds of chefs from Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden, and America go to Paris to become French chefs. They are willing to serve apprenticeships of two or three years, because they can command three times the wages after they have had this experience.

The applicants for these positions so outnumber the vacancies that many a man has to wait several years until he is given a chance. A man before leaving will often ask that his position be handed over to a brother, or a cousin, who is anxious for the same training.

The head chefs in all the large hotels and restaurants are French men, so foreigners can only expect subordinate places, whatever their experience may be. A man seeking this training must promise to stay two years at least, or the head chef will refuse to consider him. In some kitchens a man receives no wages during his entire apprenticeship. In other places they are paid $2 or $3 after the first year. Their training is excellent; only the fewest fail to make good cooks. If they have never done any cooking they are set to work washing dishes, pots, and pans. Where they have already had considerable experience they are made assistant fish cooks, meat or pastry cooks.

* *

Head Chef Hard Master.

A short interview with men who have had this training shows some interesting facts. One man says:

"The head chefs in some of the first hotels are real masters and most exacting ones. They have all gone through a hard school and expect the men who work under them to enjoy similar experiences. A man who cannot curb his temper, stand rebuke without answering back, and follow orders implicitly will not hold a place in these kitchens long. These men are too busy planning dishes and seeing that they turn out well to nurse wounded feelings."

Nowhere are employers more exacting, for head chefs, in contrast to their subordinates, get good salaries. They look upon their work as a fine art, for in no other country is dining made such an art. Most of these men have been in the business fifteen or twenty years. The great restaurateurs, such as Foyer, Voisin, and Joseph, came up from the ranks of chefs. Fayet is a home restaurateur. He takes the same pride in his establishments that an artist does in his paintings. Though he is rich and could retire, he is happiest when pleasing his guests. Frederic is the master of the school; he is an artist at preparing game. He is master of the duck. It takes three ducks for an order; two birds are used for the sauce that is prepared on a chafing dish. If guests compliment this chef on his cuisine he answers modestly that he has learned well. He was chef at Paillard's for many years.

* *

Some Dishes Cost $100.

Some of these chefs have been known to spend $100 on making a single dish, but they can prepare excellent dishes for almost nothing. They all have their specialties and never imitate one another. They have certain dishes that no one outside of the house could make if they tried.

An American chef who had received his training in Paris says: "The French put their ideas into their cooking, and they cook for the palate."

"Though many of the large hotels in New York and throughout the east have French chefs, there are plenty of establishments preferring American cooks who have studied in Paris. Some of these men earn $3,000 to $4,000 a year, where their salaries were only one-third that sum before they had this training. Once a great chef was introduced to a man whom he had known years before. He was introduced as "M. Rean."

"I thought your name was Ryan," the man remarked, "as I remember it."

"It was Ryan when I earned $25 a month, but since it has become Rean I get $5,000 a year."

Married Men Best Workers; Often Get the Best Jobs.

By Ben Burbanks.

THE rule announced by a Chicago bank a few years ago that marriage would mean discharge for clerks and messengers getting less than $1,000 a year, caused a good deal of criticism for the bank and some sympathy for the employés. Many people jumped to the conclusion that big business houses gave single men the preference when it came to giving out jobs.

An investigation shows that the shoe really pinches the other foot. In a majority of cases where any discrimination is made, the married man gets the better of his bachelor brother.

"I wouldn't go to such an extreme as discharging a man because he is single," said the manager of a good sized Chicago wholesale house, "but when I put on a new man I must confess I give the preference to one that has a wife. For any position above that of office boy or cub clerk, if two applicants are otherwise equal, the bachelor gets turned down. It isn't altogether that the married man needs the money worst, though perhaps that has a little to do with it, but my experience shows that the Benedicts are a shade steadier and more reliable than the bachelors. They hang on to their jobs more religiously and they have fewer distracting outside interests."

* *

Thief Usually Single Man.

"I figure that nine-tenths of the small peculations and embezzlements that come under my notice during the year, are the work of single men," says a business detective connected with one of the bonding concerns. "I'm not saying that the man with a wife is any more honest than the man without, but he certainly is less exposed to that form of temptation that makes an employé short in his accounts. Now and then some fellow will steal for his wife's sake, but he's ten times more likely to do it for some woman not his wife. The wife knows her husband's circumstances, and notwithstanding occasional stories of feminine extravagance, you can mark it down for a fact that a married woman isn't going to ruin her husband's career and her own happiness by encouraging expenditures that the income won't stand.

"It isn't the married men, as a rule, who lead the gay life," continued the detective. "Sometimes, no doubt, Smith feels a little bit mistreated at seeing what an awful lot of fun Jones has, but Smith, who is married, really has no reason to be sorry for himself. It's a good thing for him that he is obliged to give his salary to the missus and the kids and cut out his share of the good times of Jones. I'm married myself and I know."

* *

Bachelors First to Go.

When business gets slack and men are laid off, there are few firms who do not give the sack to the bachelors. An inquiry among the Chicago firms who reduced their force this winter reveals that almost without exception the men with wives and families were retained. There is that much sentiment in business, at least. Several of the superintendents and managers confessed that they laid off the best men and kept the poorest in a number of instances.

"A man who has only himself to look out for can make some sort of a shift for a living," explained one manager, "but a sudden layoff is a mighty serious thing for a man with a family. I didn't have the heart to let any of my married men go. In a few instances I gave the firm the worst of it by this discrimination, but I guess the stockholders are not going to kick. If they do I can't help it."

There may be a little truth in the view that one bachelor takes of the question, though it is not quite complimentary to some of the employers.

"Married men will stand for more than single ones," said he. "That's one reason why some of the bosses like them. A married man is a helpless, treadmill sort of a creature. He's got his neck in the yoke and the boss knows it. He dare not ask for a raise, for he can't afford to quit in case it is refused.

* *

Benedict Can't Look Around.

"If he belongs to the low salaried class of workers the chances are that he keeps a week or two behind his pay envelope, and he is afraid to take his nose off the grindstone long enough to look for a better job. The boss can make him work overtime without extra money, or he can make him work short time and dock him for the hours he lost, whichever the needs of business may demand. The single man can quit, but the married man is tied hands and heels."

There is one firm in Chicago employing an average of ten men where no single man is eligible to a place on the pay roll. The applicant for a job who confesses that he's a bachelor is turned down at once, though, of course, the real reason for his refusal isn't explained to him. The curious thing about this business house is that the managing owner is a confirmed old bachelor and never speaks two words to a woman if he can help it. What sort of a dream of "what might have been" stirs his heart nobody knows, but it is certain that he won't give a job to the man that is not married.

It is said that one of the employés of this bachelor lost his wife a few years ago, and he knew the rule so well that he was afraid to confess his widowerhood to his boss. He hid his bereavement as best he could and there were only three men in the office who knew that his companion had died, and they were pledged to secrecy. Whether the boss would have fired him for his misfortune if he had found it out nobody knows.

Crossways Store Gets Trade; Big Profits in Cigar Stores.

By Walter Goldsmith.

WHAT businesses occupy the corners? A man in almost any line of business, with perhaps the exception of a gambling room or a blind tiger, would prefer a corner location, but because of the additional rent of these favored locations he feels that he cannot afford it. But certain lines of business seem to have a special fondness for the corner location.

Saloons take up many corners because their owners like to catch the thirsty wayfarers from all directions. Because of the great number of saloons in Chicago it would seem the saloons occupy the corners more than any other line of business. The cruel father depicted by the temperance reformers and "the che-ild is in London" style of melodrama always is either going to or coming from the corner saloon. But the percentage of corner saloons to the whole number is not so great as in some other lines.

* *

Pay Most for Luxuries.

Cigar stores, that is stores exclusively devoted to My Lady Nicotine, also have a fondness for the corner locations. This is particularly the case within the loop, and one large company seems to make it a matter of business policy to locate its stores on the corners wherever possible.

Little fruit stores also cluster about the corners, even though the higher rent must wring the souls of the thrifty proprietors. From the nature of these businesses, it would seem that only the businesses dealing in goods that are usually called luxuries can afford to pay the higher rent of the corner store. But such is not the case. Grocers also seek to locate on the corners and seem to be able to thrive even with the increased cost of the rentals.

Besides these lines the drug stores also hustle for the corner lots. It is impossible to find the exact percentage in each of these lines, but from the comparative number of saloons, groceries, and drug stores it would seem that a greater percentage of drug stores occupy corners than any other line.

* *

Tobacco Pays High Rents.

Of course, the desire of all these businesses for a corner location causes the rentals to go up just as in any other case of large demand and small supply, and as the public pays no more for its goods at the corner store, the proprietor does not feel the increased rent owing to the increased business and the land owner receives more rent, it appears to be a good thing for all concerned.

As in most of the saloons, grocery stores, drug stores, and even the fruit stands, cigars are handled as a side line, it would appear that the land owner must thank tobacco for being the patron goddess of the crossways.

How Plugging Parker Rose; A Story of Going & Co.

By Allan Wilson.

MARKHAM and Parker came into the big office at the same time, and everybody who troubled to size them up agreed that they had an even start.

If they had known more of the pair than was to be gained from a mere cursory observation of them after they had got on to the pay roll, everybody would have been certain that never were two men more equally fitted to fight for a position of importance and good salary in the office of Going & Co. than were these two. That they were accounted as being on a par when they entered the office was proof that up to this time both had profited in the same measure by the advantages that their youth had held forth to them.

As similar as such things may well be were the advantages possessed by Markham and Parker in the days which are devoted to the training of the man. Parker came from the family that owned the big house on the northeast corner of the two principal residence streets in the small town where he was born; Markham came from the family that owned and lived in the house on the northwest corner. Markham was born on the seventh of July; Parker saw the light of day on the tenth. At school they began in the same term, graduated on the same day; Parker delivered the class poem, Markham was responsible for the class prophecy.

Then, with their high school days over, they were ready to face the world together, for they both possessed the great advantage of owning parents who were comparatively poor, and Markham got $5 a week to begin with as bookkeeper in the sawmill office, while Parker, not to be outdone, was granted the same remuneration for attending to such clerical work as was needed in the establishment of the one grain buyer of the town.

* * *

Started on Road to Fame.

So they were off on an even start on what high school had taught them to call the perilous sea of business life, and their parents patted themselves on the back and thought of the noble positions achieved by their sons at the outsets of their careers, and knew that nothing remained but a few years till the time when their names—the sons'—should be ones to conjure with at the note window of the bank.

But the sons thought differently from their parents, as sons have a way of doing, and the title of prominent citizens in their old home town appealed to them not at all. They were born to a newer age than their parents and their dreams were broader and reached farther away. So far away did they reach that they made their way even unto a big city, and little by little they increased in might, until one bright day they pulled the two boys off their stools in the offices back home and put them aboard the cars, bound for the city and the broader destiny.

It was hard work for them to tear themselves loose; their parents predicted utter ruin in the city; their girls wept; their respective employers opened the bounty of their hearts and offered to raise their salaries to $7 a week. But even this golden temptation would not stay the ambitious ones. To the city, read their resolves, and to the city, and to the office of Going & Co. did they go, as well matched and even a pair as ever squeezed on to the pay roll of the soulless corporation.

* *

Old Man Notices Pair.

Being equally inexperienced they were put to work in the invoice department, where the raw material is taken in and tested to see if it is worth working into something of importance, and their salaries were $10 a week.

As far as the outward signs go, there can be no doubt that Markham and Parker started in to climb the ladder of preference in the big office on an even basis. If the aim of fate had been to put them to a test in the matter, had sought to put two men on the first rung of the ladder, neither having any advantage over the other, it could not have done better than to have picked up this pair just as circumstances had made them. Old Going, who saw all things and noticed a few, noticed the combination.

"Sort of keep an eye on those two new men in the invoice," he said to his private information man. "I want reports on their progress every once in awhile."

Thus they had attracted the same sort of attention at the beginning; fate persisted in keeping them even at the start.

* *

Parker Gets a Little Ahead.

And now witness the beginning of the change, for at the end of the first four months of their employment in the office the private information man came to old Going and said:

"About those two new men in the invoice department; Parker has done so well that he has been given a $2 raise, while Markham is holding his job and no more."

"Good," said Going. "They're going to make an interesting pair. Keep watching them."

They no longer were experiments but accepted and regular clerks. No longer were the errors which they perpetrated or the work which they failed to do excused upon the grounds of lack of experience. They now were judged as experienced men; the standard which they must measure up to was raised proportionately; and the result was that the difference between Parker and Markham became more and more pronounced.

Parker, it was easy to see now, was the man who would make his mark. He was the plugger of the pair, the ambition driven individual who would let no obstacle stop him, who would permit no delinquency on his own part hinder him in achieving the purpose to which he had set his mind. Doggedly and persistingly he was improving in his work, steadily and systematically he was learning the routine business of the department in which he had been placed.

He was no common clerk; he was not content to wear the seat of his trousers out on a stool without getting more to show for it than $12 a week; he would gather experience and business knowledge and in the end he would profit by it. All this was to be seen in the set, nervous expression of Parker and in the slavish manner in which he applied himself to his work.

* *

Markham Talks, Parker Works.

And now it was to be seen that Markham was the dreamer. He was the impractical, unfixed, irresolute member of the combination. While Parker in a leisure moment was delving into the mysteries of invoice checking Markham was wandering about the office talking with whomsoever happened to be at leisure and willing to talk to him, or standing around watching the people in other departments at their appointed tasks.

It was plainly apparent that he wasn't the kind of a man who can concentrate himself upon his work and apply his energies to it in the way which brings success. For if he was would he not be more interested in the invoice department? Would he not spend his spare time, as Parker did, in learning all about the work that he had to do?

Of course. So Parker, noticing Markham's disposition to ramble and pay attention to other things besides the work of invoicing, would have felt sorry for him if he had had the time or if his interest had not become engrossed in learning how to bill.

Of the three years which lay between their entry into the office and the parting of their ways little need be said here. Parker, of course, by this time had clearly demonstrated that he was to be the big success; Markham, it is to be feared, had shown a capacity which promised nothing better than mediocrity. Parker was head checker in the invoice department; and Markham was only one of the clerks. The old rule had proven itself; the plugger had won, the other fellow was left behind.

* *

Parker Tells Big News.

Parker was considerably embarrassed when the day came for telling Markham the big news. It would bring such a big change in their relations; he would be Markham's boss; and, as Parker reasoned it, their friendship must then cease. He approached his friend diffidently.

"Old man, I've got something of a little boost," he said. "I—they've took and made me assistant to the head of the department."

He paused to let the significance of this statement sink in and to allow Markham to recover from the same. It was a big boost, this; it meant that he would be one of the officers instead of a private, that he would draw $22 a week instead of $16. And Markham would be one of the privates under him.

"When do you go up, Bill?" asked Markham nonchalantly. Parker was shocked. He had expected more surprise on Markham's part than this. Besides, he was beginning to think of himself solely as Mr. Parker, and the other's rude familiarity shocked him.

"I begin as Mr. Feeker's assistant next Monday," he said, stiffly. "I hope there aren't any hard feelings. You know, Markham, you had the same chance to get up there as I did; you could have done what I could—if you'd wanted to."

* *

Markham Also Goes Up.

"So you go up Monday, eh, Bill?" said Markham, paying no attention to the other's last words. "That's funny. It's Monday that I go into the legal department—the same day."

"What?"

"The legal department. You see I didn't see much of a chance for a fellow in this department even if he got to be the head of it. So I kind of looked around and saw what I could see, and I decided that the legal end of a corporation was the one where a man could get in his hooks the deepest. Yep. And so I went to work and studied law nights, and the other day I had a talk with Old Blackstone, the head, and he said to come to work in there Monday."

"How much, how much a week to start with, Markham?" gasped Parker.

"Twenty-five," said Markham, cheerily. "But that's nothing; the start's the thing, the chance to get at something big. Don't you think so, Bill?"

"Yes," said Parker, faintly. He thought of the weary years before him as a chief sort of clerk. "Yes, I think so—now."

Moral: Look around and dream a little before you sit down and begin to plug.

Always Punctual; No Sunday Sleep.

By R. C. Brown.

A GOOD train conductor admires the accuracy of his watch above most of the things in this life. It is a sort of passion with him and he gives his watch as much care as his wife would give the baby.

One old trainman, who has five gold bands on his coat sleeve, which stands for twenty-five years' service on one railroad, goes even more to the extreme than most of his fellows in this respect. He has an old Swiss watch which belonged to his father. It has never run down since it was wound up for the first time, some fifty years ago, and it has never been more than a half minute out of the way.

Last Saturday the conductor brought his train in for the last time that week, as he laid off on Sunday.

A friend of his met him as he was going to the office to report his train.

"Work over?" he queried.

"Yep," snapped the conductor, as shortly as his ticket punch.

"Well, I suppose you take a good rest every Sunday. Sleep all day, don't you?" questioned the friend.

"No, I get up at 6 every Sunday morning, just the same. I'd like to sleep and I hate to set the alarm at 6 every morning in the week. If it was only an hour later on Sunday I think I might enjoy it more."

"Well, why don't you sleep an hour later, seeing your time's your own and you don't have to go to work?"

"Can't," sighed the conductor.

"Why not?"

"Have to get up to wind my watch."

A SURE CURE FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS--TEN DAYS' TREATMENT FREE

ORANGE LILY

Orange Lily is a certain cure for all disorders of women. It is applied locally, and is absorbed into the suffering tissue. WOMAN'S WORLD

A DECORATIVE HINT.

Burlap as a Wall Covering is Durable and Artistic.

Burlap as a wall covering is now recognized as being very artistic as well as durable. It is now made in the finer grades and in all colors, so that it will meet any requirement. It is very effective for use in the dining room if properly handled.

Burlap makes an excellent material for window or door curtains in a room hung with felt or ingrain paper. If curtaining of this kind seems too plain it may easily be brightened by stenciling. Stencil patterns can be drawn by any one who uses the pencil a little. Frequently in magazines are found ornamental head and tail pieces that will furnish the motive scrolls, conventional leaves, circle and dart patterns and fleur-de-lis.

Draw the pattern small at first and then develop it on an enlarged scale upon a sheet of stiff but thin cardboard. When it is penciled clearly cut it out with the scissors. They will give a smoother line than the penknife, though in using scissors the stencil must be cut through at one point. This is remedied, however, by gluing the edges together with a strip of paper on each side.

A stenciled border for window curtains or portieres runs down the center and along the lower edge. The goods must be laid flat on an even surface, stretched across a large pie board by means of small wire nails or over the bare wood of a kitchen table.

The kind of paint used is known to decorators as "distemper coloring." It should be applied in a smooth wash and should be neither pasty nor thin, for if too thin it is apt to run, and if thick it forms into lumps. A flat and rather pliable brush spreads the color evenly.

Be careful to press the stencil down firmly around the edges over the part being painted to prevent the colors from running underneath the cardboard and making an uneven line. To repeat the pattern lift the stencil, wipe clean and lay it over the proper spot. A little care about this matter will assure the proper spacing.

The best way to keep the design in alignment, however, is to stretch the entire curtain evenly on the bare floor of an unused room. Draw a string taut between the two nails at either end of the curtain and use it as a guide line to keep the stencil straight. Where the design is a leaf pattern with a stem the latter may be joined afterward free hand, making the entire border continuous.

Almost any piece of goods in a flat color and of sufficient weight can be made into a table cover either by stenciling or by stitching to it a border of tapestry, silk or cotton cut with mitered corners.

HUSBAND AND WIFE

Both Restored to Health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

"Both myself and my wife can truthfully say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been of great benefit to us, and we are constantly recommending them to our friends." Thus writes Mr. Ernest L. Archibald, Truro, N.S., who further says;—"In my own case I had been subject to dizzy headaches for over a year, and three boxes of the Pills completely cured me of the trouble. About a year ago my wife began to complain. She seemed to be completely run down, was very pale and weak; she could not walk upstairs without stopping on the way to get breath, and ultimately she grew so weak she could not sweep a floor without resting. She tried several tonics but received no benefit. Then I persuaded her to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and got her a half dozen boxes. After she had used a couple of boxes her appetite began to improve and the color to return to her face. She continued using the Pills until she had taken the six boxes, and to-day she is perfectly well, feels stronger and looks better than she has done for some years. While she was taking the Pills she gained twelve pounds in weight."

Dr. Williams' Pills cure troubles like these because they are rooted in the blood. Bad blood is the cause of all common diseases like anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance, general weakness, and those ailments that only women folks know, with their attendant headaches and backaches and irregularities. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a sure cure when given a fair trial, because they enrich the blood and this reach the root of disease. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TURKEY'S NEW WOMAN.

Constantinople May Before Long Hold Woman's Rights Congress.

In the coming of the new era for Turkey the Turkish women have played an important part. They have torn off their veils and marched openly in the streets of Constantinople, shouting the cry of the revolutionists and bearing aloft banners inscribed "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity."

When this sight first presented itself to the public the sensation was tremendous, and it is said that the sultan and his advisers on seeing it understood that the world had moved on for Turkey and that the only act possible was to concede a constitution and get in touch with the new conditions.

Nor did the demonstration started stop at the mere abandoning of veils, the waving of banners and shouting in the streets. The new woman of Turkey has presented to her brother this proposition—that since she has been his companion in the revolt and has borne all the perils of assisting in rebellion and would in the event of failure have been the victim of the sultan she has a right to share fully in the fruits of the victory. Therefore she asks that she be elevated to a plane of complete equality and be allowed to take part in politics and have her vote.

The disposition of the Young Turkish party is to grant this request. It understands that the women of the nation are bound to wield a powerful influence in the events of the next few years and that policy no less than justice would dictate giving them a place of fullest partnership in the great movement to bring the country into the fore rank of progress.

In Turkey it has always hitherto been the case that the woman of the harem never sees any man save husband, father and brother. Her liberty was completely restricted, yet, barring this fact, the treatment was not unkindly. The day began with a cigarette and coffee; then followed a period in which the wife waited on her husband, bringing him slippers, pelisse and chibook. Not by any means was all of the day passed in singing and dancing. Always has a fair portion of the time been devoted to housework and the care of children. The Turkish girl comes into wedlock early, and the youth of the opposite sexes never see each other before wedlock. Photographs are exchanged, and professional matchmakers take care of the negotiations.

The new women of Turkey object to this programme. They say that the method of the occident is better. In Turkey it has mattered little whether or not the man was satisfied with the helpmeet who came to him in this way. If he did not like her he could speedily forget her by getting another wife. But for the woman the marriage was absolute. Never dared she so much as look at another man; hence the argument of the women of the new ideas that the gentler sex should be permitted some option in the choice of a helpmeet.

With this spirit of reform in the air, with thousands of women united to fight for the cause, aided by their husbands, it is more than a possibility of the next decade that one of the annual sessions of the woman's rights congress will even be held in Constantinople.

A DAINTY PRESENT.

Of French Origin Is This Pretty Hatpin Cushion.

The hatpin cushion here pictured is of French origin, the foundation being an oblong cardboard box. The cover of the box is silk, neatly fluted on and finished with a frill of silk and lace. White horsehair is used for filling, and the cover is of white netting, although crocheted white wool is equally serviceable. A ruche of ribbon hides the joining of the top of the box and the frills. Such a cushion makes a dainty gift to a girl who is careful with her hatpins.

MISS ISABEL BOYLE.

Woman Steward of the Hoffman House, New York City.

The only woman in New York who is steward of a big hotel is Isabel Boyle of the Hoffman House, and so capable has she proved herself during her five years of stewardship that she has become the right hand of the proprietor.

Mr. Caddagan, the manager of the Hoffman House, claims that having a woman steward is his own idea, and the discovery of this particular woman is his also.

Mr. Caddagan's sisters were sent to a convent in Virginia to complete their education, and there as a fellow student they met Isabel Boyle, with whom they became warm friends. When they left the convent in Virginia the Misses Caddagan invited Miss Boyle to visit them in their northern home. This in due time she did, but her family had got into financial difficulties, and the girl was anxious to carve out her own way in the world, so she asked her friends to help her find a position. Mr. Caddagan, who happened to need an assistant steward, asked her if she would like to take the position. She accepted, and this was the beginning of her career.

MISS ISABEL BOYLE.

Miss Boyle is of medium height, with wavy dark hair and soft brown eyes. She has a cheery disposition and a fund of real Irish wit that carries her over many a rough place.

It matters not whether found at work or at play, buying little necks by the thousand or weighing Virginia hams by the barrel, her personality is bright and refreshing. She is a woman who loves her work, so of course she has made a success of it.

Woman Invented Linen Collars.

It is now authenticated beyond a doubt that Mrs. Hannah Lord Montague was the inventor of the detachable linen collar. Hannah Lord was born in Canaan, Columbia county, N. Y., Dec. 14, 1794, a daughter of William A. Lord, a Revolutionary officer, member of the state legislature and the author of "Lord's Tactics," used by the early state militia.

She was married on Aug. 14, 1817, to Orlando Montague, and they took up their residence at 139 Third street, in Troy. Mr. Montague, as near as can be learned, was engaged in making fine shoes for women.

He was a large man, scrupulously particular in matters of dress, even to the point of fastidiousness, and in those days, before the invention of the sewing machine and when there were no public laundries, the making and washing and ironing of his shirts was no small item in the work of the household.

Not unlike many housewives of those days, Mrs. Montague was resourceful, and in casting about for devices to lighten her household duties she hit upon the idea of a detached collar, which might be fastened to a neckband on her husband's shirts and washed and ironed separately.

In 1820 the Rev. Ebenezer Brown, a retired Methodist clergyman, who had settled in Troy and started a small dry goods store at 285 River street, quick to take advantage of the popularity of the new separate collar, opened a small workshop in the rear of his store, where his wife and daughters and one or two other women cut out with scissors, stitched by hand and washed and ironed the collars, which he disposed of by peddling.

This was in reality the first collar shop.—Leslie's Weekly.

What Is Directoire?

Directoire, incroyable, merveilleuse, are words on every tongue, yet they are frequently used interchangeably with regard to distinguishing characteristics.

Directoire is the comprehensive word, including incroyable (the dress of the man during the directoire period) and the merveilleuse (the woman's dress of the same period).

The classic type of costume which has so revolutionized the clothes of the moment is a revival of the copies of Greek draperies assumed at the close of the eighteenth century, when the new government, the directoire (directory), supplanted the old French monarchy.

At that period Greek and Roman philosophy appealed to cultivated minds, and classic costumes, as expressed in the lines of Greek sculpture, demanded a share of consideration. The women of the younger republic appeared attired in costumes on Grecian lines, and the style, at once simple and artistic, prevailed.

So the original directoire was born of the Greek and adapted to the requirements of the "present day" of the closing of the eighteenth century, and the directoire of the moment is the revival of that of a hundred years ago, with just sufficient amendment to suit it to our "present day" needs.

The characterizing features of the directoire style are: Skirts scant and clinging and en traine, with a high waist band; sleeves small, close fitting and long; collars high; pockets large; revers exaggerated; buttons numerous. One, all or any number of these characteristics may be discovered in one garment.

The introduction of the directoire has caused a radical change in costume building. The effect must be of swathing, of a seamless robe, no matter how much seaming, darting and goring may be employed in the construction of the foundation.

Distinguishing characteristics of the incroyable are the coats—long of tail and cut off squarely and abruptly above the waist line in front, with long sleeves, massively cuffed, with huge revers and pocket flaps—all much bebuttoned.

Merveilleuse stands for the scant, clinging, swathing style.

The empire style is an evolution of the directoire, even as the directoire period merged into the empire. The chief difference between the two styles lies in the greater fullness of the empire.

The Unmusical Voice.

A friend who has spent many years abroad remarked: "It does seem too bad that American children should have such disagreeable voices. They are acknowledged to be bright and attractive, yet because of their high pitched, disagreeable voices they are shunned," says Good Housekeeping. "Travelers avoid a car or a hotel in which there are young Americans." Why is this? Largely because our children are imitative, and as our voices are not well modulated neither are theirs. Is the unmusical voice a necessary American trait?

Throat specialists tell us that, although our climate is inclined to sharpen the tone, a certain sweetness and a low pitch may be maintained with proper care. A child is soothed by gentle speech and irritated by harsh tones. Of course you read aloud to your child. Every mother does. Let this be done with constant watching of articulation and tone. This is good exercise for the reader and a means of culture in more than one respect for the child.

Never rebuke in anger. Keep quiet until you can speak sweetly and firmly. One point which cultivated foreigners notice is that our young people call their messages from a distance instead of going to the person and quietly waiting for an opportunity to speak. Shouting through the house is unpleasant and uncultured. A child should understand that it is not to break in upon conversation. This last performance is considered "very American" abroad.

Mrs. Taft In the White House.

Mrs. William H. Taft will move amid familiar scenes if she becomes the first lady of the land and is at the head of the White House menage. Mrs. Taft is a daughter of John W. Herron, who was the law partner of former President Rutherford B. Hayes. The Hayes and the Herron families were closely connected by ties of friendship, and to Miss Herron Mr. and Mrs. Hayes were always "uncle" and "aunt." Miss Herron spent many of her holidays from school with the Hayeses in the White House. In a recent conversation Mrs. Taft said: "Nothing in my life exceeds the climax of human bliss which I felt as a girl of sixteen, when I was first entertained at the White House. The thing that seemed remarkable to me was that, although the Hayeses occupied the most exalted position in the land, they were just as they had been at home in Ohio. They weren't changed a bit. I couldn't understand it then, for I supposed, of course, that their manners must change with their advent to the White House to be in keeping with my conceptions of the alteration in their position in life."

Irish Moss For Invalids.

Those who suffer from stomach or intestinal trouble where the mucous membrane is irritated will find Irish moss soothing and palatable.

It should be boiled until it produces a thick, nourishing jelly. It can be boiled with milk or water, although the former is better. If one wishes it sweetened or flavored, any fruit juice that the palate will stand can be added to it.

Coffee or chocolate prepared as for the table is preferable to the juices and extracts and is better for the health.

When making it for an invalid who has chronic stomach trouble it is best to use the smallest amount of sugar.

Tasty Luncheon Dish.

An Americanized version of an Italian cabbage dish is this: Boil the cabbage tender, drain it, cut it into pieces and arrange it in layers in a buttered baking dish with grated Parmesan cheese and buttered crumbs separating the layers. When the cabbage is all used turn into the dish some beef stock or hot water flavored with beef, cover the top with buttered crumbs and bake until they are brown.

To Keep Meat Warm.

Place the dish containing the meat on a pan of boiling water, cover over with a metal dish cover, and over that place a cloth. The latter will prevent the gravy from drying up and keep the meat moist and juicy.

The Intelligent Runabout.

"What did Biffers say?"

"He said the car skidded."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MARY GARDEN COIFFURE.

Arrangement a la Thais the Very Latest Wrinkle.

The latest effect in evening coiffures is the arrangement a la Thais, that affected by Mary Garden in her interpretation of this role. While it is extremely effective and artistic, it has an advantage in that its arrangement does not offer very grave difficulties and that it can be accomplished even where the growth of hair is not abundant.

The hair is divided across the head, waved a very little, and then the front hair is again divided by a center part. Both sides of the front hair are then puffed out loosely and secured a little beneath the crown of the head, after which the previously waved back hair is brushed up to meet the front hair and is also puffed out in pompadour effect. This, however, must be as irregular and soft in outline as possible; otherwise the artistic effect produced by the finished coiffure will not come up to requirements. Unite the long strands of hair and form a large Psyche knot well in the center of the head, pinning it down securely with a few large shell pins. If preferred a large bun or plain coil or a figure 8 may be substituted for the Psyche if the hair is not sufficiently long and thick to make a large knot—a small one would not be in keeping with the full arrangement of the hair—or even a braid laid flat over the head. Puffs in Grecian style are also permissible with this coiffure, and as many as nine of them may be made—or purchased—arranging them in flat, irregular rows over the back of the head. A Grecian filet is placed in front of the coiffure.

Don't squint. It weakens the lids. Neither must you wink. A bad habit is formed and you wink unconsciously.

Keep the chest well up, the shoulders back and the abdomen in; then start out for a walk with some definite purpose in view.

There is a tendency toward individuality in hairdressing. The woman who studies the lines of her face and considers the contour of her head is much wiser than her sister who insists that her coiffure be in the latest fashion.

The particular woman never uses a sachet of one odor, a soap of another, a powder of a third, and so on. She either buys her soaps and powders unscented or else has them of the same scent as her sachets and perfumes. There must be no conflicting of odors.

Tonic baths are decidedly refreshing when that tired feeling first overtakes a person. For the matter of that, a warm bath not hot enough to be weakening, but of low enough temperature to relax the nerves, is always beneficial and may be indulged in whenever a woman is fatigued.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Paris Is Full of Them and Nearly All Use Parisian Sage.

In the beauty show at the Metropolis two years ago Gold Medals were awarded to five different women.

To the most beautiful woman between 20 and 25; between 25 and 30; between 30 and 35; between 35 and 40 and between 40 and 45.

A society reporter who interviewed all five women in the interest of his papers, reported that all of them had beautiful hair, and that each of the five enthusiastically attributed her luxuriant hair to Parisian Sage.

W. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, sells Parisian Sage for 50 cents a large bottle. He guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks; to stop falling hair and itching of the scalp. It makes any woman's hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant.

GIFTS BOYS AND GIRLS CAN MAKE

Pretty Bits That Will Delight the Dear Ones at Christmas

A little fernery that will delight the person who receives it can be easily made from two crescents of birch-bark laced together with light green baby ribbon. Make loops of the ribbon by which it may be hung, and the day before Christmas fill your "canoe" with moist earth, plant in it a tiny asparagus fern, and one with a wider leaf. These may be bought cheap and will keep fresh for weeks if moistened with a few drops of water each day.

You can prepare a Christmas morning surprise for your family by sowing a week or ten days before some flaxseed in rich earth. On Christmas morning transplant the seedlings to half walnut shells, which must be glued to little cards with "Greetings" on them and tied with red bows. Put one at each place at the breakfast table, and see the delight they are sure to produce. If you can get some very small ferns you can add one to each fernery.

Your mother would be pleased with a set of six paper ice cream cups, covered with red crepe paper and tied with red ribbon and a spray of holly, suggests the Delineator. These filled with home-made salted peanuts or candy would make a charming addition to the Christmas dinner table.

If you have heard your father admire a verse in a magazine or a paragraph from a stirring speech, cut it out and mount it on a map of birch-bark or bristol-board and hang it over his desk or chair.

For a girl friend cover a note paper box with crepe paper and tie it with ribbons and paper flowers of the same shade. Fill it with fudge. A box covered with violet paper and trimmed with violets of a deeper shade would be lovely.

EXIT THE COMIC SUPPLEMENT

Interesting Statement Made by a Boston Newspaper

Boston Herald, Nov. 15th.—Today the Herald abandons the comic supplement. That accompaniment of Sunday newspaperdom has had its day. We discard it as we would throw aside any mechanism that had reached the end of its usefulness, or any "feature" that had ceased to fulfil the purpose of attraction. Comic supplements become as vulgar in design as they are tawdry in color. There is no longer any semblance of art in them, and if there are any any ideals they are low and descending lower.

Many protests come from the public against a continuance of the comic supplements. Parents and teachers object to them. Most discerning persons throw them aside without inspection experience having taught them that that there is no hope for improvement in these gaudy sheets. The supplements no longer amuse an intelligent public; they serve mainly to depress persons of taste, and distort such growing taste as may struggle for the light in others.

TO LOWER TARIFF

This is the Idea of Roosevelt.

Statement of Hamar Greenwood ---U.S. Trying to Curry With Canada.

London, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P.)—Though the speech of J. J. Hill at the Chamber of Commerce banquet in New York was lengthily reported here it has attracted little attention.

The Observer, however, has interviewed Lord Strathcona and Hamar Greenwood, M. P., respecting it. The former disagreed with Mr. Hill's views and stated it was unquestionably true that Canadians were strongly in favor of the preference to the Mother Country, and any proposals to further this policy coming from England would be most favorably entertained in Canada whichever party happened to be in power.

Mr. Greenwood said free trade between the United States and Canada was not within the realm of practical politics. From his recent journey through the United States he knew it to be the policy of President Roosevelt and other leaders to curry favor with Canada in the hope of breaking down the tariff walls with the object of benefiting the United States traders, but the persistent irritation of the policy of successive United States Governments had hardened Canadian hearts. Canada now asked no favors from Uncle Sam and would certainly grant none to conflict with the interests of the Mother Country.

Mr. Greenwood opined that if the interests of Canadian consumers demanded it the preference would be withdrawn, but Canada had now reached that stage of national development which would make a mighty race, ever attached, he hoped, to the home country, but ever as hard as flint against American absorption or other foreign influence.

The Observer, which is a militant tariff reform journal, editorially remarks that the Canadian question was uppermost in Mr. Chamberlain's mind when he entered on what seemed to be his incredible campaign, for it was as clear to him as it is now plain to others that the alternative to an imperial preference was the fiscal federation of Canada and the United States. Without some action on this side it was quite certain that within the next few years some process of trade reciprocity would be initiated.

"When we speak now of inevitable victory for the preference let us hope it will not come too late to serve its main original end," says The Observer.

ENQUIRY BURKED?

Montreal Paper Says Marine Probe Was Choked Off.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—Referring to the recent Marine Department investigation at Quebec L'Evenement states that suddenly, amidst the strongest revelations, emissaries were sent to Ottawa and then the ardor of the commission seemed to slacken.

As a matter of fact, when they wanted to know if the men who furnished the supplies to the Department of Marine contributed to the electoral fund, Mr. Perron, the Government lawyer, objected and the judge maintained the objection. Then the tone of the Government organs seemed to indicate that the time to close up had arrived.

La Vigie, which speaks for Hon. S. N. Parent, said: "In Quebec the Government have sufficiently proved the purity of their intentions, consequently this is why we say enough, enough of this commission."

L'Evenement declares that The Vigie's article smells of fear all the way through when that paper states that "we know enough."

"We reply, 'yes, enough for the Liberal party, but not enough for the country at large.'"

ED LEE HAS BEEN CAUGHT

Toronto Jail Breaker Who Slew Policeman is in Germany

Niagara Falls, Nov. 23.—Chief of Police Lyons of Niagara Falls, N.Y., has received information that Edward Lee, alias Blackie, who it is alleged murdered Patrolman McCormick and seriously injured Patrolman Manger of the Niagara Falls, N.Y., police on the evening of July 22 last, after escaping from Toronto Jail with five others, has been apprehended in Berlin, Germany.

The German authorities claim the man they have answers in every detail to the description sent them of Lee, and ask if the American authorities will extradite.

District Attorney Ackerson of Niagara County, Saturday took dispositions of three men who witnessed the tragedy. They will be forwarded to Germany, and if the man apprehended prove to be Lee, an officer will be sent to bring him back to Niagara Falls.

THREE MET THEIR DEATH AS RESULT OF WRECK ON C.P.R. NEAR PONTYPOOL

Double-Header From the East Crashed Into Freight Standing on Siding About One O'clock This Morning With Disastrous Results.

THE DEAD ARE ENGINEER FINDLAY, FIREMAN CONWAY AND BRAKEMAN KENNY

All Are From North Toronto—Engines Twisted and Broken and Nine Cars Smashed to Kindling Wood--One Man Reported to be Injured---Open Switch Said to be Cause of the Wreck---Wreckage Will Not be all Cleared Away for Some Time.

THE DEAD

Engineer Findlay.
Fireman Conway.
Brakeman Kenney, all of Toronto.

THE INJURED

Engineer Darroch, also of Toronto. Will recover.

Three are dead and one seriously injured as a result of a head-on collision between two freight trains at the Sandbank siding, about five miles west of Pontypool, about one o'clock this morning.

A double header going west crashed into another freight that was standing on the siding and the three engines and a number of cars were broken and twisted so as to be almost unrecognizable as rolling stock.

As far as can be learned, the switch at the east end of the siding was left open and when the double-header came along it turned off on to the siding instead of keeping on the main track. It was travelling at a high rate of speed and it crashed into the standing freight with terrific impact. The front engine of the double-header was a light one and it and the engine on the standing train were smashed worse than the other one. The engineer, fireman and brakeman on the front engine of the train going west were killed almost instantly. It is reported that they met horrible deaths. The engineer's name is Finlay, the fireman Conway, and the brakeman, Kenny. It is said that they are all from North Toronto. It was reported that the engineer on the standing train was injured, but this point could not be confirmed.

The engine on the standing freight was close to the main track and the men on the front engine of the double-header did not notice their peril in time to jump.

It was exceedingly difficult to secure news of the wreck as the C.P.R. officials at Peterborough would give out no information. There is no telephone connection with Sandbank and only meagre details of the catastrophe were received until the train from Toronto came in, about two hours behind schedule time.

AN EYE-WITNESSES STORY.

A gentleman from Pontypool, who arrived in Peterborough on the train that arrived here at 1.30 o'clock, gave a graphic description of the wreck. The engineer and brakeman, Findlay and Kenney, were mutilated almost beyond recognition. They apparently met their deaths instantly. Fireman Conway may have suffered terrible agony. Apparently he did not know that the train had gone on to the switch and that death was only a few moments away. When found he was standing upright with his shovel in his hand as if he were throwing coal into the furnace, when the wreck occurred. The top part of his face and head was literally cooked and the body was badly crushed.

Engineer E. Darroch, who was on the second engine of the double-header, was injured.

He has splinters in his head and several contusions on different parts of the body.

TAKEN TO BURKETON.

The dead and injured have been taken to Burketon Junction and will be removed to Toronto as soon as possible.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

The number of the freight coming east was 54 and that of the one going west 55. No. 55 was waiting at Pontypool for the "midnight" express to go through and No. 54 was on the siding at Sandbank. It is surmised that the brakeman on No. 54 mistook his orders and opened the switch at the east end of the siding for his train to proceed instead of leaving it closed until No. 55 went through. While it was open No. 55 came along, turned onto the siding, travelling at a rate of thirty miles an hour and the wreck was the result.

The brakeman on No. 54, who is said to be responsible for the disaster, was a young fellow named Reid and it said that was his first trip on the road as a "regular." He was nowhere to be found after the wreck and it is reported that he had taken to the woods near the scene of the disaster and was in hiding. Conductor J. Hay was in charge of No. 55.

PASSENGERS TRANSFERRED

The 11.30 noon train did not arrive here until half-past one. A train was made up and sent out to the wreck, where the passengers were transferred from the train that had come from Toronto, and had to stop on the west side of the wreck. The passengers had to walk a quarter of a mile in order to reach the section on the Peterborough side of the wreck.

A PASSENGER'S STORY.

Speaking to one of the passengers on the train that reached Peterborough at 1.30 o'clock, the Review was able to procure further particulars of the wreck.

"It will be to-morrow afternoon, if not later," he said, "before the wreckage is cleared away. It is one of the worst wrecks that has occurred for some time. It is a great sight, the large mogul engine piled high on top of the lighter one, presenting an immense mass of twisted iron and wood".

He informed the reporter that nine box cars were splintered into matchwood. The double-header train was travelling at the rate of thirty miles an hour, so that it can easily be imagined the terrible crash with which the two trains met.

Two of the engines are right across the track and the wrecking crews are having great difficulty in removing the debris. The auxiliary from Havelock and a wrecking train from Toronto arrived as soon as possible.

Among the passengers on the train that reached here at 1.30 o'clock was Mr. W. H. Cluxton, of this city. Mr. Cluxton was at Bobcaygeon and came home on the C.P.R., joining the main line at Burketon Junction. Mr. Cluxton had a good look at the wreck, and informed the Review that he had never seen anything like it in his life.

"The iron coal cars," said Mr Cluxton, "were twisted like pieces of paper and huge bars and plates of iron and steel were bent like wire or strips of tin. There must have been a terrific impact when the trains came together."

It is likely that the engineer and fireman on the standing train had time to jump and escape the terrible fate that befell their brother trainmen. If they had been in their engine when the collision took place their chance of escape would have been very small.

HIGH INTEREST

At Liverpool recently a number of women were proceeded against for carrying on money-lending business without being registered. It was stated that the rate of interest charged on small loans ranged from 866 per cent. to 1,340 per cent. Fines of $20 and costs were imposed in five cases.

SEDITION IN INDIA

Authorities Are Becoming Nervous at the Unrest Among

London, Nov. 23.—Evidences of unrest in India have deepened the apprehensions with which the outlook in that section of the British Empire is regarded in responsible quarters. King Edward's recent proclamation seems to have had the immediate effect of initiating a series of political offences and demonstrations of disaffection. The alarmists are talking of another mutiny, and one highly placed officer in particular, who has just arrived in London from India, is circulating a statement to the effect that the Indian Government is in the possession of evidence showing that a systematic propaganda has been set on foot with the object of tampering with native troops.

In official circles the idea of another mutiny on any considerable scale is regarded as practically impossible, but, nevertheless, the situation is viewed with considerable anxiety. One authority—that same Indian officer—said:

"We wish that we could ascribe the agitation to the partition of Bengal alone, for then it would die down, but the truth is that sedition and unrest are spreading to all parts of the peninsula."

CHINESE SAID TO BE IN REVOLT

Rebels on Yangtse Engage in Battle With Authorities

New York, Nov. 23.—A cable despatch to The Herald from Shanghai says: "The accession of the Emperor took place on Thursday. Reports of Prince Ching's death, which have been in circulation, are contradicted.

A decree has been promulgated ordering the officials of the provinces to capture rebels for summary beheading and promising a reward.

There is a serious mutiny in the garrison at Ngan King, on the Yangtse, where fighting is being waged in the streets. A large number of persons have been killed and houses have been destroyed.

Three battalions from the manoeuvres have been ordered to proceed to Ngan King and restore order.

Commander Li was wounded. Commander Chen Hon Yung killed and a deputy in charge of a magazine was murdered.

Literary Evening

The monthly literary evening of St. Paul's Guild will be held on Friday evening at eight o'clock. The subject will be Kipling's Recessional, and other poems, taken by Mr. Mowat. The evening should be a profitable one.

Law Clerk Kills Himself.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—At noon yesterday, Charles T. Moffatt, a law clerk in the office of Gemmil & May, committed suicide in the janitor's room in the Carleton chambers.

He fired a 44-calibre bullet into his head and expired before those who were within earshot could reach him.

The unfortunate suicide, who was 29 years of age, was the son of the late R. B. Moffatt of Amherst, N.S., for many years clerk of the railway committee of the House of Commons. Despondency, due to illness, is supposed to have led Moffatt to commit suicide, as he had no financial troubles.

Steamer Blows Up.

New Orleans, Nov. 23.—Ten persons are dead and twice as many injured as a result of an explosion Saturday on the Mississippi river steamer H.M. Carter.

The boiler of the Carter exploded while the steamer was on its way from New Orleans to Baton Rouge, with a cargo of general merchandise and 50 or more passengers. Fire followed the explosion, and the boat was burned to the water's edge.

Between 12 and 15 persons are missing. About the same number were badly scalded, and it is expected several of them will die.

Rescuers Are Delayed.

New York, Nov. 23.—Menaced by a danger which in their vigorous prosecution of rescue work they had largely overlooked, the workmen engaged in digging for bodies lying entombed beneath tons of earth and twisted pipes in Gold street, Brooklyn, where an explosion killed 15 persons Friday, were compelled Saturday to abandon their task and devote their efforts to shoring up the foundations of houses that stand at the edge of the pit.

Off For St. Pierre.

Cherbourg, Nov. 23.—The French armored cruiser Amiral Aube sailed Saturday night for St. Pierre.

On board the cruiser is Pierre Didelot, the newly appointed administrator of St. Pierre Miquelon.

He stated that his mission was to act liberally in the establishment of peace on the island.

Received by the King.

London, Nov. 23.—(C. A. P.)—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux was invited to lunch with the Prince and Princess of Wales on Saturday, and was afterwards received by the King.

Cassels to Go West.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 23.—Justice Cassels' marine enquiry commission is coming to the Pacific coast and will hold sessions in Vancouver and Victoria.

Small France In Canada.

Paris, Nov. 23.—(C.A.P.)—Hon. R. Dandurand, Speaker of the Canadian Senate, was the guest of La Marmite Dining Club, who entertained aviators on Saturday.

Hon. Mr. Dandurand spoke enthusiastically in praise of France, and expressed the hope that the aviators would reduce the existing distances between the peoples of the world.

Referring to the affection for France entertained by his fellow-Canadians, Hon. Speaker Dandurand remarked that he was assured that there was room on the banks of the St. Lawrence for a small France, which their grand-children may some day get to know.

Barges Tangled In Chain.

St. Catharines, Nov. 23.—As the steam barge Iona was passing down the old Welland Canal above lock No. 2 on Saturday afternoon, her wheel became entangled in a chain which is used in connection with a floating bridge across the canal for the use of Ridley College students.

The services of a diver were procured, but he was unable to cut the chain until about noon on Sunday, when the steamer was backed into the level above and the water drawn off.

Sergeant Robs Drunks.

Kenora, Nov. 23.—Prisoners in the jail here having complained of being robbed in the past few weeks, detectives were put on the case. Feigning drunkenness, Charles Wiggins was arrested by Sergt. John Russell. In searching the prisoner at the station, $16 was taken off him, and only $5 afterwards accounted for. Russell was arrested and searched and marked money found, and he then confessed. He has been on the force about 18 months.

"Dry" Dinner at Queen's.

Kingston, Nov. 23.—The dinner committee of Queen's recommended a dry dinner on Saturday after two hours' lively discussion. Some thought wine ought to be served to the guests if not to all the students, while others thought all ought to be treated alike. The report was finally approved by an almost unanimous vote.

Explosion of Dynamite.

St. Catharines, Nov. 23.—William Bombay is at home to-day nursing a broken arm, as the result of a heavy explosion at Thorold Saturday. Bombay was engineer at the Battle quarry, and was unable to escape from the boiler-house when fifty or sixty pounds of dynamite exploded.

Parties Still Tied.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 23.—The recount in Harbor Grace allows Dawe, the Government candidate, to retain the seat by a majority of three. There is one ballot in dispute.

Shah Won't Give Constitution.

Teheran, Nov. 23.—The Shah of Persia has definitely decided that the people shall not have a constitution, and his proclamation to that effect is posted in the mosques to-day.

In his proclamation, the Shah says: "We were prepared to redeem our promise and convoke a parliament, but we learn from the assembled representatives of the people that they do not want a constitution."

No Arrests Yet.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—No arrests have yet been made in the case of Andrew Fox, whose body was found on St. James street Friday evening, although his movements have been traced to within 20 minutes of the finding of the dead body. He was at the Mikado Saloon on Bleury street at 12.40 and was not seen again alive.

Lawyers In the Lead.

Albany, N.Y., Nov. 23.—Of the 150 members of the State Assembly 63 are lawyers. Among the others there are five doctors, 12 farmers, 10 merchants, 10 real estate agents, four insurance agents, three manufacturers, four contractors, two traveling salesmen, three undertakers, one editor, two printers.

Escapes Guard, Suicides.

New York, Nov. 23.—Overpowering an attendant in charge of the male division of the alcoholic ward at Bellevue Hospital yesterday, Ulrich Fornier, a young Canadian, wrested the keys from the guard, and escaped from the ward and ran to the East river and jumped into the water and was drowned.

Drowned at Railway Camp.

Kenora, Nov. 23.—Duncan Bell, aged 19, bookkeeper in a transcontinental railway camp, was drowned on Saturday while skating on Long Lake, north of Vermillion Bay. Deceased was a native of Ottawa. The body will be shipped there to-day, where the parents reside.

Nearly Asphyxiated.

Belleville, Nov. 23.—Chief of Police Snider of Deseronto and his family were nearly asphyxiated by escaping gas from a coal stove. Mrs. Snider was very low for some time, but will recover.

Burglars Get Jewelry.

Stratford, Nov. 23.—A daring robbery was committed at John Swinburne's general store early Saturday, when unknown thieves lifted the grate and by way of the cellar reached the store, getting away with over $300 worth of jewelry.

For threatening to shoot James Ruston, J. S. Marchant was sentenced to three months in jail.

NEW LABOR BODY NOW IN EXISTENCE

Railway Employes Unite as Separate Department of Federation

Denver, Col., Nov. 23.—It was announced yesterday that there was born in Denver on Saturday a powerful railway employes' department of the American Federation of Labor, with ten affiliated organizations as members.

The object is to bring about a closer union of all railroad employes and to seek to affiliate all railway organizations with the organization.

The first convention is to be held in Denver and it is expected that the hundred thousand employes will be represented by the officers of their unions, which are as follows:

Railroad telegraphers, boilermakers and iron shipbuilders, freight handlers, machinists, car workers, blacksmiths, railway clerks, switchmen, maintenance of way employes and steamfitters.

FISHING BOAT IS WRECHED

Three Men Have Narrow Escape From Death

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 23.—Dr. F. E. Morgan, formerly of Toronto; Wilbut Greener of High River, Alberta, and George Clements of Vancouver, narrowly escaped death by having their fishing boat wrecked off Dundas Island, west of Prince Rupert.

For two weeks they were missing. When their boat was smashed on the rocks they clung to the pieces until they reached the shore, where for a week they subsisted on raw clams. They were unable to light a fire and in wet clothing suffered frightfully from exposure. Saturday they were picked up by a schooner.

CUT DOWN HEDGE AT THE COTTAGE

Belonging to Mr. Popham at Chemong Park--A Contemptible Act

Some miscreant has cut down the hedge at Mr. Popham's cottage, Chemong Park. The hedge was a fine one and the act was most malicious and contemptible.

Prosecution is likely to arise out of the matter and efforts are being made to find out the guilty party.

Time limits for debates in Parliament are to be fixed for the coming session.

Pennsylvania are said to have the best football team in the United States.

A THIRD ATTEMPT

To Pass the Education Bill.

Text of Third Attempt to Settle School Question is Issued.

London, Nov. 23.—The Government yesterday issued the text of its third attempt to draw up an education bill which will command sufficient support from all parties to get through Parliament.

It is, of course, a compromise and will undoubtedly meet with serious objection on the part of all extremists. But, as the most influential bishops have agreed with the most influential members of the Liberal party in formulating the terms of the bill, there are fairly good prospects of its revival.

Popular control and freedom from tests are two of the main principles to which the Government has striven to give effect. All schools receiving rate aid pass completely under control of local education authority. No teacher employed or seeking employ is required to subscribe any specified religious denomination or attend or abstain from attending any place of religious worship or give any religious instruction.

These provisions, the Government maintains, will provide one type of school throughout the country, the whole apparatus of managers appointed to guard the interests of a particular denomination passing away.

This makes a great distinction from the old bill, which involved a sacrifice on the part of the church in compensation for which she gets "the right of entry." This takes the form of a provision that if any parent desires it, denominational religious instruction may be given two mornings a week between 9 and 9.45 o'clock. To reconcile the passive kickers who object to denominational teaching being paid for out of the taxes, it is provided that the denomination concerned shall defray the expenses either by providing teachers or if they accept an assistant teacher who may "volunteer" they must refund a proportionate amount of his salary to the local authority. This "right of entry" will probably be the focus of a bitter controversy. It does not fully satisfy even the moderate of either side and is bitterly opposed by the extremists. An influential body of Liberal nonconformists, members of Parliament before the text of the bills was known passed resolutions condemning any provision involving the "right of entry" during school hours of sectarian purposes or the employment of teachers to give sectarian instruction, even voluntarily.

The bill provides for the religious instruction proposed by the Cowper Temple, a year or so ago; that is, 45 minutes a day of undenominational teaching. The bill also provides for contracting out of schools committed to denominational teachings, as, for instance, the Roman Catholics. They will get a Parliamentary grant provided they fulfill certain conditions, but they will receive no rate aid. Catholic assent to the bill will probably largely depend on whether the Parliamentary grant is sufficient, in the words of Archbishop Bourne, "to keep our schools permanently in efficient being."

"It is imperative," says the Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, "that we shall always be able to have in our schools teachers whom we can recognize as genuinely Catholic teachers."

TRAGIC DEATH

Of the Daughter of a Former Peterboro' Man.

The Misses Nicholls, McDonnel street, received a telegram yesterday informing them of the tragic death of their neice, Miss Mary Nicholls, of Spokane, Wash. The unfortunate lady in company with her sister and two brothers, was on the way to church in an automobile on Sunday, Nov. 15th. The chauffeur lost control of the machine and it went over a fifty foot precipice. The five persons in the car were all injured, Miss Mary Nicholls being so badly hurt that she died shortly afterwards. The telegram received yesterday stated that the others would all recover.

Miss Nicholls was a daughter of Mr. W. D. Nicholls, who left Peterborough about thirty years ago. The two sons who were in the automobile at the time the accident occurred are prominent business men in Spokane.

PAP

Pap-taking, like whiskey-drinking, in time becomes natural. The hand in one case, like the mouth in the other, opens automatically. It comes natural. Pap may take the form of money, gifts or even flattery. It is best described as something given and taken for an unworthy purpose. It is earned by the sacrifice of self-respect, which in time becomes a natural process. It antedates all other methods of absorption, having been acquired chiefly at the mothers' breast or the nurse's bottle. The amoeba, the lowest form of animal existence, gets its living by means of subsistence in this way. It is always the lowest form of anything that derives its sustenance in this way. By taking pap a whole nation of people can be made into a gigantic mess of pottage in one generation. It is the meanest and yet the most seductive form of living known. It is par excellence the manner of the parasite. The pride of the independent, high-principled, self-respecting is to it foolishness, but not a stumbling-block. It is the manner of the old Romans who lived in the sewers or cloacas of that city. Like the foot-and-mouth disease, it threatens Canada. Indeed it is already here. It has been known to take hold in West Peterborough. Look out for it.

NO CHANGE

Two weeks ago the Minister of Marine made two announcements to prove that his department retained rudiments of conscience notwithstanding the declaration of the Royal Commission to the contrary. Mr. Brodeur informed the country, which had been startled with the fresh revelations from Quebec, that all officials who took commissions, and all contractors who paid them, would be prosecuted. He also was quoted as saying that the patronage list would be abolished. This pledge of virture was described by Government organs with high editorial praise.

But nothing has happened. No official or contractor has been arrested and no one seems to be alarmed. The very contractors who were to be prosecuted are still supplying goods at highly profitable monopoly prices to other departments and even to the Department of Marine. It may be that sometime in the future a few subordinates who have no party pull will be punished, but no peril awaits the principal officials who have been appointed by this government and are implicated. As for the large contractors concerned, most of them are important members of the government party. They will not only escape prosecution, but are almost sure to retain patronage and continue their contributions to the campaign fund. They are fresh from labor and contributions in the party interest in the recent fight. Mr. Brodeur has not spurned their campaign offerings.

It is true that Mr. Brodeur has written a letter to his deputy, directing him to instruct the agents "to disregard the patronage list." But this published document gave no instructions to purchase supplies in the open market to the best advantage, and no hint as to the course to be pursued. Evidently then private instructions have been sent out. Though this letter was written nearly three weeks ago, no general calls for tenders have appeared since, and so far as can be learned no purchases have been made from dealers who are not supporters of the government. In short, if the old patronage list has been cancelled, it has been replaced by a new one. When the accounts are seen it will be found that the purchases are made from the same favoured persons. There is now a purchasing agent at Ottawa for the Department. He has been at work since last spring. He was appointed on account of the Royal Commission exposures, but has gone on buying from dealers on the patronage list just the same as the party did before it employed him. So far as the department has gone, since it was convicted of lack of conscience, it has continued to justify the verdict adding the additional offence of false pretence and hypocrisy.

INDIAN SUMMER

Except for the absence of haze, most people would be inclined to think our present weather Indian summer. The stillness, softness and balminess of the late autumn indicates the languid season of amber loveliness when "All the air a solemn stillness holds," but there is no Indian summer without the "haze of distance" that unlike the smoke of many camp fires to which it has been likened throws its thin veil over the remoter landscape and clouds the faint forms of "hill and peak and head land." Now is the time to read that matchless poem, "The Song of Hiawatha." Longfellow got his materia from Schoolcraft, a noted American who at the beginning of the last century visited the braves in their villages and wigwams and took part in the life of the savage. Schoolcraft's narrative is good prose. Longfellow's is poetry. The difference between prose and poetry was never more fully illustrated. Hiawatha (short i) was the general typical character of Indian life and civilization. The famous line "And the wild reverberation as of thunder in the mountains" is often quoted as the most truly descriptive in the language. Our childish apprehensiveness for the belated wild-fowl as in one's and two's they wing speedily southward recurs to us always. It is time to be hurrying on, not for loitering. Presently the fierce north wind will come down all in a moment in the twinkling of an eye. And with its clouds of whirling snow. Then winter begins in earnest and a new joy succeeds our late grief.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Manchester, Oct. 29— Frances Steger, a Nottingham school girl, who, after a mysterious absence of four months returned to her home and parents on Thursday night, gave a strange account yesterday of her experiences. She is seven years of age and of engaging manners.

"As I was coming home from school," she said, "a man I did not know asked me to go on an errand. He took my hand and we walked to the station and got on a tramway car and rode a very long way. It was a long way to walk, too, when we got off the tramway car to the house where I have been. I don't know where it was but there were two houses, a yard and a water tap in the middle. I cried and wanted to go home, but the man took me upstairs and put me in a room where I have been ever since.

"He was kind to me and brought me sweets and a dolly, but he never let me go out or look out of the window. He used to lock me in the room when he went to work in the morning and if anybody came to the door when I was in the kitchen he sent me upstairs."

Asked if other people lived in the house, the child said no. Her captor she stated had white hair and a long beard, but he was not old for he could run very fast.

She said, "I knew he was not really an old man. When he brought me home last night he gave me pennies and a parcel and a letter and then ran away very fast and I ran home."

The man, she said, used to wash her hands and face and comb her hair, and kissed her every day. When she made a hole in her stocking he darned it.

Dublin, Nov. 21—The funeral of John Enright, a hotelkeeper at Castleconnell, in County Limerick, who died last week was the occasion of an extraordinary scene.

Mr. Enright had been a Protestant and church warden in the Church of Ireland but his mother was a Roman Catholic and the report went out that before his death under the influence of his mother he was admitted to the Roman Catholic Church.

On the day of the funeral the coffin was forcibly taken from the Protestant rector and the burial party which accompanied it by a party of about 300 men armed with sticks and buried without any funeral service.

The facts are vouched for by Canon Ross Lewis, the Church of Ireland rural dean, who writes:

"The disgraceful doings at J. Enright's funeral last Tuesday may give some idea of what the sad condition of Protestants would be under home rule. It is hard to believe that we are now in the twentieth century and supposed to be citizens of the great British Empire when we cannot bury our dead in peace and quietness."

COMEDY IN CRIME.

The London Urchin With the Bun Down His Back.

It has been a matter so customary to look upon crime as tragedy and criminals as tragedians that to aver that comedy is more frequently to be found in crime than tragedy seems at first view paradoxical. Yet such is the case.

A little London urchin ran into a baker's shop and, placing a halfpenny on the counter, asked nervously and timorously, "Mister, 'ave you a 'alfpenny buster (bun)?"

"Yes, my little man. Here is one quite hot."

"Thanks, mister. Would you mind a-shovin' it down my back?"

"Down your back, my little man! Why down your back?"

"Cos, sir, I'm only a little un, and if those chaps outside know I've a buster they'll take it, and I am so 'ungry, I am."

"Dear me, how wrong of them! Come round here, my little chap. There—there, it is down your back."

The boy ran off. In an instant another entered—a bigger boy.

"I say, mister, 'as a little boy just been in 'ere?"

"Yes."

"And did 'e buy a 'alfpenny buster?"

"Yes."

"And did 'e arsk you to shove it down 'is back, as us big fellows would take it?"

"Yes."

"Yah! Where's your watch and chain? 'E's got 'em. 'E's just round the corner."

Out rushed the baker. In a trice the big boy collared the till and bolted.

The shopman never saw the comic side of it all.—London Strand Magazine.

A Drink of Water.

A glass of cold water slowly sipped will produce a greater acceleration of the pulse for a time than will a glass of wine or spirits taken at a draft. In this connection it may not be out of place to mention that sipping cold water will often allay the craving for alcohol in those who have been in the habit of taking too much of it and may be endeavoring to reform, the effect being probably due to the stimulant action of the sipping.

An Impertinent Question.

A young man hurriedly entered a restaurant and sat down at the table nearest the kitchen. With shuffling feet the waitress advanced.

"Have you frog legs?" the young man anxiously inquired.

"No, indeed. Rheumatism makes me walk like this," the waitress indignantly replied.

Evasive.

"No, sirree! That's too much money to blow in!"

Muffling the War Drums.

Grim war once more now lifts its horrid front—
Same old near east—
And thus demands a diplomatic stunt—
So much at least—

Four million plunks a year—
With which to keep his royal hunks
Of debt and worry clear.

And yet he claims he's always shy
And wondering where he's at.
Ye gods, I'll bet a million I
Could kiss two years on that!

Changed His Mind.

"When I saw Trouble coming I climbed up the chimney."

"And did you get away from him?"

"No. I couldn't get out at the top, and he built a fire under me and coaxed me down!"

The Willful Maid.

There was a rich girl in Dubuque,
And she bought herself one day a duque.
Said she, "Him will I marry,
So me don't you harry,
For I vow I won't stand a rebuque."

Gloomy View of Mankind.

"I may be kind o' harsh in my judgment of men," observed Uncle Jerry Peebles, "but I've noticed as a general thing that a man ain't any better than his hat."

Five Lost at Sea.

Boston, Nov. 23.—Five men, including Captain Obed Knowlton of the British schooner Hugh G., lost their lives as the result of a collision in Broad Sound early Saturday with a barge in tow of a tug. The schooner sunk.

The drowned are: Captain Obed Knowlton, 45 years of age, of Advocate, N.S.; first mate, Wm. Merriman, Parrsboro, N.S.; Steward James Millberry, Advocate, N.S.; Seaman Albert Mills, Advocate, N.S.; Seaman L. Mosher, Parrsboro, N.S.

The survivors are Second Mate Orrin Milberry and two Norwegian seamen.

Teeth Grew Upward.

New York, Nov. 23.—To relieve a condition unusual, if not unique, in that teeth in the upper jaw of the patient had grown upward into the jawbone instead of downward, an operation was performed at St. Luke's Hospital by Dr. Robert Abbe. The patient was Herbert Cosman, 21 years old, of Newburg.

Ever since three teeth in the young man's right upper jaw were removed twelve years ago there has been a peculiar swelling in the cheek. No pain at any time accompanied the swelling.

Greatly Exaggerated.

Paris, Nov. 23.—The Havas News agency yesterday morning received the following despatch from Madrid in reply to a message regarding a report that the Spanish king had been assassinated:

"The king continues his hunt at Mudela. The rumors of assassination untrue."

Cat Deserted Ship.

For a long time a cat had been a member of the unfortunate ship City of Kingston. When that vessel arrived at Seattle from Victoria, B.C., on her last trip the cat, contrary to its habits, went ashore, and could not be coaxed back. Finally one of the crew grabbed the animal and carried it aboard. Just as the lines were cast off the cat sprang from the Kingston to the wharf and disappeared in a pile of rags. Now people are asking: "Did the yellow cat know that the Kingston would meet with a disaster and do cats, a well as rats, desert a sinking ship?"

Three Bears on the Road.

An Omemee man, while returning home from Bobcaygeon recently with a horse and buggy, was surprised to find three bears in the road about half a mile south of his home. They were an old bear and two cubs. Owing to the good berry crop, probably all were rolling fat and as lazy as teddy bears. The horse offered no objection to their presence and they had to be "shooed" to one side of the road, where they sat on their haunches looking disgustedly at the vehicle that had troubled them to move out of the way.

Must Close Work.

Rapid progress is being made in the survey of the town site of Prince Rupert. The contractors on the western 100 miles of the Grand Trunk Pacific are experiencing so much difficulty in getting supplies forward that it is doubtful if any further contracts will be let this year.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rambling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Fire Insurance Policy

Is ever entertained by the man who carries an insurance policy that will cover the loss of, or damage to, his home or property through the ravages of fire. He has a safe-guard against loss, and it gives him a spirit of confidence that he is protected from one of the worst dangers to which we are all daily exposed. A fire insurance policy is the best investment any business man can make.

This is the season of the year when fires are most prevalent and also the time when a person most wishes protection against such misfortune. We shall write a policy for you in one of the oldest and strongest companies in existence. For particulars apply to

Bryanite Pays Bet.

Atlantic City, N.J., Nov. 23.—One thousand persons facing the board walk from Young's Pier Saturday afternoon, saw J. F. Smith, said to be a wealthy western visitor, kneel at every crack in the board walk and yell "I voted for Bryan."

The victim of the fool election bet, attired in a dress suit, with his trousers "hindside before," went through the performance to save a $1,000 forfeit which he had put up as a guarantee that he would carry out his agreement if he lost.

Duel With Knives.

Gainsville, Mo., Nov. 23.—A duel to the death with knives was fought on Saturday between Mrs. James Crabtree and Mrs. Frank Graham, sisters-in-law, in a lonely spot in the woods, eight miles from Gainesville. The two women had quarrelled over family matters.

The place and the hour were fixed, The women met, according to appointment, and on a lonely mountain-side fought out their duel. Mrs. Graham's throat was cut and she died immediately.

Eva Booth Ill.

New York, Nov. 23.—Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army, is ill at the army headquarters in this city. Ever since her return from the west last August, Miss Booth has been hard at work, although she returned because of ill-health and sickness following sunstroke. Dr. Harlow Brooks, her physician, is attending her, and she has been confined to her bed. Her condition is not looked upon as serious.

Rebellion In Hayti.

Port au Prince, Hayti, Nov. 23.—Official notification was issued yesterday of the blockade of the port of Aux Cayes, the only town in the republic in a state of rebellion.

All the other places in the department of the south have remained loyal to President Nord Alexis, and it is generally believed that the revolutionary movement will be quickly put down.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

C.P.R. Car Cleaner at Winnipeg Accused of Killing Companion.

Winnipeg, Nov. 23.—The police yesterday afternoon arrested Thomas Hicks, C.P.R. car-cleaner, who is charged with the murder of Eccles Lennox in the Canadian Pacific yards here last Wednesday.

Lennox was employed by the G.T.P. in Portage le Prairie, and left there with a ticket for Liverpool and a considerable sum in cash, as he was going to bring his family out from Scotland. Though usually a sober man he got on a spree when leaving Portage, and when he was found on the following morning dead in the yards here with a revolver beside him it was supposed that he had committed suicide.

Hicks was the man who claimed to have found the body, and the police now say that the revolver belonged to Hicks and not Lennox, their theory being Hicks tried to rob Lennox, who, however, was not so drunk as appeared, and in the struggle Hicks shot him.

Hits Hackmen.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 23.—The six months' absolute embargo placed on all cattle, sheep, hogs and horses by the Dominion Minister of Agriculture caused the gates of all bridges here to be closed, except to pedestrians and automobiles.

The hackmen on both sides of the river are the hardest hit, but the automobile lines are having a harvest with the tourists.

Brothers Starve.

New York, Nov. 23.—Through the chance visit yesterday of a neighbor to the home of Michael and John Fluherty, brothers, aged 65 and 60 years, respectively, of Sheepshead Bay, it was discovered that the elder brother had died of starvation, and that the younger man was dying from lack of food.

Between them the brothers had in cash $1,350.

No New Developments.

Buffalo, Nov. 23.—"The situation looks good to-day," said Commissioner Pearson of the State Department of Agriculture. "No new cases of the foot and mouth disease have been discovered in Western New York since last Tuesday, and unless unfavorable developments come soon the re-opening of the East Buffalo stock yards should be but a matter of days."

C.A.R. Debentures.

London, Nov. 23.—(C. A. P.)—The issue is likely next week of £600,000 four per cent. first mortgage debentures of the Canada Atlantic Railway, price 93, proceeds to be used for the repayment of five per cent. bonds maturing in January.

Monte Carlo "Maxims."

The recent roulette contest between Lord Rosslyn and Sir Hiram Maxim aroused such widespread interest in this country that dispensers of roulette wheels and boards and counters found themselves quite unable to meet the rush of orders for these articles. Sir Hiram, as is well known, is no believer in "the man with a system," and is constantly amazed at what he calls "the lack of intelligence in most of these gamblers." On one occasion he had taken great trouble to show the exact mathematical chances of the game to an ardent "rouletter." The player listened intently. At the conclusion, however, he came out with a triumphant refutation of the scientist's arguments. "Why, Sir Hiram," he exclaimed, "you have allowed nothing for good luck!"

A California league catcher broke all baseball records last season

JOHNSON STARTS AGAIN.

Cleveland's Mayor Declines Assistance But Will Sell Home.

Cleveland, Nov. 23.—Pathetic messages of sympathy and hundreds of offers of financial aid poured in Saturday and Sunday upon Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, whose recent financial reverses will force him to give up his handsome home in Euclid avenue, to sell his automobile and to go back to a cottage to start again to make another fortune.

From Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin came this telegram to the man who fought for years to give the people three-cent fares and failed in the project:

"Fight on, brave heart. The only men who win final victories are the men who never accept defeat."

Scores of men, rich and poor, many of whom had never seen the mayor before, called at his office at the city hall with proffers of assistance.

A friend brought his check for $2,000. Johnson declined it. "I'll pull through," he said. "I'm going to get back on my feet again without any help."

One of the most touching tokens of the regard in which Tom Johnson is held by his fellow citizens came when a fashionably-dressed man hurried to the office of the mayor's secretary, Burr Gongwer, and said: "I read Mr. Johnson's statement that he is to sell his automobile. You just tell Tom that I have a machine that I don't need, and he can have it. He could have it even if I did need it."

The scene at the city hall on Saturday was a remarkable one. Just after the officials began the regular business, a line of men formed in the corridors leading to Johnson's office. Johnson did not speak of his financial troubles—at least not for publication, but it is understood he repeated his statement:

"There are a thousand fights left in me, and after I sell what I have I'll begin all over again, and start in a cottage, if necessary."

Many came forward with offers ranging from $5 to $1,000. Johnson, with tears of gratitude in his eyes, declined them.

To Fatten the Neck.

To make the throat full and round the best exercise is to bend the head slowly forward until the chin touches the neck and then slowly raise the head to its normal position. Repeat these movements until you are tired. Then bend the head as far backward as possible. Sitting erect in a chair, bend the head from one side to the other and then roll the head to the right, left and forward. Another good position is to let the arms hang loosely at the side. Raise the shoulders as high as possible, then forward, down and backward, until a circle is formed. Continue this for a time and then reverse the motion. Do this every five or ten minutes.

It is also well to massage the neck and shoulders well with cocoa butter.

Smiths Are Numerous.

The Monetary Times of Toronto recently received another literary curiosity, one of many which comes to the office of Canada's leading financial journal. A letter was sent by The Monetary Times to J. S. Smith at a Vancouver address. It went to the Pacific coast city, then to Los Angeles, and after a long tour came back to Toronto with the following observations made by the various persons who opened the letter:

"I am the 90th J. Smith this has been to."

"Opened by mistake by the 23rd hundredth J. Smith."

"A man who don't know any better than to address a letter to J. Smith don't know much. There are millions of J. Smiths."

"Maybe they don't have many Smiths up your way, but in Los Angeles there are 17 pages, three columns to the page, of J. Smiths alone J. Smith."

"What's in a name, that which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet. J. Smith."

"Don't mention anything about J. Smith. You are liable to hit from the chief down to the lowest."

Sees End of the World.

Elder John Shields, of the Latter Day Saints, preached recently in London, Ont., at the Latter Day Saints' Church on "Signs of the Times."

Preaching from the 19th verse of the second chapter of Acts: "And I will show wonders in heaven and signs in the earth beneath, blood and fire and vapor of smoke," Elder Shields said that the great forest fires that had been raging for months past, causing dense clouds of smoke that had stopped navigation at some points, was an indication that the end of the world was near at hand. He exhorted all to prepare to meet the Almighty, which would not be long from now.

In conclusion Elder Shields earnestly exhorted all to prepare for the second great coming as the "signs of the times" indicated.

The past season was a record one for scoring in the intercollegiate union,

THE SWORDFISH.

Overlord of the Sea and the Daintiest Feeder That Swims.

The swordfish is the overlord of the sea. Neither the whale, the shark nor any other giant of the deep can conquer him in private fight or public brawl. Nevertheless he is peaceful in the main and seeks the simple life, amusing himself often with worldwide travel and always with delicate gustatory joys. He is the daintiest feeder that swims, always kills his own game and thereby insures its freshness, wherefore his flesh is a delight to the palate of mankind and wherefore, again, men go forth to kill him for market and thereby at times fall upon adventures that make the hunting of tigers and the shooting of grizzlies pale into pastimes for the weary weakling.

For the bold swordfish is still hunted in mode as primitive as that the Eskimo uses to kill the stupid whale, and often the sting of the harpoon changes this luxurious ocean gastronome into a raging water devil, quick to perceive his advantage, charging with the speed of a bullet and the accuracy of a swordsman up against the lone fisherman in the dory who tries to bring him to gaff. Then must the fisherman measure with exactness the lunge of the monster, avoid it by a marvel of nice sidestepping in a plunging dory, or he will be spitted like a lark.—William Inglis in Harper's Weekly.

CHANCES IN GAMBLING.

The Rule of the Unexpected at the Tables in Monte Carlo.

There are systems, some will say, that will defeat the bank at Monte Carlo. I have not found one. Two factors settle all systems. One is the bank's limit, which prevents the doubling system so often advocated; the second, the extraordinary idiosyncrasies of chance. Red or black will often run in long series. I saw fifteen reds come up in succession on one occasion, seventeen uneven numbers in an unbroken series on another. One evening on a losing day I was playing on the first six numbers and persistently for some hours the last twelve numbers invariably turned up. Once I saw 21 come up four times in succession when mathematically it should have taken 144 coups to make it show that number of times, and still more strange that on this occasion each time it came up a gentleman had staked the limit on the number—namely, 180 francs—winning in ten minutes something over 24,000 francs. One readily sees by these instances the unexpected very often happens—in fact, more often that not.—Arthur Hewitt in Bohemian Magazine.

The Hog.

No other animal has been more modified by civilization and none reverts more quickly to the original wild type than the hog. Three generations of running wild suffice to turn the smooth, round, short snouted razorback or hazel splitter thin, lank, leggy, lop eared, sharp snouted, an Ishmael in bristles, running like a deer, if running be possible, fighting as only a wild hog can fight when battle is imperative. The tusks, which have been half obliterated in the process of civilization, get back size and strength. At a year old they are formidable, at two murderous, at three or five more deadly than a sword. They afford a certain index of age up to six years, but are commonly broken in fights long before that time. Wild boars are very ill tempered and when worsted in fighting often revenge themselves by ripping the bark from trees as high as they can reach.

Her Exercise.

Many readers think insufficient exercise is responsible for worrying moods.

"Dare I whisper it," writes one correspondent. "Though I am a married woman, with two bonnie bairns, when my worries and temper prove too much for me I shut myself up in my room and dance a wild Scotch reel. I always did it when I got in a temper as a child as a sort of vent to my feelings, and I do it still and probably shall continue to do so as long as I'm sufficiently energetic."

Certainly a Scotch reel ought to provide enough exercise to exorcise any demon of worry if lack of exercise is the cause of it.

A Bad Quarrel.

"Why don't you try to get him to straighten up?"

"He's his own worst enemy."

"Well?"

"It's pretty hard to patch up that kind of a quarrel."

Describing the Climate.

"Is your climate changeable?" asked the stranger.

"Not very," answered Farmer Corntossel. "It keeps shiftin' around a little till it strikes a kind of weather nobody likes; then it sticks."

Just Like Her.

Hewitt—I didn't know that you lived on the first floor. I understood your wife to say that you lived on the second floor. Jewett—If you knew my wife you would know that she always stretches a story.—Exchange.

They Married.

Trotter (who has been abroad)—So Maud and Charlie finally married? Miss Homer—Yes. Trotter—I suppose they are happy. Miss Homer—Undoubtedly; they each married some one else.—Chicago News.

What do we live for if not to make life less difficult to each other?—George Eliot.

Newcastle has considerably less crime than any other town of its size in England.

LYDIA E.

PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

LYDIA E. PINKHAM

No other medicine for Woman's ills in the world has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

No other medicine has such a record of success for woman's diseases, or such hosts of grateful friends as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for feminine ills, Inflammation, Ulceration, and consequent Spinal Weakness.

It has relieved more cases of Backache and Local Weaknesses than any other one remedy. It dissolves and expels tumors in an early stage of development.

Irregularities and periodic pains, Weakness of the Stomach, Indigestion, Bloating, Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility, quickly yield to it; also deranged organs, causing pain, dragging sensations and backache. Under all circumstances it acts in harmony with the female system.

It removes that wearing feeling, extreme lassitude, "don't care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, irritability, nervousness, dizziness, faintness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy or the "blues." These are indications of Feminine disorders, which this medicine overcomes as well as slight derangement of the Kidneys of either sex.

Women who are sick and want to get well should refuse to accept any substitute for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lord Lyveden's Romantic Career.

The many avocations and adventures of Lord Lyveden, who distinguished himself by being the last to leave the ill-fated Argonaut, have caused him to be called "the rolling stone of the peerage." Before succeeding his uncle in 1900 as third baron, his lordship had been a private soldier in the Royal Artillery, utility actor at the Haymarket, and waiter in a Bowery eating-house. He had been steward on an American coasting-vessel, had toured the States with a fit-up company, and had run a company of his own in England. Later, he owned nurseries of his own planning at Stanwick, Higham Ferrers, and introduced a new tomato knowns by his initials—"P.V."—to gastronomic world. But there was no gold in tomatoes, and shaking Stanwick dust off his feet, Mr. Vernon went to sea again, served as steward on several lines of steamships, incidentally contracting yellow fever at Buenos Ayres, and wound up the romance of his untitled days by three months' catering for the General Steam Navigation Co.

Call It "Settler's Clock."

To the outside world the greatest ornithological oddity in this country is the kookaburra, says The Sydney (Australia) Times. In earlier times it was known as the "settler's clock," from the belief that its joyful paens were vented regularly at morn, noon and dusk, being quiescent through the heat of the forenoon. That belief has long been shattered. The kookaburra laughs just when the fit takes it, particularly when excited; and it laughs as readily at the violent death of its mother-in-law as it does at the enraged settler, when he falls off his hay-stack. A wounded bird makes a demoniacal row, which will bring all others within hearing into the neighboring tree, and these at once set up an echoing cackle that is repeated again and again.

Bell-Ringing Record.

Twelve members of the St. Mary-le-Tower Society of Church Bellringers, Ipswich, England, have succeeded for the first time on record in ringing a peal of Cambridge Surprise Maximus of 5,280 changes in three hours and fifty-seven minutes.

Bank Removal.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—Every bank in Montreal will be on St. James street after the first of February, the last to follow being the Union Bank of Canada, which will occupy the fine premises of the Sovereign Bank, that building having been purchased by the Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London, for $340,000.

Several players have been knocked out of the game at Pittsburg already.

"COURTSHIP OF MILES STANDISH"

Subject of Essay by Miss M. McGrath at Ladies' Literary Meeting---the Programme

On Friday evening the regular fortnightly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St Peter's R.C.S. was held. A short musical programme was given as follows:

Instrumental duet, Misses M Leahy and B Cleary.
Vocal solo, Mr H Quinlan.
Instrumental solo. Miss Lillian Hill.
Instrumental duet, Misses G Lane, and E Noyes.
God Save the King.

Miss Margaret McGrath was the essayist of the evening and gave the audience a splendid review of Longfellow's poem, "The Courtship of Miles Standish." After touching upon the author and the times and circumstances of the poem itself, she told very prettily the love story of the demure Priscilla, loyal John Alden and the bluff Captain Miles. The author's tact guided him to the prettiest tradition of Pilgrim times. He gives us a romantic picture of the Plymouth settlement with its far away round of human life and action, through which the tide of love flowed then as now. It is a pretty story, "remote enough to gather a poetic halo," and yet fresh with sweet humanities, tinged with provincial color, which the poet loved, and full of incidents so true to nature. There are chance pictures of Acadian fields and forests; glimpses too, of picturesque figures; also we note Longfellow's delightful use of Indian names. He possessed the gift of blending the kindred myths of Indian fancy in mellow and artistic simplicity. The pastoral wedding scene at the close is a fine subject for the canvas, as are many other scenes throughout the piece. Another point to be noticed is the frolicsome humor of the tale, here and there lighting up the gloom, that blends with our conception of the Pilgrim enclosure. The Pilgrim Idyl does not show, however, much sympathy on the p of the author, with the ancestral environment but chiefly a perception of what romance and grace there might have been in the good old colony days.

The next paper will be read on December 4th, by Miss McCarthy, who has chosen "Art" as her subject.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

LONDON THEATRE CLOSES ITS DOORS

Bennett's Vaudeville Has Been a Losing Proposition

After a four years' struggle in London, Bennett's Vaudeville Theatre has decided to give up the fight, and the theatre will be closed permanently on Nov. 28. It is said that the theatre has not made a dollar since it was remodelled three seasons ago. That year it lost $5,000. Last season up to the time of closing, which was two months earlier than usual, it dropped $10,000. Thus far this season it has lost its owners $5,000, an average of $500 a week. The people of London have never taken to vaudeville seriously. They appeared to look upon it as a cheap amusement, whereas the acts are very costly. Each show price of admission is low, vaudeville cost between $11,200 and $11,400 per week, exclusive of the house expenses, and these run up to $500 a week on an average.

TEMPERANCE MEETING AT THE CRYSTAL

Last Evening---An Address by Rev. J. R. Webb of Murray St. Church

The Crystal was crowded last evening to hear the address of Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of Murray street Baptist church. The City Temperance League held another of its gospel temperance meetings and the success attending them is manifested by the large number who each evening are unable to get a seat.

The chair last night was taken by Dr. J. E. Middleton, who conducted the opening devotional exercises. Mr. Webb's address was along general temperance lines.

During the evening a vocal duet was given by Mrs. Miller and Miss Clara Kidd, and a vocal solo by Miss N. Pilling.

THEATRICAL

"Divorce"

Read what two of the leading newspapers in the country have to say with reference to the drama "Divorce," which appears at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday evening next;—

Montreal Star;—"Divorce" might perhaps best be characterized as a drama of conscience, the various and widely differing views of three sections of society being focussed in the persons of an atheist, a woman who is drawn back towards her church after giving it up, and a girl Socialist who believes in free union. Upon these three basic ideas is reared a play which the divergent elements are cleverly interwoven into a dramatic fabric.

George P. Goodale in Detroit "Free Press"—"Divorce" is likely to take its place in the list of modern dramas that deserves to be characterized as great. It is intelligently and potentially interpreted by artists of well earned distinction, and it is an intellectural stimulant, in radical contrast to much of the cream-puff drama that surfeits the stage.

ANNUAL MEETING BIBLE SOCIETY

Will be Held in St. Paul's Church To-morrow Evening

The annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Bible Society will be held in St. Paul's church tomorrow (Tuesday) evening, at eight o'clock. One of the features will be an address on the work of the society by Rev. Jesse Gibson, of Toronto. It will be illustrated with limelight views. There should be a large attendance.

LINDSAY LYCEUM CHANGES HANDS

Lindsay, Nov. 21.—The Lyceum theatre, which has been run by Mr. Geo. Brady for the last three months, has been purchased by Mr. Fred Welsman, of Toronto, brother of Mr. A. S. Welsman of town.

Mr. Welsman runs the Crystal Palace on Queen-st., in Toronto, and knows the business thoroughly. The deal was closed yesterday and Mr. Welsman takes charge on Monday morning. The entire building will be remodelled from end to end, and new pictures will be shown every night. He will have a couple of comedians from his Toronto theatre appear every week.

MUSIC YESTERDAY AT CHARLOTTE ST.

The music at Charlotte street Methodist church was especially good. At the morning service the choir rendered the anthem, "Thou Crownest the Year with Thy Goodness." During the offertory a mixed quartette, consisting of Mrs. Hughes, and Miss Lee, and Messrs. Harmer and Browne contributed a selection in a pleasing style.

At the evening service the anthem was "Calvary," with solo by Mrs. Hughes. During the offertory Mr. J. Browne rendered a solo in splendid voice.

ENTERTAINMENT WAS TOO MUCH FOR THEIR FRIEND

A woman whose home is on Crescent street had a rather strange experience on Saturday evening, the effects of which she has not wholly recovered from yet. She was visiting at a friend's home in the north end of the city. During the evening the man of the house brought out his electric battery and sought to entertain his friend by means of it.

The battery was set in working order and the visitor took the handles. Soon the electricity was having its effect. It proved too much for the woman and she fainted away.

Her nervous system had received a severe shock. She was unable to leave her friend's home. Saturday evening or yesterday. The man of the house was put to the inconvenience of going to the woman's house in the south end of the city, at ten o'clock Sunday morning to tell her people that she would be unable to come home. He has decided in the future to seek another means of entertaining his friends.

LAYMEN SPEAK AT MORNING SERVICE AT ST. ANDREW'S

There was a large congregation at St. Andrew's church yesterday morning, and they were treated to addresses by Mr. Wm. Lees and Mr. Clifford, two of the gentlemen who represented Peterborough at the big banquet and convention in Toronto recently in connection with the laymen's missionary movement. Their addresses were the same as were given on Wednesday night, and were illustrated with charts. The congregation was much interested in the Protestant churches and the distribution of the Gospel to the un-Christianized world than has been accomplished in the past two centuries. It will also broaden the thoughts of civilized humanity and will create a more comprehensive appreciation of the real mission of the Church, which in the past has to an almost inconceivable extent, been laboring in a false light. The average man, the man who is considered the backbone of a nation, while he has gone forward in the material world has really no conception of the greater mission which should be considered the privilege of all men, viz., the assisting of the uncivilized and un-Christianized nations to a participation in the pleasures and gratifications of Christianity and civilization that are enjoyed by themselves.

The banquet to be given in the basement of the George street Methodist church is looked forward to with optimism by an energetic band of workers to bring about great results in the way of creating interest in the laymen's missionary movement, and, according to reports, there is little doubt but that St. Andrew's congregation will be found in the first ranks in the way of contributions towards activities in the laymen's movement.

As was stated by some speakers at the Toronto convention, the present movement is the greatest revival that has ever been seen in North America. It is the awakening of the masses to a realization of their obligations, and a continuance of the scheme to a successful climax will accomplish more towards the unification of all classes.

THE BEST CANADIAN
Floor Oilcloth
∴ IN THE TRADE ∴ THIS WEEK 19½c

HERE'S A POINTER

HOW do you know a good oilcloth from a poor one? We will tell you. One way is the thickness of the painted face, the canvas body does not show as plainly on a good cloth as on a poor one, but the sure way is in looking at the back; the cheap cloth has the red ocre back showing every thread in the weave of the canvas, a very unendurable finish giving a foundation to the face that positively will not withstand the wear imposed on it. The best grade cloth has a very substantial back, red as in the former case its true, but painted and filled with the best quality oil paint until the canvas is thoroughly coated and the cloth has a foundation that will last as long as the face of the cloth warrants. Its a simple, easy way of insuring yourself against imposition—do not take a salesman's word for it, that a cloth is of the best grade, just look at the back and you will readily discern whether the back has red rough canvassy appearance or whether it is finished almost as firm as the face.

MUST NOT PUT POISON OUT

Inspector to Prosecute as Result of a Report From Enniamore

London, Nov. 21.—A farmer residing near Ennismore was in town this morning and lodged a complaint with Inspector Bradshaw, and a very serious one at that. It appears that some person or persons, have been the habit during the last year or so, of laying poison along Emily Creek and Pigeon River, in order to catch the roaming fox, thus securing their fur. It is also reported that several dogs have been poisoned, and as it is contrary to law to spread poison, Mr. Bradshaw has decided to prosecute perpetrators. Farmers are trappers should take a warning.

FELL DOWN CELLAR AND WAS PAINFULLY INJURED

Mrs. John Fowler, George street, sustained painful injuries on Saturday evening and had a miraculous escape from being probably fatally injured.

She was in the butcher shop of Mr. Alex. Gordon. After making some purchases she went to the office to make the payment. In the meantime someone had gone down cellar and left the trap door open. On moving away from the office, Mrs. Fowler took a step backwards and into the cellar. She fell with great force upon the cellar floor.

She was carried to her home and Dr. Eastwood was called. Her injuries were not found to be of a serious nature. The back of her head was cut and her left arm was badly bruised.

YOUNG CONSERVATIVE CLUB

The new year bids fair to surpass all records. Messrs. Joe. Detcher, Harold Graham, Percy Graham and W. Chambers, have been added to the rooms and entertainment committee. It is expected and desired that the younger men shall take greater part in the management of the club and its proceedings. The rule that only Conservatives shall be admitted to membership will be strictly enforced. The usual fortnightly lectures, entertainments, smokers and card tournaments will continue to be a feature of the club. A new set of club rules will be drawn up, posted and enforced. It is intended to make the club a desirable palce of recreation in every respect.

GIRLS OF THE COLLEGIATE HAVE FINE PAPER CHASE

The second paper chase of the Girls' Athletic Club of the Collegiate Institute was held on Saturday afternoon, and was exceedingly successful. About forty of the young ladies partipated in the event and thoroughly enjoyed themselves and the exercise. The hares were Misses Denne, Goodenough and Hill and they left the school about three o'clock. The hounds did not go very far before they got on a wrong trail, paper put out by the Y.M.C.A. boys, who had a chase in the morning, leading them astray. They travelled out towards Jackson's Park, while the hares were in the vicinity of Auburn. The girls all straggled back to the Institute about five o'clock.

Afterwards light refreshments were served in one of the rooms of the Collegiate, those in charge being Misses Jean Neil and Mazie Armstrong. They were assisted by Misses Leary, Sherin and Bauer.

Mr. Adams lent valuable assistance in the paper chase.

MR. A. W. TURNER RETURNS FROM VISIT TO TUBERCULOSIS EXHIBIT AT MONTREAL

The Montreal Tuberculosis Exhibition which opened on November 18th and is being held to November 29th is one of the finest institutions of its kind ever held on the continent and has caused a newly awakened and deep interest to be taken in the combating of the dread white plague.

The greatest of public interest is being shown in the exhibit and the attendances at the Auditorium hall, where it is being held are very large. The exhibit is being held under the distinguished patronage of the Governor-General. The idea of the exhibit is to demonstrate the fact that consumption can be cured by rational outdoor and pure air treatment and a diet of eggs and milk. The ravages of consumption which have been so deadly have caused this country and the entire world in fact, to realise that large measures must be taken throughout the civilized world to do something for the victims and to prevent and cure the disease.

Mr A W Turner of the firm of J. J. Turner and Sons, was in Montreal in the interests of the Walsh window tent the ingenious device for which the local firm has the Canadian agency, and remained there for a week, returning Saturday morning. He was very much enthused over the exhibit and states that the enthusiasm and interest was quite general among the thousands who attended the exhibit.

Demonstrations and lectures along different lines were given by competent experts and physicians, cooking classes with Government cooks in charge showing the different dishes that provided the nourishment peculiarly required by consumptive patients. The literature of various sanitariums of Europe, United States and Canada was prominently displayed and discourses were illustrated by descriptive stereoptican views.

The exhibit is in fact, splendidly organised and is being carried on a most comprehensive scale. A feature is the visit each morning of the children of the different schools in Montreal. What they see and hear appeals to them strongly and makes a lasting impression on their minds. There are multitudinous points of interest, which space will not permit dwelling upon. The success of the exhibit is due to the enterprise and energy of the secretary, Dr Fraser B Gurd. Mr Turner said he and all other visitors to the exhibit met with the most courteous treatment at his hands.

Mr Turner is of the opinion that a similar exhibit might be held to great advantage under the auspices of the King's Daughters in Peterborough or some other body of similar character, and full information could be obtained by corresponding with Dr Gurd, who would be pleased to forward literature of the one now being held in Montreal.

The hearty co-operation of others interested in the movement and who helped towards the success of the Royal City exhibit is assured.

The Montreal papers are liberal and earnest in their praise of the project and the following is from the Montreal Gazette;

The evening lecture was delivered by Mrs Newcombe, of New York, who spoke on "Sanatoria and Auxiliary Work," and told, with a simple eloquence that won the admiration of the audience how a noble sanatorium was built from a rummage sale that yielded but $500. Not many who now see the Stonywold Sanatorium, near Lake Kushaqua, in the Adirondacks, would ever imagine that it had, but seven years ago, the humble beginnings of a common shack in the East End of Montreal.

In telling the story of what it now is and how it reached the point of its usefulness Mrs Newcombe said that in 1901 there seemed no place for the working girl afflicted with the dread disease of consumption and being persuaded that something might be done she was spurred on with the idea of doing it herself. With the aid of a few friends a rummage sale was got up and it brought them five hundred dollars. It was no much but it was a start. The next thing to do was to find a site for a building and, after looking round and after a deal of thought and worry as to the success of the undertaking, it was decided to go to Lake Kushaqua. The sympathy as well as money was needed of generous friends, and it was secured with this result that a site of land costing $20,000 was purchased. On it was an old tumble-down hotel, which was rased to the ground, and preparations were made for the erection of the sanatorium. To do that $15,000 was required. The idea was then conceived of forming auxiliaries for different districts, each having a committee. Public meetings were held and the support of prominent citizens, clergymen, and business men was obtained for the object in view. Membership fees were arranged of two, five and ten dollars each, and by hard work and ceaseless planning the money was obtained. It was but seven years since the first rummage sale and in that time the buildings had been erected five years.

The rapidity of putting the plans into effect was marvelled at, as it all showed notable executive ability on the part of the foundress. As an indication of how much faster the conceptions of a few people moved by a common desire of doing good can succeed in materializing their plans beyond those of regularly constituted bodies, the following circumstance was mentioned. At the time of the rummage sale the State of New York had voted $50,000 for a state sanatorium, but by the time its foundations were completed the doors of Stonywold were opened to the suffering working girls of New York City.

Mrs Newcombe, who must has enjoyed exceptional advantages among her friends to raise so much money, told the story of the sanatorium as something she took a delight in for the good it was doing and for nothing else. There was no hint of a triumph except that over disease in this house of health which is unsectarian and is intended for women, and for children of either sex. The sole qualification of the women is that they must be self-supporting. If they are able to pay something so much the better but if they are not able to pay anything it makes no difference in the treatment or the care to nurse them back to health.

At the present time the sanatorium has 99 women and 22 children. Their routine work was described in detail, and it was mentioned by Mrs Newcombe that from her experience in the slums she had decided to abolish table cloths as she had always noticed they were kept dirty, and, of course, unsanitary.

As an indication that something yet remains to be done the lecturer remarked that on her return to New York she intended to organize more auxiliary committees to be made up of working girls.

The remarks were concluded by some fine lantern views of the place at Stonywold and its beautiful surroundings.

Dr Blackader was in the chair and many prominent medical men of Montreal were present at the meeting. At the conclusion of the lecture Mrs Newcombe who is a lady of social standing in New York and whose husband is a prominent specialist, was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for the incentive she had given to any who may wish to imitate her success in Montreal.

Among new color photographs to be shown in London is one of the King in Highland costume.

SERVICES AT SPRINGVILLE

Anniversary of Presbyterian Church Observed Yesterday—Large Congregations Attend

Special anniversary services were held at the Springville Presbyterian church yesterday, large congregations being in attendance at both morning and evening services. Rev. A. R. McLeod, of Brighton, was the preacher, and gave two very interesting and helpful sermons. The thank offering was most satisfactory.

The solos at both services of Miss Heattie, who possesses a pleasing soprano voice, were excellently rendered. Miss Lockwood acted as her accompanist.

"Blacklist" Man is Police Court This Morning—Did Not Know Name of Man Who Gave Him the Liquor

An Ashburnham resident was fined ten dollars at the Police Court this morning, having pleaded guilty to being drunk after having been put on the black list. It will be remembered that he appeared before the Magistrate a week ago and his Worship reserved judgment for a week. He could not disclose the name of the man who had supplied him with the liquor, he stating he did not know it. It was given him on George street.

THE CHRISTMAS "ROD AND GUN"

Full of good things is the December (Christmas Number) of "Rod and Gun, and Motor Sports in Canada," published by W. J. Taylor, at Woodstock, Ont. A specially written and finely illustrated account of the trip taken in the woods by the Premier and Surveyor-General of New Brunswick, at the invitation of the organized guides of the Province, opens an exceptionally good number, the high standard of which is maintained throughout. Sportsmen of all classes may be recommended to the well written and informative article on the Importance of Taxidermy. Ancient Indian customs is a fine reminder of the difficulties of the Indians experienced in the matter of obtaining a living before the advent of the white man to the North American Continent. Physical Culture at Home is the first of a series of articles by an expert on a subject which cannot fail to interest all sportsmen. In the Spirit of the North will be found some fine verses, every line appealing with strong force to every lover of the wild, but attractive north country. These are but samples of the many good things dealing with every phase of sport in Canada, to be found between the covers of a number surpassing in both quantity and quality the best yet given by this leading Canadian Magazine. The illustrations are specially notable and attractive in this fine Christmas issue.

BURRIDGE AND FITZPATRICK MEET TO-MORROW NIGHT

It Looks Quite a Proposition To Pick the Winner—Both in the Condition of Their Lives—A Comparison of the Principals

To-morrow night at the roller rink a wrestling match that has long been looked forward to will take place when Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick will meet in a bout that promises to draw a capacity house. Fitzpatrick has been seen on the mat before local audiences on two occasions this year and on both occasions he has landed the victory. His first bout was a half hour go with Jack Crough who suffered the first defeat of his career outside the Canadian championship bouts, Fitzpatrick getting a fall on him in about 15 minutes or more. Fits then met the husky local boy, Jack Wilson, whom he was to throw twice in fifteen minutes. He got the first fall in 1 1-2 minutes and the second with two minutes to spare. He has been working out regularly since then with Young Hackenschmidt, who has given him invaluable instruction in aggressive and defensive work, and besides that has put him into the very best of condition.

Burridge, on the other hand, has not neglected his training. He has been going through the drill daily with different men and is in shape for a battle of indefinite length. There is no doubt about the fact that he is considerably stronger than Fitz, and is a hard man to hold on his shoulders for the required time. He is held in regard locally since the time he put it all over Geo. Gauthier in quick fashion. He will be a mighty big handful for Fits to handle.

As the main preliminary Young Hackenschmidt will try to throw five men in ten minutes and the other fixture will be a six round bout between Lillie and Guerin.

The rink will be comfortably heated and seating for 1500 will be provided.

DR. McPHERSON RECOGNIZED FOR HIS FAITHFUL SERVICE

At the annual meeting of the OHA at Temple Building, Toronto, Saturday morning tribute was paid to Dr. A. W. Macpherson of this city for his faithful work in connection with his official capacity as treasurer of the association.

A despatch says:

It was moved by Mr. Duff, seconded by Mr Robertson,

"That the Ontario Hockey Association in annual convention assembled desires to place on record its high appreciation of the services of Dr. A W Macpherson as treasurer of the association and regret that circumstances have rendered it advisable on his part to no longer accept office in the association. Mr. Macpherson has been treasurer from 1903-04 until today and his work has been of a most superior quality and he has played his own part in creating the gratifying success of the OHA. The OHA will never have a more careful, efficient and reliable treasurer than Dr Macpherson. And that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes."

It was carried unanimously.

MATCH BETWEEN ROGERS AND TURK A ONE-SIDED AFFAIR

The Montreal Star says,—The wrestling match which took place last night at Sohmer Park was a one-sided affair. The big Turk Yousouf Mahmout, won two straight falls from Yankee Rogers in 20 minutes, bouts lasted nine and eleven minutes respectively. From the very beginning, when the two men made their appearance on the mat, it was easily seen that Yankee Rogers was not the man to be pitted against the Turk. As soon as the gong sounded the struggle began with lightning rapidity. The Turk was like a whirlwind running around Rogers and bewildering him with a series of holds which Rogers had a very hard time time to escape. Suddenly about three minutes after the bout had started, Rogers was lifted fairly off his feet and thrown down fair on the two shoulders, but as the fall occurred outside the mat, the two had to be brought back to the centre of the ring again. After twisting the American in all kinds of dangerous positions, the Turk finally secured a crotch hold, while under Rogers, reversed himself and landed him flat on his back. Quickly covering him he had then only to force his shoulders to the mat.

During the beginning of this bout, Rogers got very much excited and used his fists several times to withstand the attacks which were made on him, but Referee Gadbois warned him against such foul measures.

The second round was a very interesting one, inasmuch as the Turk used many holds which were never seen in any wrestling match at Sohmer Park before. He also proved that he could very easily escape the so much dreaded toe-hold. Many times Rogers, who can use this hold to great advantage, caught the naked ankle of the Turk and seemed to have a very firm grip on it, but after an effort Mahmout without the least sign of pain, got out of the hold. During the last minute of the bout, things were carried with such rapidity that Rogers hardly knew where to look for his opponent. Mahmout once secured a hold on him from behind and carrying him head downwards on his back, whirled him around three or four times, and then let him drop to the mat. Rogers got up but instead of standing stayed in a kneeling position. The Turk then lifted him again and forced him to his feet. All at once with a bellow, Mahmout rushed Rogers, caught him by the waist and hooking his ankle sent him flying down to the mat. Rogers' shoulders fell flat to the mat. He succeeded in lifting one of them but in a flash the Turk was on him and his shoulders went down for the second time.

The Turk was very much applauded by the crowd after his victory. He weighed about 212 pounds last night, having an advantage of some five pounds over Yankee Rogers. The latter, who has been suffering from boils recently claimed that his defeat was largely due to the pain occasioned by these, and which prevented him from using his right arm to any advantage.

After the match, Dr. Gadbois read a challenge from the Turk, open to any wrestler in the world, more particularly the Champion, Frank Gotch.

The other Montreal papers all say the Turk's victory was an easy one. Comprehensive reports appear in the French dailies of Montreal, La Patrie and La Presse. The former states that Mahmout made a "plaything of Rogers."

FINAL GAME FOR LINDSAY

In all probability, now that Brockville has defaulted to Lindsay, the winner of the Capital-Eureka game at Toronto today will play off with Lindsay in the finals for the championship of the junior ORFU, at Lindsay on Saturday next, Nov. 28th. A letter intimating this decision was received in Lindsay last evening and if the final game is to be played in Lindsay it is expected that a large crowd of enthusiastic supporters from Toronto, also rooters from Peterborough, and other adjoining vicinities will be present to witness the struggle.—Lindsay Warder.

Toronto Varsity's hockey prospects are very bright

WILL BRING OUT FAST REDMAN

Rumor Has it That Fred Whitcroft Will Make His Debut as Foot Runner Promoter

A Toronto despatch says:

Fred Whitcroft, the Peterborough hockey player, now of Edmonton, who was one of the men behind Fred Simpson when the first jumped into the running game, has another Indian in view for the racing game next season

He is Fred Fraser, an Arctic Circle Indian who does 200 miles a week, week in and week out, the year around, with a dog team carrying the mails north from Fort Chippewan Islands

"Fraser is a big fellow, like Fred Simpson but better built," said Whitcroft while on his way through Toronto with the nucleus of the Edmonton hockey team for the Stanley Cup series. "He won the only two races he ever entered. In the first he did 10 miles in 61 minutes running in moccasins. I saw him do five miles over a sandy track, with a grand stride, and he is tireless. He is 21 years of age, and should be right for the Hamilton race next fall. We will win that Herald Cup yet for the West.

Whitcroft does not know much about Acoos, the other Western Indian wonder.

WILL HAVE A BUSY SEASON

There will be doings a-plenty in the wrestling line before the spring rolls around again. Tom Jenkins and Yussif Mahmout, the Bulgarian are to meet in New York Thanksgiving night. The Bulgarian who always wrestles in his bare feet, is a crack mat artist and will give the former champion a hard go. Frank Gotch, who is over on the other side, is to meet Hackenschmidt once more. This match should prove a corker. Hack has an old grudge to settle with Gotch and may be expected to put forth Herculean efforts to down the American. The Russian was not at all pleased with the rough treatment he received at the hands of Gotch, in their last meeting and will take good care that the American will not repeat these tactics in their next encounter.

A mat artist who is built on powerful lines is Oscar Wassem. Wassem hails from Des Moines, Iowa, which State has developed some good wrestlers, among them Champion Frank Gotch. Wassem is a heavyweight and is after matches with wrestlers in this class. He has great strength and is ambitious to become champion.

WRESTLING

Fred Beel won the catch as catch can wrestling match at the Empire theatre, Chicago, from Dan McBride, of Canada, scoring in straight falls. He took the first bout with a half-Nelson and grapevine hold in 10.10 and the second in 8.20 with a bar arm and scissor hold.

The London Daily Mirror says:—Frank Gotch, the American wrestler, who defeated Hackenschmidt in their sensational match at Chicago, has arrived in London on his mission to secure another meeting with the famous Russian.

Gotch has, of course, not yet forgotten the charges of unfair wrestling made against him by Hackenschmidt. "In Chicago, after the match," said Gotch last night to the Daily Mirror, "Hackenschmidt admitted he had been fairly and squarely beaten. It was not until he reached New York that he made the charges that have apparently put me in bad favor with the English public.

"At the same time, I have no personal grievance at all against Hackenschmidt. I admire him as a great wrestler, and it is now left to him to meet me again or confirm his defeat by evading me. Before I go back I want the English public to have a better opinion of me than they gained from the ravings of New York journalists.

"After my music-hall engagement, which terminates in January, I want to meet the Russian as soon as he likes. Then I am prepared to meet any of the continental wrestlers—Ebyssi, Lemm, or anyone else—for any side stake they care to put up."

Gotch is a catch-as-catch-can wrestler, and claims to be no champion of other styles. He regards Graeco-Roman wrestling as a mere test of strength, and asserts that very few wrestlers endeavor to introduce any intelligence into their work. "I am constantly thinking and attempting to perform new locks, and I am now proficient in four leg-locks of which no other wrestler, so far as I know, has any knowledge.

"Hackenschmidt is not a brainy wrestler. In our match it was nearly always obvious what he was attempting to do. The toe-hold he was absolutely ignorant of, and he was very much surprised at its success. This hold I originated."

Gotch is 5 feet 11 1-2 inches in height, 3 inches taller than Hackenschmidt, and he has also an advantage in weight. He is a fine example of the muscular American, and neither drinks nor smokes. He has not before visited England, and makes his debut at the New Cross Empire next week. He is to be the hero of a sketch entitled "All About a Bout," in which he wrestles for five minutes.

The American's visit means another boom in wrestling this winter in England. It is to be hoped that Hackenschmidt will accept the challenge, for he is still a great favorite, and English people are very anxious to see just how good Gotch is.

The death occurred at Dover recently of Mr. M. Morgan, who was the 100 yards champion of England in 1890 and 1896. He was also twice Northern Counties 100 yards champion.

RUGBY MEETING POSTPONED UNTIL A WEEK FROM TO-DAY

An organization meeting of the Peterborough Rugby Club was in the Y.M.C.A. parlors, but on account of President R. F. McWilliams and Secretary J. D. Clarke being out of the city, it has been postponed until next Monday evening, when it will be held at eight o'clock at the Y.M.C.A.

The meeting will be a most important one, and it is necessary for the satisfactory transaction of the business that will come up that there be a full attendance of all interested.

The question of organizing an O.R.F.U. team for next year will be taken up and also the one of forming a City League.

FORMER LOCAL PITCHER HERE AFTER 3 YEARS ABSENCE

The numerous friends of Mr. Dan McCabe, the former pitcher of the Peterborough ball club, in the days when he held sway and won the admiration of the fans at the old P.A.A.A. grounds, is in the city on a visit from Brantford, after an absence of three years. He is in the employ of the Canadian Machine Telephone Co.

"Dan," as he is familiarly known by in local sporting circles, has not been devoting as much attention to ball as he used to, but this year he twirled for Brantford in a league of four teams and his nine was successful in winning the championship of the league. He worked at night and was thereby enabled to get off in the daytime to play ball.

HANDICAP TOURNAMENT AT MAJESTIC BOWLING ALLEYS

Commencing to-morrow night, and continuing throughout the week, a handicap bowling tournament will be given at the Majestic Bowling Alleys. Six five-men teams have expressed their intention of competing, and the number may be increased to eight or ten.

Two teams will play each evening, and the idea of the handicap is to give those bowlers who have not the advantage of having such experienced players on their line-up as their opponents, will have some chance to make good in the contest.

The holding of the tournament has been anticipated for some time. Quite an interest is being taken in it by local bowlers, and some good games are sure to be played. Suitable trophies for the successful bowlers will be given.

GENERAL HOCKEY MEETING SHOULD BE CALLED IN PETERBORO' AT EARLY DATE

Nothing is being done towards the formation of a hockey team in Peterborough to be entered in the O.H.A. The Chieftains will have a team in the junior series, but the entrance of the Chieftains means the representation of that club alone, and not of the junior players of the city. Is nothing going to be done to foster the hockey spirit in this city?

Peterborough has the name of being the best hockey town of its size in the province, and it doesn't seem right that it shouldn't have a junior intermediate seven in the O.H.A. this winter. From the appearance of things, there are several fast juniors in the city outside of the Chieftains, and an aggregation of ability could probably be organized if a general hockey meeting were called and a thorough discussion of the prospects held. Definite steps could then be taken. If the juniors this year are neglected some will be too old next year for the junior series and after being a season out of the game, will not be so keen as if they had an opportunity to stay right along.

And there is a possibility of an intermediate seven being gotten together also. At any rate a meeting should be held at the earliest date just to see where the town stands in hockey matters.

ACROBAT WILL WRESTLE HACK

Holloway Formerly With Ringling's Will be One of the Five to Face Him To-morrow Night

The Two Holloways, the acrobatic marvels, and formerly topliners with Ringling Bros. circus are appearing at the roller rink all this week. On account of the Burridge-Fitzpatrick bout they will be unable to hold the boards tomorrow evening and the heavier one of the team has offered to go on against Young Hackenschmidt who is out with an offer to throwing five local men in ten minutes. Holloway is a husky fellow of 190 pounds and does some amazing acrobatic stunts, requiring great strenght. He also knows the catch as catch can wrestling game and may spring a surprise on Hack.

YOUNG HACKENSCHMIDT
The Heavyweight Who Tackles Five Men To-morrow Night—Among Them is Holloway the Heavyweight Acrobat.

The latter when asked if he would meet him said, "My proposition only calls for local men but bring Holloway and I will take him on."

CHAMPIONSHIPS GO TO OTTAWA

Ottawa, Nov. 21—The annual wrestling championships of the CAAU., have been awarded to Ottawa and will be held here in March. This announcement was made yesterday by Mr Percy Lee, physical director of the YMCA. and who is also secretary-treasurer of the Eastern Canada Athletic Association. This meet will bring together a great collection of mat artists in all the different classes. The bouts will be held in the new YMCA building if the "gym" is ready in time. If not a building will be rented for the occasion.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario are located the curasaline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where treatments for nervous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and all particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

SOME CHANGES IN SCHEDULE

B.A.C. --- Gutterson Game Postponed Until Saturday Evening

There has been a slight change in the schedule of the Peterborough Ten [illegible] and the opening game this evening will be between the Lock Works and Hanrahan's team, instead of Gutterson vs BAC. as called for in the original schedule. This latter game has been postponed until Saturday.

Starting next Monday the schedule as published last week will be rigidly adhered to.

The programme for this week is as follows:

Monday, Lock Works vs Hanrahan.
Tuesday, Belmonts vs Lang.
Wednesday, Examiner vs Bankers.
Thursday, Martin vs McIlroy.
Friday, CGE. vs Quakers.
Saturday, Gutterson vs BAC.

Watch Springs.

The watch carried by the average man is composed of ninety-eight pieces, and its manufacture embraces more than 2,000 distinct and separate operations.

Hairspring wire weighs one-twentieth of a grain to the inch. One mile of wire weighs less than half a pound.

The balance gives five vibrations every second, 200 every minute, 18,000 every hour, 432,000 every day and 157,680,000 every year.

The value of springs when finished and placed in watches is enormous in proportion to the material from which they are made. A ton of steel made up into hairsprings when in watches is worth more than twelve and one-half times the value of the same weight in pure gold.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL

Health Saving Explained by a Peterborough Citizen Who Knows From Experience.

Many Peterborough people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help.

Sick kidneys are responsible for a great amount of suffering and ill health

The reason so many use Booth's Kidney Pills is their quick relief for all kidney weakness. Here is what a Peterborough citizen says;

Mrs. George Hawes, of 357 Water St. Peterborough, says:

"I had suffered for some time with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble and although I had tried many remedies and doctors I found little or no relief. My back was weak and a dull, bearing down pain settled across the small of it and extended into my shoulders and around my sides. I was weak and languid and the least exertion would tire me out. Dizzy spells were frequent and often I would awake with a severe headache. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at McDermid and Jury's pharmacy. I soon found them to benefit me and continued their use. In a comparatively short time I was as well and strong as ever and without a symptom of the painful and long-standing disease."

The Ghost of Lochrain Castle

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson—Author of "The Princess Passes," "The Lightning Conductor," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY MRS. C. N. WILLIAMSON

Elspeth had brought a novel, and she tried to absorb herself in it, as the train rushed her on toward exciting new experiences; but the talk of her traveling companions would entangle itself with that of the characters in the book.

"It was such a pleasant surprise to hear, after we had made up our minds to go to Lochrain, that you were going," said Lady Lambart. "I couldn't resist writing you a line, when I heard you were at the Carlton, to ask if there were any chance of your traveling by our train. Then, when I didn't get an answer"——

"I was away from town all yesterday, and only found your note when I got back to the hotel at midnight, too late to wire; but of course I sent a messenger the first thing this morning"——

"We must have already left. It is such a long drive, you know, and Hilary and I have heaps of luggage. But all's well that ends well. Who would have dreamed of your going to Lochrain? I thought of it because the air is so good, and it's been such a tiring season that it will be more restful for us both than a round of Scotch visits."

"I think I'm in great luck," said Mr. Kenrith.

"You poor fellow, I suppose you really do think so," mused Elspeth. "'Surprised,' indeed! I wonder she dared say that, after what she must have known I heard when I first got into the carriage. What a scene there would be if I told!"

This idea struck her sense of humor so comically that she almost laughed aloud; but nobody was paying any attention to her. Kenrith looked her way occasionally, to be sure, but not curiously to see if she were listening. He was not saying anything that he need mind all the world hearing; and his glances toward Elspeth expressed only the interest that a warm-hearted man of an unusually kind and sympathetic nature would feel in a pretty young woman traveling alone, almost shabbily dressed, when her beauty ought to have been set off by charming things, such as Lady Hilary Vane wore. If he thought of her consciously, it was to say to himself: "Poor child! Girls like her have a right to everything that's brightest and best in the world. What an awful shame they can't all have it."

"You must have had dozens of invitations for this month and next," remarked Lady Lambart.

"I had a few, but I'm not much of a hand for visiting," replied the millionaire modestly. "I know the man who has turned the old castle of Lochrain into a hotel. Indeed, I was able to help him a little, as he's a good fellow, and deserves success. That's one reason I'm going, and another is, I thought it would be a good quiet place for me to try my hand at writing a book I've had in mind for some time; a dull thing you'd think it, but interesting to me; a new idea in socialistic schemes I want to work out."

"You are always thinking of others," exclaimed Lady Lambart.

"I'm afraid I don't forget myself," smiled Kenrith. "I've just been making myself a big present. You know the Radepolskio diamond? Well, I've got it—got it on me at this moment, if you"——

"Oh, Mr. Kenrith, you forget, walls have ears, even walls of railway carriages!" cried Lady Lambart. "You oughtn't to speak out such state secrets, except when you are quite, quite alone, with your most trusted friends, and even then in a whisper."

Kenrith laughed. "I rather think I'm able to look after my property. This isn't the first jewel I've carried about, and even now it isn't the only one I——"

"You really mustn't," she broke in. "You must send your valuables to be locked safely up in a bank directly we arrive at our journey's end, or I shall not have an easy moment by night or by day."

"You are very kind, to take an interest," said the millionaire.

Elspeth's ears tingled. "She said before I was of no more consequence than a servant, and now she takes me for a spy—or a thief," the girl thought. "I hope I don't look like either; but then, I suppose, it is imprudent of him to talk like that."

She remembered that among other things she had read of John Kenrith was the fact that he collected rare jewels, his one piece of self-indulgence. Now she had no longer a doubt of the identity of this Mr. Kenrith.

"By the way, you'll find another friend at Lochrain," remarked the Lancashire man, changing the subject. "Captain Oxford, whom I happened to run across a day or two ago, told me he was starting last night and meant to spend a fortnight or longer at the hotel. That old wound in his arm is troubling him, it seems, and he thought the Hydro—"

"How very vexatious!" exclaimed Lady Lambart.

Her tone was so tremulous with surprise and annoyance that Elspeth glanced up in spite of herself.

Lady Hilary's lovely face was scarlet, and, though her big violet eyes were gazing at the flying landscape, Elspeth was to feminine not to be sure the girl felt the angry, suspicious flash her mother's eyes darted at her. The atmosphere of the carriage had suddenly become mysteriously electric.

"I thought he was a friend of yours," said Kenrith, innocently.

"Not at all. I consider him a most undesirable young man," returned Lady Lambart. "I hope, dear Mr. Kenrith, if he tries to force himself upon us at Lochrain, as he is almost sure to, that you will help me to—er—keep him in his place."

"What is his place?" Kenrith asked bluntly. "He's an officer and a gentleman, and a very good fellow as well as a brave one. That's my opinion of him."

"Well enough, from a man's point of view," said Lady Lambart, more gently. "But I'm a woman, and Hilary is a young girl, with no one to watch over us. We must be careful. Captain Oxford is dreadfully pushing, and of course he is nobody."

"So am I nobody."

"How like you to say that! But you had a name, even before you made it, whereas Oxford isn't his name, you know, or Laurence either. Really, old Miss Laurence, who adopted him when he was a wretched little foundling in some foreign place or other where she was visiting, gave him his surname because she lived in Oxford. And he hasn't a penny except the few wretched hundred a year she left him. I wonder how he manages to scrape along in the army——"

"It's much to his credit that he's got on so finely," said Kenrith.

"In his profession, yes; but of course he could never dream of marrying, at all events, any girl in the station to which he seems to aspire," replied Lady Lambart.

Elspeth began to feel as if she had got into a story book far more interesting than the one she was trying to read. "What will they do when they see me at Lochrain?" she wondered. But she soon decided that the Countess of Lambart was not a woman to care much for the opinion or thoughts of a humble typist, even if she remembered that she had seen the face before.

The journey did not seem long to the girl, for her brain teemed with all sorts of interesting fancies, from the beginning to the end. The station at which passengers descended for Lochrain Castle Hydropathic Hotel was that of a small town, popular among tourists, and so there was no reason why it should occur to her fellow travelers that her destination was the same as theirs. Lochrain was five or six miles distant, and Elspeth saw her three late companions go away in a very smart motor car, so exactly like several others at the station that she guessed that they were sent by the management of the hotel. There were evidently a number of other guests for the new and fashionable Hydro, and eight or ten of their maids and valets departed in a bunch in a big motor omnibus. Everything was so quickly done that Elspeth had not time to wonder what was to become of her, before a voice spoke her name.

"Are you Miss Dean, engaged as secretary for Lochrain Hydro?"

"Yes," said Elspeth, turning quickly, to see, not a servant, but a pale-faced, black-eyed young man, very well dressed in dark blue serge.

"I am Mr. Grant, Mr. McGowan's assistant," he announced, with his hat off. "Mr. McGowan wished me to meet and drive you back, so that on the way I might prepare you for some of your duties, and save time."

"It will be very kind of you," said the girl.

"I shall be glad to help you in any way I can," he answered, and looking up, Elspeth caught a flash in the dark, deepset eyes which contradicted the white coldness of the face.

"I wonder whether I'm going to like Mr. Grant or not!" she thought. The look in his eyes told her that the pale man was not unaware of the fact that she was a pretty girl.

The drive to Lochrain was a wild and beautiful one, but Miss Smith's eulogiums had not half prepared her for the magnificence of the place itself.

"Why, it's like a great castle, and has the air of being hundreds and hundreds of years old!" she exclaimed in intense admiration, when the dogcart Mr. Grant drove had passed through a park, and brought them into sight of a huge, gray stone pile on a slight grassy elevation. But even before her companion replied, she remembered how Mr. Kenrith had spoken of "turning the old castle into a hotel."

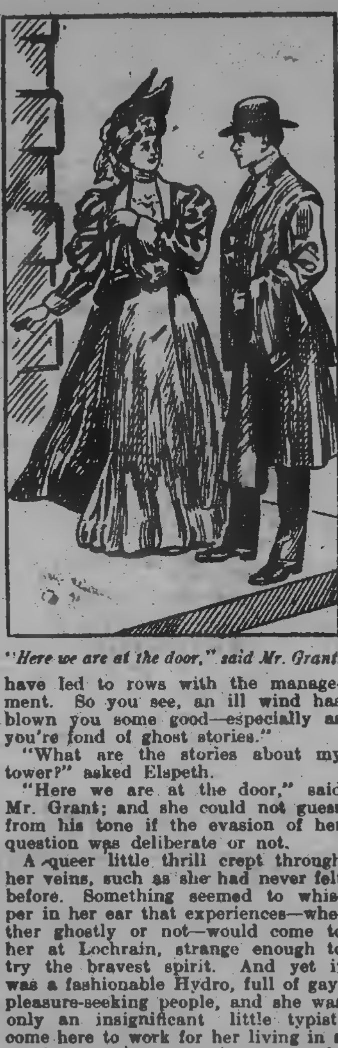
"How delightful," the girl went on. "This is even better than I expected. It's always been my dream to live in a place like this. I do hope it's haunted?"

Mr. Grant smiled rather grimly.

"There are more gruesome stories told about Lochrain as it used to be in the past than about almost any of the feudal houses, which is saying a good deal, especially in Scotland. Aren't you afraid of ghosts?"

"Not in the least. I don't believe in them, though I love ghost stories dearly," she said.

"Very well, then. I'll tell you what I wouldn't have told you otherwise. It will no doubt please you to hear that your room is in the 'haunted tower,' as it used to be called. The Hydro is crammed for the season, and if you hadn't been put there, you would have had to be tucked away in an attic. You'll find the room a nice one, so nice that Mr. McGowan would have had to keep it for guests, if it hadn't been for the ugly old stories which, if any one got to know—as they most certainly would one way or another—would have led to rows with the management. So you see, an ill wind has blown you some good—especially as you're fond of ghost stories."



"Here we are at the door," said Mr. Grant.

"What are the stories about my tower?" asked Elspeth.

"Here we are at the door," said Mr. Grant; and she could not guess from his tone if the evasion of her question was deliberate or not.

A queer little thrill crept through her veins, such as she had never felt before. Something seemed to whisper in her ear that experiences—whether ghostly or not—would come to her at Lochrain, strange enough to try the bravest spirit. And yet it was a fashionable Hydro, full of gay, pleasure-seeking people, and she was only an insignificant little typist, come here to work for her living in a prosiac way, at two guineas a week. Reason said that imagination was flying away with her good sense; and yet the thrill and the presentiment remained.

CHAPTER II.

Elspeth had only just time to be impressed with the magnificence of the great stone-pillared hall, with its vast fireplace, its tapestries and its ancient armor, when she was led down a connecting corridor into a small room, where she found herself in Mr. McGowan's presence.

He was a clever-looking, middle-aged man, evidently a gentleman, with a worried, over-worked air, and such kind eyes that Elspeth did not wonder the millionaire had liked and wished to help him in his ambitious venture.

"But you are a mere child," was his first exclamation on seeing the new stenographer. Still he did not seem wholly disappointed in her appearance, Elspeth could not help thinking, and when, to prove what she could do, she had taken down a few rapidly dictated sentences, without an instant's delay or hesitation, he expressed himself satisfied.

"You will do very well, Miss Dean," he said pleasantly. "To-morrow morning your work will begin. What remains of to-day you will have to yourself; but some time this evening, when you are rested after your journey, I should like you to come here again, to learn what your work is to be."

"I am not tired," said Elspeth lightly. "I should be glad to hear everything now, unless you prefer"——

"That will be better, if you are equal to it. Well, from 9 in the morning till 10.30 I shall be obliged if you will be at my disposal here, to answer letters, as Mr. Grant is engaged then, and can only help me in the evening. From 10.30 until 12.30 I have promised your services to Mr. Kenrith, who has arrived to-day; that is, I wired him I would have an efficient stenographer to work with him, which was the principal reason why I wanted you in such a hurry."

"I beg your pardon, may I come in?" asked a voice at the door, which was slightly ajar. It was a man's voice, and spoke with a marked American accent.

"Come in, Mr. Trowbridge," replied the manager politely, and a person of striking appearance entered; a man of thirty-two or three, perhaps, tall, clean-shaven, with thick, fair hair parted in the middle, dark brows, and black-lashed, narrow, yet bold, gray eyes. He was handsome, exceedingly well dressed, with an air of wealth and prosperity which was almost aggressive. His glance dwelt for a few seconds with flattering admiration upon shabby little Elspeth; yet the girl was ungrateful enough not to like the newcomer.

"So sorry to interrupt, but I'm badly in need of your help, Mr. McGowan," said he, laughing in a friendly way. "I'm a busy man, and can't let everything slide, even up here, while I'm taking a vacation. My correspondence has run miles ahead of me. Can you recommend anybody in the neighborhood who can write pretty well from dictation?"

"This young lady will be able to help you, I think. She has just come to act as my secretary, but I can spare her for some hours a day to guests of the hotel who want her services."

"What an odd coincidence, and a lucky one for me. Introduce me, please," said Mr. Trowbridge; and the stenographer should have been more than ever flattered thus to be intentionally (no doubt that it was intentionally) raised to a footing of social equality by a young and handsome man, evidently a person of importance in the world.

Mr. McGowan obeyed, and Mr. Trowbridge made himself agreeable to Miss Dean, looking at her with an expression which seemed to say, "What a surprising thing to find such a pretty girl in your position. I admire you immensely, and want you to like me."

Still, Elspeth did not like him. "There's something that doesn't ring true," she said to herself. And she did not believe that it was a coincidence that Mr. Trowbridge had happened to ask for a secretary, at the very moment when she had arrived. She had an idea that he had come to Mr. McGowan's door with some other object, that he had overheard a word or two of the conversation, and had taken his cue from it. Still, even if she were right in the surmise she had to remind herself there was no great harm in what Mr. Trowbridge had done. Probably the man must want help with his correspondence, for she was not such a radiant beauty that he should invent a need solely as an excuse for enjoying her society for an hour each day. Such things might happen in novelettes, but not in real life; and in any case Mr. Trowbridge could hardly have seen her face through the crack of the door before putting his question to Mr. McGowan.

In five minutes it was settled that Miss Dean should work for the newcomer for an hour a day. She was to go to his private sitting-room from six o'clock till seven each evening. "That time's to be mine from now," he said. "If some days I shouldn't need you, why if you don't mind I'll lend you to a friend; lots of people, ladies especially, would be only too thankful to get a few notes written for them while they are resting on their sofas between tea and dinner; but I don't believe I shall be able to spare you often."

Mr. Trowbridge was to pay the management seven shillings and sixpence an hour for the privilege of Miss Dean's assistance, and Elspeth began to see that it was not entirely from motives of philanthropy that the guests of Lochrain Castle Hydro were to be supplied with the services of a stenographer. The appointments already made for her would put seventeen shillings and sixpence daily, except on Sundays, into the pockets of the management, and doubtless it would eventually work out to more. In this way, Mr. McGowan would get all the help he had from her for nothing, while the hotel made money out of the arrangement besides. But this did not matter to the girl. She was more than satisfied with her two guineas a week, her beautiful surroundings, and the prospect of an interesting and exciting life.

"Mr. Trowbridge is an American millionaire," explained the manager, when he and Elspeth were alone together again. "He's only been here a few days, but he has already made himself very popular—a man with a magnetic way, just goes about and talks to people; when they've known him ten minutes they feel as if it might have been ten years. All the ladies like him, especially a certain countess; and if, as he says, he lends you to some of his friends, at his expense, you'll probably get a good deal of amusement out of your job. You will know more than anyone else in the hotel about Mr. Trowbridge's flirtations, and I prophesy that hour between tea and dinner won't be dull. Mr. Kenrith is also a millionaire, as you know, I suppose; but he is a very different sort of man. He doesn't go in for nonsense, and your work with him will be work."

"You seem to have plenty of millionaires," said Elspeth.

Mr. McGowan smiled. "We are fashionable and successful," said he contentedly. "I have sometimes thought, since our season began, what a rich haul jewel thieves could make if—" he checked himself and frowned, as if annoyed at his own garrulousness with a girl who was, after all, a stranger. "But," he added more slowly, "we're well prepared for such emergencies, and there isn't a professional in Great Britain or Europe clever enough to get away with so much as a hat-pin from this house. And by-the-by, talking of rich people, you will give your time from two to three to Lady Ardcliff—the peeress who fancies that she's a poetess, you know. From three to four-thirty we will keep open for extras and emergency work. Then you will have an hour to yourself, for tea and a walk, and your evenings will be your own. Now I need not see you again until nine to-morrow morning. Your luggage will be in your room, and the housekeeper shall show you the way. You'll like it, I think; and I fancy you will prefer having your meals there."

"Oh, yes, thank you," Elspeth cried quickly, with visions of nice books to read while she ate near some window that gave on a beautiful view.

"Everything is settled, then," said Mr. McGowan, with the relieved sigh of a very busy man, "except that I may add, your salary will be paid at the end of each week."

As he spoke he touched an electric bell near his desk, and the youth in smart livery who almost immediately appeared was sent off post haste to call the housekeeper.

"I do hope she is a kind creature," Elspeth thought, "for I suppose I shall be a good deal at her mercy."

But the first glimpse of plump Mrs. Warden, with her pink cheeks, her white hair under a lace cap, and her rustling black silk frock—for all the world like a housekeeper in some great nobleman's house—was reassuring. She smiled on the newcomer, and volunteered, as the guests of the Hydro would be dressing for dinner to show Miss Dean something of the house, on their way to the tower-room.

It seemed to Elspeth that she had strayed into a wonderful story book. She had never seen anything like Lochrain Castle, and could hardly realize that it was a hotel. There were drawing rooms, and reading-rooms, and writing-rooms, and conservatories to see, and stories to hear of what each had been in the past; for Mrs. Warden had known the place when it had belonged to Lord Lochrain. "Poor old man, he's dead now; died of grief over the ruin of the family fortune," sighed the housekeeper, "as if his own private sorrows were not enough! He went before there was any idea of turning the Castle into a hotel, or that would have killed him, for sure, such, such a proud man he was, thinking all the world of his family history, and the part his people and their house had played in the past. Lochrain was a great name in old days, miss; and the Marquises of Lochrain were among the highest in Scotland. But for the last hundred years or more their fortunes have been going down. Superstitious folk said it was because an old family prophecy was being fulfilled; but that's a long story; never mind it now. The poor old Marquis died, and the new one is a distant cousin, quite a common man on one side, who would never have inherited if it hadn't been for an awful thing that happened in the old lord's immediate family, a good many years ago.

"It was this new man sold the castle to Mr. McGowan, or rather to some rich gentlemen Mr. McGowan influenced to buy it for a hotel, and to make him manager. Young Lord Lochrain—though not so very young (except as compared with the old lord), was glad to get rid of the place, it was in such awful repair, and he'd nothing to keep it up with, so he sold it for a song, and all the old family portraits, and tapestry, and armor. It did seem a cruel shame. Luckily for him, though, they didn't want the whole estate, only just the park, as pleasure grounds for the hotel guests, and Lord Lochrain was obliged to keep the rest. But, would you believe it, coal has been found now on a distant part of the land, and he'll have a great fortune, after all?"

"Too late to get back the Castle," said Elspeth, interested.

"Yes, but he doesn't care for that. There's another splendid estate in Surrey, not so old as this, yet very fine, and a house in London, both of which have been let for many years; but he'll have them again now. Great luck, isn't it, miss? And the man doesn't deserve it, I'm afraid. Nobody likes him. You'll see for yourself, perhaps, as Mr. McGowan tells me his lordship is running up here from London, to look after his interests, and will stop in the hotel, like an ordinary guest. He inherits from the distaff side, and the relationship is quite distant, as I said. His mother was a Miss Dean, who married beneath her, and she was a third cousin of his old lordship"——

"A Miss Dean?"

"Yes. "Why, to be sure, that's your name isn't it? I forgot for a moment. Are your people Scotch, miss?"

"My father was Scotch. His people lived in Perthshire."

"Why then, they must be the same Dean, I should think. Only fancy, miss, you're being one of the family, I might say, and coming to the old ancestral house as—as"——

"As a typewriter!" laughed Elspeth. "I shall begin by feeling quite at home now." She spoke lightly, but in reality she was deeply interested and even excited. Her father had scarcely ever spoken of the relations who had turned their backs upon him on his marriage, but the girl knew they had aristocratic blood in their veins, and she made up her mind that now she would try and trace the connection, if any, between her Deans, and the Deans who were connected with Lochrain.

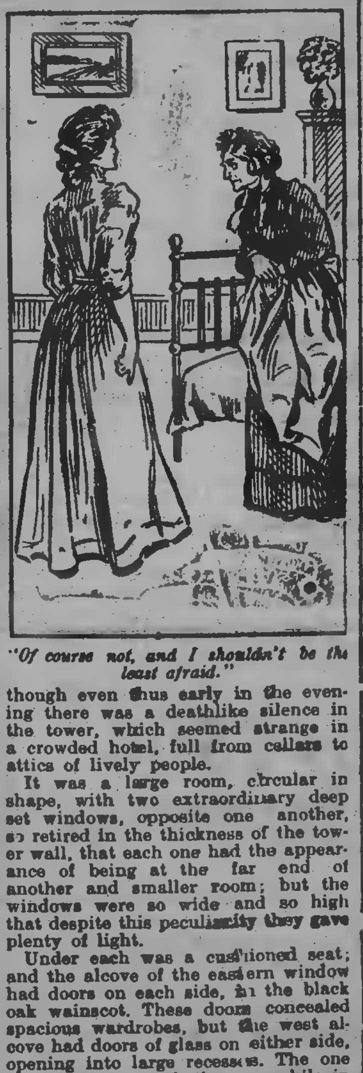
"I won't mention it to Mr. McGowan," she said to herself; "it would seem boastful and silly, but I shall enjoy feeling like a kind of daughter of the house, and I hope Lord Lochrain will come. I should like to see what he is like, in case he should turn out to be a sort of forty-second cousin, although he will never know."

When at last Mrs. Warden had led the girl up the winding stone stairway of the "haunted tower," to the room which was to be her own, Elspeth thanked the ghosts to whom she owed such delightful quarters. If it had not been for them, surely this must have been one of the most desirable rooms in the whole great house, she thought; and if she could, would have persuaded Mrs. Warden to tell the story of the tower. But, as Mr. Grant had done, the housekeeper grew suddenly reserved when the subject of the haunted tower was mentioned. Elspeth did not wish to insist, but she was becoming very curious.

As the housekeeper was on the point of leaving her alone, having promised that dinner should be sent up at 7.30, the old woman turned on the threshold. "I hope you won't be timid here," she said. "It is a bit lonely, for the room under yours has been turned into a place for storing luggage and odds and ends of furniture that aren't wanted, and the one under that is where the carpenter of the hotel does his work. So there's nobody but you in the tower at night. Yet it's all the quieter, and better for sleeping because of that, and you have an electric bell, just like anybody else, which you've only to touch as you lie in bed, if you have a fright, and the night porter would be at your door inside of two minutes. But there, you won't have a fright. Why should you? There's nothing to frighten you here."

"Of course not, and shan't be in the least afraid," answered Elspeth stoutly.

Even when Mrs. Warden had gone, she was still of the same opinion, though even thus early in the evening there was a deathlike silence in the tower, which seemed strange in a crowded hotel, full from cellars to attics of lively people.



"Of course not, and I shouldn't be the least afraid."

It was a large room, circular in shape, with two extraordinary deep set windows, opposite one another, so retired in the thickness of the tower wall, that each one had the appearance of being at the far end of another and smaller room; but the windows were so wide and so high that despite this peculiarity they gave plenty of light.

Under each was a cushioned seat; and the alcove of the eastern window had doors on each side, in the black oak wainscot. These doors concealed spacious wardrobes, but the west alcove had doors of glass on either side, opening into large recesses. The one on the left was a bathroom, while in the one on the right stood a bed, apparently carved out of one piece, with the oak wall behind it. This bed was, of course, invisible from the outer room, as the wainscoted wall hid it from the alcove, therefore Elspeth was practically in possession of a separate sitting-room. The glass doors were sliding doors therefore they did not interfere in passing to and fro, and could always be left open. The furniture of the big outer room was admirable, Elspeth thought, although it was of many different periods and had perhaps been relegated here, because it had made place for something better elsewhere. There were two or three wonderful old chairs, a charming table with claw feet, an ancient "secretary book-case bureau," with glass doors, behind which the covers of old-fashioned books showed, and a tall screen of beautiful, though faded, embossed leather, which hid a too modern dressing-table from view.

The girl thoroughly enjoyed the task of unpacking and putting away her few modest belongings in the great wall-cupboards, one of which she discovered was lined with cedar; and before she had finished all she had to do in settling in, dinner arrived—quite a little feast, it seemed to her, on a large damask-spread tray, with silver covers for the dishes.

There was a rose silk-shaded lamp on the table, which the servant who brought in the tray obligingly lit; but though the flame within made the thin silk look like a bouquet of roses, the wainscoting drank up the light, and it seemed to Elspeth, sitting at the table with a volume of Scott, chosen from the secretary book-case, that the black walls were closing in around her as darkness fell. She jumped up, and extravagantly lit the two candles on the pretty, old-fashioned dressing-table, but the difference they made was scarcely noticeably. They looked like fire-flies in the gloom, and the girl began to wonder whether, after all, she were quite so lucky as she had thought, in having the haunted tower at Lochrain to herself.

She could not remember having such a dainty and well-served dinner, and it ought to have been delicious to think that she could do as she pleased with her time until to-morrow morning at 9. How nice it would be to read until she was sleepy, and then to dream in that wonderful old bed with the great ruffled linen pillows!

But when the tray had been taken away, there began to be strange, little creeping sounds behind the wainscoting, sounds like light, hurrying footfalls, rustling of stiff silk, tappings of unseen fingers. Only mice, of course, beginning their night revels; Elspeth knew that, and she was not afraid. Still, she had to tell herself again and again that she rather liked the queer noises, that they were companionable, here in this isolated room, where no sounds of human life save her own could come.

She read, fitfully, until a soft-voiced clock on the narrow mantel over the big fireplace had struck 11, and it was nearly 12 before she had cuddled into the great bed in the alcove. Lying there between the cool linen sheets, the girl felt very wideawake, though after the long, exciting day she had passed, sleep ought to have come quickly. She had left the glass doors pushed wide open, and the alcove which she faced as she lay was white with the light of a late-rising moon.

Merchants Complaining

Merchants are complaining of tag-days. They say that they are really target days, and they they themselves are the targets. The remedy lies with themselves. But why do they complain? Tag is the old game.

The Poe Family

The Utica Globe pays a tribute to the Poe family the famous rugbyists of whom Arthur Poe recently of this city was a member. The Globe says.

"A great Princeton player was Edgar Allan Poe, a relative of the poet, and the lightest man in the history of big college football. Peter Poe as he was called was a quarter back, and he got his chance during the second half of a game between Princeton and Harvard, when Snaky Ames another famous Tiger player, was injured. With the score of 15 to 10 against Princeton, this little man took charge of the Tigers and ran the score up to 41 as against 15 for the Crimson men. Peter Poe was known then and in after years as the greatest of all the football generals until Phil King came into the '90 and in a game with Yale, in '93 arena. Johnny Poe, his brother who only weighed 138 pounds was the star of the Black and Orange teams of '91 and '92. He was knicknamed, Johnny the Coach. and though a light fellow he could make a gunning dive of 15 feet and land his man every time. Arthur Poe, another brother, played with Princeton in '98 and by brilliant running and dodging ran in the open field for 98 yards and scored the touchdown that won the game for his college.

Inthon Bible Class

The Inthon's met as usual in the George street church parlor the fine day not doing much to keep the attendance very far below the average. Sixty men attended.

A good account of the lesson was given by the teacher, Rev E A Pearson and a good many arguments came up on the different phases of the lesson.

After the lesson the regular business of the class was transacted which included reports from the different chairmen. The most important of which was the report from Dr. Marshall, chairman of the Athletic Committee, an outline of which was the forming of an "Inthon" hockey team. The list of fellows from which the team will be picked is one that will be in a fair way to land the O.H.A. championship.

Next Sunday being the International Temperance Sunday, a talk on the effect of alcohol on the system will be given by Dr. Marshall after the regular lesson. So those who don't think alcohol will hurt them, want to be on deck and hear what the Doctor has to say. You'll not have to sign any pledges.

Mr E G. Clark, chairman of the Devotional Committee is certainly looking after the spiritual welfare of the class. He is now forming a prayer circle and hopes to be ready very soon. He is also helping out the Sunday School Superintendent by asking for volunteer teachers to substitute in the absence of the regular teachers.

Don't fail to attend next Sunday. —Com.

Mr Baxter is very enthusiastic over Western Canada and gives a glowing account of his impressions while out there. He says that it is a splendid wheat growing country.

BASKETBALL AND THEN LUNCHEON

Boys Had Enjoyable Time at Y. M. C. A. on Saturday Night

At the YMCA. on Saturday evening a basketball match was played between teams picked from two of the boys Bible classes. The five captained by Ray Scott defeated Grant Potter's quintette 8 points to 3. The teams were as follows;

Ray Scott's—Johnston, Smith, Outram, Morrow, and Miller.

Grant Potter's—Pearson, Lees, Hill Stratton and Hill.

After the match, the boys to the number of twenty-five, had luncheon in the banquet hall upstairs. A most enjoyable time was spent.

The basketball match was keenly contested and the result was in doubt up to the last minute.

A Motor-Boat Adventure.

More than once Mr. S. F. Edge, the famous motorist, has had narrow escapes from death, but he confesses that one of his most exciting experiences occurred when he was steering a motor-boat, Napier II., in a race at Trouville. "In the course of some alterations in the boat," says Mr. Edge, "we had thrown too much weight on the head, and the result was that when we made for a huge wave, over which a boat light at the head would have shot, our bows were buried beneath the billows, and we disappeared from sight like a submarine. Very memorable were those few seconds beneath the sea. I had to hold my breath close and strain every muscle to the utmost to keep hold of the steering-wheel. I hardly think I could have held on three seconds longer, when to my great joy I felt the welcome breath of the open air on my cheeks and knew that we had cut through the wall of water."

A Bishop's Witty Reply.

A quiet, unassuming, yet notwithstanding one of the most forcible men in the Church is the Bishop of Ripon, who took a prominent part in the Church Congress. As everyone knows, the bishop's name is William Boyd Carpenter—the latter of which is capable of a very merry conversion. The story is told how, before being appointed to the See of Ripon, he once married a young couple with the assurance that he was not only a Carpenter but a Joiner. On another occasion he was about to lay the foundation-stone of a new vicarage. The architect handed him the trowel ,etc., inviting him to become "an operative mason for a few moments." I would rather remain a working Carpenter," was the witty reply.

A Widower's Dilemma.

A widower of Bale, England, who had advertised for a wife, received three applications, and made an appointment with each of the ladies These proved to be his own daughters, who had answered the advertisement unknown to one another,

"A Plucky Little Beggar."

When Admiral Sir John Fisher first entered the navy there were few more popular youngsters in the service. "There never was such a plucky little beggar," remarked an old shipmate, referring to those early days. "He was as quick as a monkey, keen as a needle, hard as nails; would do anything or go anywhere; didn't know what fear was, or that there was such a word in the language as 'can't'; and yet with it all he was one of the quietest, most modest fellows I have ever known."

A HAZARDOUS FEAT.

Shipwrecked Sailors Narrowly Escape Death on Cornish Coast.

A perilous climb up the face of a precipitous cliff was made a few days ago by shipwrecked sailors, whose vessel, the brigantine Try Again, was wrecked on the Cornish coast during a dense fog.

The vessel, belonging to Padstow, was bound from Antwerp to Dublin with a cargo of phosphates, and struck a reef of rocks which juts out close to the foot of the Dodman, the highest headland on the south coast of Cornwall. The fog was so dense that the sailors were unaware of the proximity of land until the vessel struck. A heavy sea was running, and the ship began to break up on the rocks.

Watching their opportunity, the crew, as the waves receded, jumped, one by one, on to an adjacent ledge of the rock and clambered up to the foot of the cliff. The captain, J. H. Carbines, who was the last to leave, was caught by an oncoming wave and swept into the sea. With great difficulty he was pulled out by the crew, only to be swept off the rock again. A second time he was rescued and carried, more dead than alive, to the foot of the cliff.

While two of the sailors remained to guard the injured captain, two others essayed the task of climbing the Dodman. It was a hazardous venture, as the cliff rises sharply to a height of 400 feet, and affords only the slenderest foothold. The men, however, succeeded in reaching the top, and made their way to a farm a mile away. The coastguards from Gorran were summoned, and it was 4 o'clock when they reached the Dodman, or four hours after the wreck.

Despite the dense fog and the fact that the men could only approximately indicate where the captain and his companions were lying the coastguards, with the aid of ropes, descended the cliff and found the captain lying in an apparently dying condition. He revived, however, after partaking of some spirits. The captain and his two companions were hauled up over the face of the cliff—a task which occupied nearly four hours. The shipwrecked seamen were taken to Penare farm, where the captain remains, suffering greatly from shock and exposure. The ship is a total wreck.

INVENTION KILLS HIM.

Brilliant Boy Scientist Slain by His Own Explosive.

A new explosive may have been lost to the world by the terrible death of Hugh Lanning, a 16-year-old scientist, who was killed while experimenting at his home at Weymouth recently.

According to the evidence given at the coroner's inquest he was using some high explosive, of which the base at least was picric acid or a similar substance. Although diligent inquiries had been made, it could not be ascertained that he had purchased picric acid, and it was stated that he might have made it himself or have hit on a new combination.

It was stated that the boy was advanced in science far beyond his years, and that he had been working with high explosives for two or three years. He had been accustomed to carry out some of his experiments in the open country, where he could watch the effect of his explosions.

Major Crozier, the Home Office expert on explosives, said that the boy was undoubtedly working with some sort of bomb filled with a picric acid compound. From the stains which he found about the room, he judged that the boy might have made the picric acid himself.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

Lanning's schoolmaster, Mr. Oliver, says that the boy had a perfect genius for chemical research.

"It is possible," he said, "that in his experiments he had discovered some explosive that we know nothing of.

"Lanning was a grand fellow, and had a great future ahead of him. It was his ambition to get into the Government explosives department."

The Caddie and the Cough.

But with all his ability, Mr. Asquith does not lie upon a bed of roses, for has he not Mr. Balfour in Opposition—"A.J.B.," readiest of debaters and smartest of retorters? Mr. Balfour seems never to rest. He is always "at" the Government, worrying it and perplexing it, and those who imagine that he might be somewhat restrained by tender recollections of the days when he was himself Prime Minister are quite mistaken. Yet, for all his "heckling" propensities, Mr. Balfour does not like to be disturbed himself, and one day, when he was playing in a foursome, he was quite put off his game by a spectator, who had an irritating cackle of a cough. The man always contrived to give his wheeze full play just as Mr. Balfour was about to make a long drive or an important putt, and the player could not, in consequence, do a thing right. But the ready wit of Mr. Balfour's Highland caddie sent the unwelcome witness scurrying from the links. Turning slowly round upon the group of onlookers, the caddie asked, with a great show of politeness:

"Can ony o' you obleege this gentleman wi' a jujube?"

The Tallest Actress on the Stage.

This distinction belongs to Miss Irene Smith, who plays La Bebe Rax in a new Drury Lane drama in London. She stands 6 feet 11-2 inches in her stockings. It seems somewhat incongruous that she should wear high heels, her hair brushed high over a pad, and a high hat, in order to give a greater impression of height. That is, however, what she does, so as to realize the description of being 6 feet 4 inches in height, in accordance with the design of the authors.

Muddy Clothes In Tramcars.

Four miners were fined 1s. each at Glasgow recently for traveling inside a corporation tramcar in muddy and dirty clothes and refusing to go on top.

The first iron bridge ever erected was in 1793-6 at Wearmouth. It consisted of 240 foot clear span.

A LARGER ARMY IS NEEDED STATEMENT OF LORD ROBERTS

Field Marshall Creates a Sensation.

Shows How Easily Germany Could Land Men in England at Slightest Notice.

London, Nov. 24.—Speaking in the House of Lords last night Field Marshal Lord Roberts expressed a conviction that the lack of a military force sufficient to make hopeless the attempt to an invasion would, in all probability be the loss of Great Britain's supremacy.

In a studied speech he pointed out the comparative ease with which Germany could land an army on the shores of England. Under the present conditions England would be forced, he said, to submit to most humiliating demands.

He disclaimed all hostility to or fear of Germany, but he declared that the defence of the islands required immediate attention. There should be an army so strong in numbers and efficiency that the most formidable of foreign nations would hesitate to make a landing in England.

He had ascertained, the speaker continued, that vessels capable of accommodating 200,000 men were available in the northern ports of Germany, and that as a result of the new German service law, 200,000 men could be collected in the districts of the nearest port without any trouble, and all preliminaries, up to the actual despatch of troops, could be carried out with the utmost secrecy.

"It would be folly," declared Lord Roberts, "to shut our eyes to these possibilities, however much peace is desired. If Great Britain continues to neglect the most ordinary precautions she may some day find herself in the hands of invaders and forced to submit to the most humiliating conditions.

"This danger is daily becoming more threatening. Within a decade, Germany has created the greatest sea power that ever existed, except Great Britain's, and at the present moment, it is formidable. Measures are being taken to increase that power. It is calculated that there are 80,000 Germans in employment in Great Britain. They are trained soldiers, and if a German force once landed on these shores they would be ready to help."

Lord Roberts' speech caused a sensation in the House. The Earl of Crewe remarked on the seriousness of such statements in the present high-strung condition of Europe's nerves, saying he feared there might be regrettable consequences.

Lord Roberts' resolution to the effect "that the defence of the islands necessitates the immediate attention of the Government to make provision for such a strong and efficient army that the most formidable foreign nation will hesitate before making an attempt at landing," was adopted by a vote of 74 to 32.

KILLED IN MUSIC HALL

Fatal Accident to Herbert Lee a Music Hall Performer in London Eng.—Shot in William Tell Act

Special to the Review.

London, Nov. 24.—Herbert Lee, a music hall performer, died to-day from the effects of a wound in the head received during a performance of a William Tell act at a local music hall last night. Lee had a ball on his head at which Madam Clementine shot from a distance of fifty feet. Madame Clementine surrendered to the police. Mr. Lee had given this act for a period of 15 years without having met any accident.

FINE LECTURE AT PARK ST.

Will be Given on December 18th by Mr. Elven Bengough Registrar of McMaster University

One of the best lectures ever given in Peterborough will be given on the evening of December 18th, in the Park street Baptist church, under the auspices of the South City AAA., by Mr. Elven Bengough, Registrar of MacMaster university, Toronto. Mr. Bengough is a nephew of Canada's greatest cartoonist, and promises fair to prove a worthy successor, of his talented uncle, as he possesses much of the same characteristics as an artist and entertainer.

MR. R. A. WAITE, JR.

Who Will Visit Peterborough Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

On Friday Mr Waite will meet the Ladies Auxiliary, Board of Directors, Boys Managing Committee, Boys' Cabinet and the Older Boys.

On Saturday he will speak to the Junior school boys, and Collegiate boys in the gymnasium in the morning and in the evening will address the senior leader corps.

On Sunday afternoon Mr Waite will give an address to men, in the Opera House at 4.15, subject "Par Values."

No doubt the YMCA will be greatly benefitted by Mr Waite's visit here and the Sunday meeting is sure to be very helpful to men.

FINED $9.45 FOR A BREACH OF THE BUTCHERS' BY-LAW

Henry Faux was fined five dollars and costs, amounting to $9.45, to be paid in fifteen days, for selling meat in quantities less than a quarter, at the Police Court this morning. Faux pleaded not guilty, but after hearing the evidence, his Worship was of the opinion that he was guilty of a breach of the by-law 1014.

Mr. T. Eastwood was called. He said that he knew Mr. Faux. He had bought from him a quarter of lamb.

Mr. Thos. Twomey stated that his wife had bought beef from Mr. Faux. It was less than a quarter.

Mr. Geo. Long said that he had not bought any meat from Mr. Faux.

City Clerk Armstrong produced the by-law 1014. Mr. Faux had no butcher shop license.

Mr. Faux stated that he hadn't bought or killed a beef for the past two months. He said that he was employed by Mr. John Mervin to solicit orders. Mr. Mervin supplied the meat and paid him a commission. He had a butcher license until September 20th. Since then he said that he never sold any meat for himself less than a quarter.

Mr. John Mervin said that he sold Faux meat by the quarter and in any other way that he wanted it.

ASKED FOR INCREASE

Rev. Dr. Crothers Asked Court to Raise His Assessment.

A despatch from St. Catharines contains the interesting information that Rev. Dr. Crothers, a former pastor of George street Methodist church, recently appeared before the Court of Revision in that city and asked that his assessment be increased. The rev. gentleman was of the opinion that the valuation of his property was not high enough and came before the court to ask that it be raised to a proper figure.

The action of Rev. Dr. Crothers in this matter has caused a good deal of comment throughout the province. The average citizen always claims his assessment is always higher than he likes, never lower.

XMAS TREE ON 23rd OF DEC.

Entertainment at Park St. Baptist Church to be Held on That Date

The Park street Baptist church Sunday School have decided to hold their annual Christmas tree entertainment on the evening of the 23rd of December. A good programme will be provided. also a Christmas tree, and a real live Santa Claus found for the children. The school will provide a present for each scholar.

THE NEW IRISH LAND BILL REQUIRES NEARLY A BILLION

Secretary Birrell Outlines Measure.

Which Involves Nearly $900,000,000 to Satisfy Land-Hungry Tenants.

London, Nov. 24.—Another Irish land bill to facilitate the carrying out of the previous land purchase act was introduced in the House of Commons last night by Chief Secretary for Ireland Birrell.

The Chief Secretary dealt in huge figures. He said he found that the estimate of $500,000,000 made by one of his predecessors, George Wyndham, as the amount necessary to satisfy the land-hunger of the tenants was totally inadequate; $900,000,000 would be required for this end.

The completed transfers of land up to Oct. 31 represented $125,000,000, which had practically exhausted the amount realized from the issues of land stock. Pending transactions representing $260,000,000 the Government intended to raise the money necessary to complete these transactions, leaving about $500,000,000 to be dealt with later.

The Secretary then said he proposed an issue of new three per cent. stock in order to carry out the pending deals. He recognised, he continued, that he was engaged in an expensive policy, but he declared that land purchase had worked such marvels in Ireland that the Government did not hesitate to ask of the House of Commons to add materially to the burdens of the Imperial Exchequer, which he proposed should assume liability for the entire loss occasioned by the issue of the stock below par. This loss would total $3,300,000 a year, which he proposed the Imperial Exchequer should lift from the shoulders of the Irish ratepayers.

Continuing, the Chief Secretary said the Government proposed to ask for power compulsorily to acquire the uncultivated grazing lands of the west of Ireland, which had been such a bone of contention and which had led to such lawlessness in recent years. He said that about half the agricultural land in Ireland already had passed or was in the course of passing from landlord to tenant, and that to arrest progress in this direction would be an economic and political blunder of the first magnitude.

John E. Redmond, the Nationalist leader, followed Mr. Birrell, and said the bill was a bold and far-reaching measure. The reform it stood for, he declared, was largely in accordance with the popular sentiment in Ireland.

INJURED IN A RUNAWAY

Port Hope Man May Die—Feared That Skull is Fractured

Port Hope, Nov. 23.—Jack Lingard met with a very serious accident this afternoon the results of which may prove fatal. In company with George Munro and another young man, he was driving down Walton street, when near Wickett's store the horse took fright and started off. At Clark's the wheel flew off and in F. H. Brown's the rig was overturned and the occupants thrown in the road.

Lingard struck on the back of his head and it is feared that the skull is fractured. At the time of writing he is in very bad shape and it is difficult to say what the outcome will be. Dr. McKinley is in attendance.

Hold Smoker

Marathon Lodge, No. 69, Knights of Pythias, are holding a smoker in their hall, Simcoe street, on Tuesday evening, December 1st. A pleasant time is anticipated.

YARD ENGINE WORKED ALL NIGHT GETTING OUT FREIGHT

Things presented a busy appearance at the CPR yards last night. Owing to the wreck at Pontypool the freight trains had gotten away behind time. The yard shunting engine which usually only works during the day, was kept busy all night. An extra gang of men was brought here from Havelock and an exceedingly large number of freight trains sent out from there.

The regular passenger trains were also heavily loaded with express. The main line was all cleared yesterday at three o'clock and consequently the regular trains were on time.

LITTLE BOY LOST WAY WHILE RETURNING HOME FROM SCHOOL

The four year old son of a gentleman residing on Weller street, got lost on his way home from school at noon yesterday and caused his parents much anxiety. The little fellow attends the kindergarten of the South Central school and instead of turning out Hunter street on his way home at noon, he proceeded north along Stewart street until he reached the steps that lead down to the railway track. Here the child noticed that he was astray and commenced to retrace his steps. He went all the way to Charlotte street before he got his bearings and was able to proceed to his home, arriving there about 3 o'clock.

In the meantime the child's exceedingly anxious and had made a thorough search of the neighborhood. They were very thankful when the little fellow arrived home. He was tired and hungry and glad to get back to his parents too.

REVOLVER DISCHARGED IN HIS POCKET, SHOOTING HIM IN THE RIGHT LEG

What might have proved a fatal accident occurred yesterday afternoon to Mr. Melville Hartley, 773 Water street. He fell asleep with a loaded revolver in his hip pocket.

When he awakened he went to remove the firearm, but in doing so, it discharged, the bullet going through the calf of his leg and lodged in the ankle. Dr. McClelland was called. He removed the bullet and dressed the wounds. Fortunately the injuries are not of a serious nature.

About two years ago Mr. Hartley had about the same experience, but it resulted much more seriously. While sleeping in the Bank of Montreal at Eglinton, a revolver which he had been using, went off injuring his left knee.

TORONTO GAOL-BREAKER SAID TO HAVE BEEN IN BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Nov. 24.—Had the Brockville police been given the tip Alex. Rose, one of the seven prisoners who escaped from Toronto jail last July, might to-day again be confined behind prison bars.

Sunday in broad daylight a block and a half from the police station on Brockville's main thoroughfare, he conversed with an acquaintance of his teens. He exhibited a remarkable coolness.

To the acquaintance Rose revealed his identity by calling him across the street. He enquired if the friend knew him and receiving a reply in the negative requested that his presence in town be kept dark. He wanted to be known as [illegible] and said he had wandered all over the province since escaping from Toronto jail, visiting Brockville on a previous occasion for a few hours. From here he proposed to jump across the line.

He said he arrived on Saturday night by the blind baggage of the C.P.R. express from Ottawa. Rose complained of being hungry and said he had nothing to eat for two days.

"Don't you know you are dangerously near police headquarters?" his friend asked.

"Why, no," replied Rose. "This is no place for me."

The police were not aware of Rose being in Brockville until yesterday.

THE HELPING HAND OF ROCKEFELLER

Magnate Says He Now Belongs to the Brotherhood of Man.

New York, Nov. 24.—Credit for the creation of the Standard Oil Trust, which counsel for the Federal Government claims still exists as the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, was given by John D. Rockefeller as a witness yesterday under cross-examination in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard, to two men—Henry M. Flagler and Samuel C. T. Todd. Mr. Rockefeller was sure it was not himself as he did not possess the ability for so progressive a move.

After adjournment last night Mr. Rockefeller told an enquiring audience of reporters that there were better things in the world than making money, and since 1891 he had been gradually retiring from business. He added:

"There is more important work than making money, and there is much for me to do. I belong to the brotherhood of man."

ANNUAL MEETING OF BIBLE SOCIETY

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Branch of the Bible Society will be held tonight in St Paul's church at eight o'clock. Rev. Jesse Gibson, DD., of Toronto, agent of the society, will give an address on the work of the organization illustrated with limelight views. A large attendance is looked for.

POSSE PURSUED A HALFBREED

Emerson, Man., Nov. 24.—The police from both sides of the boundary and a posse of armed citizens have been engaged since Saturday night in hunting Joseph Goselau, a "bad" halfbreed, who fled after a desperate attempt at robbery. He is known to have two guns with him.

Chief Wilson of this town says Goselau has penetrated into the Two Lakes country of North Dakota.

Goselau called Saturday evening at the house of Joseph Copland, on the outskirts of the town, telling him his rig had broken down, and asked for help. When he got the old man out into the bush he attacked him with a big hunting knife. Copland is known to keep a large sum of money in the house, and robbery was doubtless the motive.

"DIVORCE" PAPER WAS DELAYED

Only Arrived Last Night Owing to Confusion in the Customs

The paper for "Divorce," which appears at the Grand to-morrow night, did not arrive till yesterday evening. Local theatre-goers who have been watching the billboards for the lithographs, probably noticed that none were posted.

The reason the paper didn't come here was because of confusion in the customs. It is up to-day, however, [illegible]

CABLE AND TELEGRAPHIC

Fog Accidents at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Nov. 24.—The dense fog in this city resulted in the death of a well-known woman art teacher, who was killed by a train; the serious injury of a prominent business man, several street car accidents and almost demoralized railroad schedules.

At New York, incoming ocean liners were held up, and dozens of ferryboats delayed, inconveniencing thousands of commuters, by a dense fog that enveloped the bay Sunday.

Burned by Live Wire.

Brantford, Nov. 24.—By grabbing a live wire carrying 2,000 volts while stepping off an old merry-go-round at Mohawk Park last evening, Fred Whiting had his hands so badly burned that one will have to be amputated above the wrist, and a thumb and two fingers from the other.

The high voltage wires were hanging down from a tree and had formerly been used by the amusement company in the park.

Fatal Fire at a Funeral.

Locust Corner, O., Nov. 24.—An explosion of coal oil, which was used in starting a fire, caused the death of Alberta Bradbury, aged 15 years; fatally burned Mrs. Emerick Carvin, and slightly injured two small children, aged 10 and 5. The explosion occurred just as the funeral pary of Aaron Bradbury, an uncle of the dead girl, was leaving the house. Another member of the family was ill of typhoid fever.

A Conductor Killed.

Blenheim, Ont., Nov. 24.—Harry Pook, of St. Thomas, conductor on the Pere Marquette Railway, was killed at Blenheim station while in the act of doing some shunting with a piece of scantling. The scantling was broken in two, one part hitting the unfortunate man over the heart. He leaves a widow and two children.

Bodies Mangled by Autos.

Ossining, N.Y., Nov. 24.—Almost in front of the gate leading to the estate of William Rockefeller, the mangled bodies of William Arthur Purdy and William Kramer, both of Tarrytown, were found. It is believed that the men were returning home yesterday morning, and that they were struck by an automobile and killed.

Orders Mis-Read.

Suffolk, Va., Nov. 24.—Two freight trains met in a head-on collision during a heavy fog. A brakeman was killed and several other trainmen slightly injured. Both engines and twenty-one heavily-laden freight cars were demolished. One of the trains mis-read the orders.

Won't Send Him.

London, Nov. 24.—At Marylebone Police Court it was stated that the sister of a man charged with felony had come from Canada to take him back. The magistrate said he would not be a party to sending persons of the prisoner's description to Canada, declaring he did not wonder that the Dominion objected to receiving England's refuse.

Dan Renews Attack.

Calgary, Alta., Nov. 24.—Dan McGillicuddy in The News last night returns to an attack on Bob Edwards, editor of The Eye-Opener. In a letter over his own signature he calls Edwards all manner of hard names; says he was on the payroll of one of the political parties during the campaign.

Republican Campaign Fund.

Albany, Nov. 24.—The list of contributions to the Republican national campaign committee was filed yesterday. There were 12,300 contributors, and the sum contributed was $2,655,518.27. C. P. Taft of Cincinnati, brother of the President-elect, gave $110,000.

Fought Quarantine.

Kingston, Nov. 24.—A man named McCormick on Saturday barricaded the doors of his home to prevent the health authorities taking his child to the smallpox hospital. The police had to be called. Yesterday he was fined $10 and costs.

Panic at Five-Cent Theatre.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—One man may die and four women are suffering serious injuries as a result of the explosion of a moving picture machine, which resulted in a fire and panic in a five-cent theatre.

Divorce Action Dismissed.

London, Nov. 24.—(C. A. P.)—The Scottish courts dismissed the action for breach of promise brought by Isabella Nicol Swan of Toronto, against P. J. McLaughlin, Parkhead, but ordered the latter to pay alimony for the former's child.

Shot Sweetheart.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 24.—Girth Spencer, aged 24 years, a young farmer, living at Owen, Ind., was accidentally shot and killed by Miss Ida Reinhart, to whom he was engaged to be married on Christmas Day.

Robbery Not the Motive.

Montreal, Nov. 24.—The inquest into the death of Andrew Fox of Toronto has been adjourned. Fox was intoxicated the midnight preceding his death and robbery could not have been the motive.

Would Rather Beg Than Work.

New York, Nov. 24.—That most of the unfortunates who stand shivering in New York's bread line, waiting for dry bread and a cup of coffee, are liars and professional hoboes, who would not work if employment were offered them, is the opinion of T. V. Powderly, a Government labor agent, who has made a study of conditions here at close range.

Mr. Powderly has suggested that the state purchase farms, where the professional receivers of charity shall be forced to work.

Water Low at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—On account of the exceptionally lowness of the water in the Ottawa river, the pressure in the Ottawa waterworks has fallen to between seventy and eighty pounds, and at the request of the city engineer, J. R. Booth has closed down a section of his mill so that more power might be available for the civic waterworks plant. In several of the city churches Sunday it was impossible to use the organs because the power was insufficient to keep up the supply of wind.

Kingston Deaths.

Kingston, Nov. 24.—Mrs. George Fralick died suddenly yesterday. She was taken ill on the street and passed away a few minutes after entering the hospital.

Jean, three-year-old daughter of J. M. Campbell, former superintendent of the city light plant, fell from a carriage at Rochester and died from her injuries.

Mrs. Jean Fowler, one of Kingston's oldest residents, is dead. She was born here 62 years ago.

Detective Suspended.

Montreal, Nov. 24.—It was announced yesterday that Detective Guerin of the city force had been suspended by the police committee for insubordination in having made charges against Chief Champau and Ald. Proulax, chairman of the police committee, at a meeting at which he spoke during the recent election campaign.

Pays For Old Ride.

London, Nov. 24.—A resident of this city went into the Grand Trunk Railway ticket office yesterday morning and insisted upon paying for a fare from Detroit to London for a ride he had stolen on the railway eighteen years ago. The money was accepted and sent to headquarters.

Australian Tennis Expert Wins.

Melbourne, Nov. 24.—A. F. Wilding of Australia, yesterday defeated F. B. Alexander, the American, in the final of the Victorian singles in the tennis championship contests. The score: 4-6, 6-0, 6-2 and 6-2.

HINDU PREACHES SEDITION TO A VANCOUVER AUDIENCE

Vancouver, Nov. 24.—Prof. Tenja Singh, M.A., a Hindu, preached open sedition against British rule in India in an impassioned speech yesterday morning before a crowd of his fellow-countrymen whom he urged to resist all efforts of the Canadian Government to send them to Honduras. He shouted:

"India will act constitutionally in this agitation. If her just rights are not granted a leader will arise to direct her cause in open warfare. The spirit of unchecked power is giving us in India a class of white officers who do not understand the people. The Sikhs are getting their eyes opened. India demands justice.

"Col. Cunningham some years ago predicted the advent of a native leader who would sweep everything before him unless England did her duty. No empire can exist if held together by ties of mistrust."

At an impressive religious service in the Hindu Temple Sunday afternoon, strong resolutions protesting against the proposition of the Dominion Government to transport 3,000 Hindu resident in British Columbia to British Honduras were adopted. Copies were ordered to be immediately forwarded to Ottawa, London, and the Viceroy of India.

Two Hindu delegates, who had accompanied the Canadian commission to Honduras, reported adversely, and said they had been offered bribes to make a favorable report.

EASY WAY OF GETTING MONEY

New York, Nov. 24.—William Abbott Foster is being held in custody on the technical charge of vagrancy. Foster's family lives at the Clarendon Hotel, occupying what is known as the royal suite. Foster supported them, it is charged, by obtaining sums of money in varying amounts from rich men. Some of the men whom he is charged with approaching, or trying to, were John D. Rockefeller, J. Pierpont Morgan, Andrew Carnegie and Charles M. Schwab.

The police say that in the last nine years Foster has obtained at least $100,000 from men who became interested in his mining schemes. In a ledger of recent date, found in Foster's room, a total credit balance of $807,500 is shown.

BEING TRIED AT BOBCAYGEON

Fifteen Year Old Boy Who Attacked Woman Given Preliminary Hearing

Lindsay, Nov. 23.—The young fifteen-year-old boy who made such a dastardly attack upon the widow woman who lived on the Scotch Line in Verulam, received his preliminary hearing on Saturday afternoon at Bobcaygeon, before Magistrate Moore, and the case was adjourned until some day this week.

Dr. Thorne, of Bobcaygeon, who attended the lady, was obliged to put five stitches in the wound and stated that if the blow had been struck a little higher up it would have caused death.

Gertrude McLellan, aged 17, at Moncton, drank wood alcohol and died.

JOSEPH HICKS IS ARRAIGNED

Winnipeg Man Answers Charge of Murdering Lennox.

Winnipeg, Nov. 24.—The court-room was crowded yesterday morning, when Joseph Hicks appeared, on a charge of the murder of Eccles Lennox in a box car. The prisoner was remanded till to-day.

His friends protest he is the victim of a plot and he himself declares his innocence.

An afternoon paper stated it had information that the poisoned cup of coffee had not been prepared for Cooper, a witness in this case, at all, but for another person who had been active in breaking the recent strike. It was because he feared an attempt was being made to do away with witnesses to the alleged Lennox murder that Rogers, the crown's star witness, gave away the whole story. The case promises to be sensational in its developments.

APPLES, ORANGES FIGS AND PRUNES

The God-given Cure for All Diseases of Bowels, Liver, Kidneys and Skin.

Few people seem to realise how important—how absolutely necessary—it is to keep the Bowels, Kidneys and Skin in proper working order.

They wonder why they have Sallow Complexions — Indigestion — Headaches — Rheumatism — while all the time their systems are clogged and poisoned with waste tissue and indigestible food which these organs should have removed.

What they need are Fruit Juices—nature's provision for keeping the eliminating machinery of the body working right. "Fruit-a-tives" are the concentrated juices of fresh, ripe fruits, combined in such a way that their medicinal action is greatly intensified. They stimulate and regulate the action of Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, thus clearing the system of the accumulated waste and poison, purifying the blood, and banishing those distressing troubles that make life miserable.

No other remedy has ever been discovered that does this so effectively as "Fruit-a-tives." 50c. a box — 6 boxes for $2.50. Trial size 25c. Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE FARMER.

Nothing in Cobalt or all the mines and forests of Ontario equals or nearly equals in value, financial and otherwise the wealth and producing power of the Ontario farm. The ratio of failures to successes also is lowest there. But the slow process of preparing the soil of sowing, waiting for the harvest and putting it on the market does not appeal to the nervous, keen man of business, who longs for wealth and the activity of getting it in a more feverish and unnatural manner. It has been said that if people could cut out gossip the world would be a very heaven of smiling usefulness and enduring peace. Gossip is the great curse of human communal existence. It is the one bane of the farmer. It is the fungus that grows on his contentment and prosperity. In cities and towns people have less time although perhaps not less inclination, to scarify their neighbors. But it is the farmer's only vice. He is hospitable, manly, of conservative and democratic tendencies and by virtue of his calling, individualistic and independent. The good farmer is the cleanest-minded, solidest and best type of man in the world. His wife is even better than himself. The return to farming in Britain means much to the British people. It will mean a better people in every way. In Ontario the farmer should be enabled by his government to make use of his resources. Forests here, mines there, fisheries afar off should be realized upon for his domestic benefits for he is the chief of the nation, in fact, and upon him is founded the hope of its prosperity and strength.

A FRENCH ATTACK

The attack of Le Nationaliste upon the Marine Inquiry Commission and the report of its proceedings so far, is to say the least, astonishing. It says:—"With Watson or Perron it is not worth while wasting time. Mr. Watson does not understand French and most of the witnesses are French and do not speak English. Besides he is before everything a politicate advocate, whose skill, etc., has served to shield, etc * * * As for Perron, we have said before that his political past renders him unfit, etc." (Translation.) Then with regard to the proceedings. Le Nationaliste solemnly states that no really dangerous question has yet been asked of Gregory. It suggests a few simple interrogations which one would have thought had been asked as a matter of course.

It continues:—"But it is not necessary to reflect very long to see that the inquiry which Mr. Cassels has conducted is an ignoble farce." Now Le Nationaliste is a thoroughly reputable and well-established paper. It stands on firm ground in the estimation of the public. Such an attack, almost unheard of in Ontario, shows how those "on the ground" view the investigation. The riff-raff and their leaders throughout Canada rise like wolves. They scent the game afar off. Like the camp-followers of the Roman soldiery, they freely commend the general at the head. All who criticise or oppose him are worthy of death.

Some of our foremost preachers like Dr. Symonds, have expressed their opinions. With an eye to peace and good-will they have failed, not without exception, to see the really perilous condition of the country as a whole without distinction of political party. Materialism has made us "mad." The public records alone prove it. The standard of moral life and conduct in Canada was never so low as now. Churches are becoming business houses which have got to be made to show dividends. The idea that they are not of this world has gone by the board. The opinion is freely expressed "in the street" that the clergy will wake up some morning to find their usefulness gone. Their worldliness, dependence upon the world, commonplace disregard of the extreme sanctity of their calling, and more or less complete assimilation to and with the world at, not its poorest, but its worst, will bring the punishment which is fast overtaking it. There are, we are convinced, very many upright, honourable and sincere men in the clerical profession, but there are some who are no better than discarded book-agents. Our whole sympathies are we hope, with and for the finer development of the higher and holier life, but that it cannot be brought about as at present is so trite a comment as to be no longer made. The venality of so many church-people has destroyed their influence as a whole. The under-world scoffs at the unsupported pretensions of the upper. "I am more holy than thou" under present conditions is apt to produce nausea. There is but one remedy, the purer worship of God and the truer love of mankind, wholly apart from politics and the politicians and business. Religion will sway only where it sways by love, respect and inherent attraction but never by its worldly wisdom, its disregard of its own feelings, its anxiety for foreign missionary enterprise, when a complete overhauling and regeneration is needed at home. The parading on distant hills of the garments of holiness that are besmeared with the universal filth of the home world is intolerable. The clergy address themselves to the world. Why should the world not have a word with the clergy. Christ made a very clear distinction between God and Caesar. We are trying to identify them. Out of the composite arises only Caesar. The interference of the Church in the world of business, politics and what-not threatens the Church, not the world. Be not deceived, the people are not mocked. If the Church fails in its endeavour, and fails first of all with itself, the world will undertake the task alone. Such is the portent of the new movement. The religious man increases his responsibility to the world and to himself when he appeals to the world by precept. But he must also provide the example, and no fake example, either. We clip the following from the Witness:—

"But whether thus or otherwise, Christianity needs to manifest itself very differently to men if it is to be generally accepted."—Montreal Witness.

The ultimate aim of Tariff Reform in Britain is protection for agriculture. They are not afraid of their manufacturers. The immense quality of idle or vacant land there will, with intensive farming have, if filled up, a mighty influence on Canadian agriculture. This is the problem of the future.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF

From Coughs, Colds, Sore Throats and Hoarseness by Using Hyomei.

When you catch cold you want to get rid of it as quickly as you can. You don't want to lie around the house for a week, swallowing nauseating drugs.

Why not avoid all this. Why not relieve your cold in five minutes. Why not cure it over night. You can do it by using Hyomei, the sure and guaranteed cure for colds, coughs, sore throat, catarrh, bronchitis, and asthma.

William Guest, of Ayr, Ont. says: "Booth's Hyomei has proven to be a most satisfactory treatment for nasal catarrh and bronchial trouble. I have doctored considerably for these troubles, and conscientiously say that nothing ever used has given me such quick and lasting benefit as this remedy. I have found it especially good for cold in the head and cough. I am very glad to endorse Hyomei as an article of uncommon merit."

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) is medicated and antiseptic air. You breathe it into the lungs through a small pocket inhaler and its soothing influence as it passes over the inflamed membrane of the respiratory tract, stops the mucous discharge, allays the inflammation and that cold is cured. A complete Hyomei outfit costs $1.00 and Wm. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, will refund your money, if it fails to cure.

The steamer Mauretania has gone into dry dock for an extensive overhaul. The Lusitania will continue running during the greater part of the winter.

The Directors of Lipton, Ltd., have declared an interim dividend for the past half year on the ordinary shares of the company at the rate of six per cent per annum.

OF INTEREST

Mr Andrew Carnegie, has just published a book called, "Problems of Today - Wealth, Labour, and Socialism (George Allen and Sons, 2s, 6d, net. post free from Public Opinion office for 2s. 10d.) According to one reference book, Mr Carnegie "made a fortune in Pittsburg, and returned to his native land with a fortune of £40,000,000 and an income of £2,000,000." This information is essential to the reader of Mr Carnegie's book.

MR CARNEGIE'S OUTSPOKENNESS

It may at once be said that Mr Carnegie is far in advance in sympathetic outlook of many of the moneyed classes in this or any other country. He sees and, better still, admits certain things which others must see, but do not admit. Thus,

"The unequal distribution of wealth lies at the root of the present Socialistic activity. This is no surprise to the writer. It was bound to force itself to the front, because, exhibiting extremes unknown before, it has become one of the crying evils of our day.

EXTREMES OF WEALTH

"In the world's progress, scientific discoverers and mechanical inventors appeared and adapted the forces and materials of nature to the uses of man, followed by the commercial and industrial age in which we live, in which wealth has been produced as if by magic, and fallen largely to the captains of industry, greatly to their own surprise. Multi-millionaires, a new genus, have appeared, laden with fortunes of such magnitude as the past knew nothing of. The extremes in the distribution of wealth have never been so great as they are today although salaries and wages have never been so high. This has naturally attracted the attention of the wage-earners and others not deluged by the golden showers, and the 'Socialist's Budget,' appears as one of the remedies proposed.

TO TAX MILLIONAIRES

"In the 'Gospel of Wealth,' (1889) the writer advocated graduated taxation upon estates at death of owners saying,

"The growing disposition to tax more and more heavily large estates left at death is a cheering indication of the growth of a salutary change in public opinion. The State of Pennsylvania now takes—subject to some exceptions, —one-tenth of the property left by its citizens. The Budget, presented in the British Parliament the other day proposes to increase the death duties; and most significant of all, the new tax is to be graduated.

"Of all forms of taxation this seems the wisest. Men who continue hoarding great sums all their lives, the proper use of which for public ends would work good to the community from which it chiefly came should be made to feel that the community, in the form of the State, cannot thus be deprived of its proper share. By taxing estates heavily at death the State marks its condemnation of the selfish millionaire's life.'"

Mr. Carnegie even agrees with Mr. Snowden's, the Socialist M.P., Budget, which proposes that one half of a deceased millionaire's hoard should go to the State when the estate exceeds a million sterling."

"Mr. Snowden's protest against indirect taxation of commodities is also sound, because it favors the rich. One individual does not consume much more of these than another, while the ability of the rich to pay duties is infinitely greater than that of the masses."

WHY LAND VALUES GROW.

Mr. Carnegie takes the case of two brothers, who each took farms, one in the centre of Manhattan Island, and the other beyond the Harlem.

"The growth of New York City northwards soon makes the children of the younger millionaires; while those of the elder remain simple farmers in comfortable circumstances, but fortunate in this beyond their cousins, still of the class who have to perform some service to their fellows and thus earn a livlihood.

"Now, who, or what made this difference in wealth? Not labor, not skill. No, nor superior ability, sagacity, or enterprise, nor greater public service. The community created the millionaire's wealth. While he slept it grew as fast as when he was awake. It would have risen exactly as it did had he been on the Harlem and his brother on the Manhattan farm.

"The younger farmer, now a great property-holder, dies, and his children in due time pass away, each leaving millions, since the farm has become part of a great city, and immense buildings upon it produce annual rents of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

WHY THE STATE SHOULD STEP IN.

"When these children die, who have neither toiled nor spun, what canon of justice would be violated were the nation to step in and say that, since the aggregation of their fellow-men called the community created the descendants' wealth, it is entitled to a large portion of it as they pass away?

"The community has refrained from exacting any part during their lives. The heirs have been allowed to enjoy it all, because although in their case the wealth was a purely communal growth, yet in other cases wealth often comes largely from individual effort and ability, and hence it is better for the community to allow such fortune-making, because most likely to succeed, and, in so doing develop our country's resources.

"It would be unwise to interfere with the working bees; better allow them to continue gathering honey during their lives. When they die, the nation should have a large portion of the honey remaining in the hives; so that it comes to the National Treasury at last."

A BOOK TO READ.

There is very much in Mr. Carnegie's stimulating book which should receive attention. He is so masterly a man, and has a mind of such width of view, that we wish every employer could be induced to read the book. We propose to return to it again next week.

There is a growing feeling against out-relief by way of libraries, which is associated with Mr. Carnegie's name. It is as offensive to some as out-relief from the Guardians. The community, if it desires a library, should be able to pay for it, and all social advances must tend to make that possible. The problem involved is an acute one and there will be much gain from an understanding of Mr. Carnegie's point of view.—Public Opinion, England.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Buffalo Market Under a an.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—London cables for cattle are steady, at 11½c to 12½c per pound, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¼c to 9⅞c per pound.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Nov. 23.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 22 carloads—464 cattle, 49 hogs, 253 sheep and lambs, with 26 calves.

Exporters.

A few—possibly about a load—sold for butchers' purposes, nine or ten of which sold at $5.10 per cwt., which was the highest price reported. Certainly no such price as $5.40 was paid by Mr. Rowntree or any person else on to-day's market. Export space being scarce caused the run on the market to be much smaller than it otherwise would have been.

Butchers.

Prime lots were quoted at $4.40 to $4.60, and a few lots of good sold at $4 to $4.25; medium, $3.75 to $4; common, $2.75 to $3.50; cows, $1.50 to $3.75; canners, $1 to $2 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers

Messrs. H. & W. Murby report few on sale, but prices unchanged, as follows: Best feeders, 950 to 1100 lbs. each, at $3.65 to $4 per cwt.; best feeders, 800 to 950 lbs. each, at $3.25 to $3.75; stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, at $2.50 to $3.15; common and medium stockers, 500 to 600 lbs. each, at $1.75 to $2.50.

Milkers and Springers.

All offerings of milkers and springers met a strong market at $40 to $70 each.

Veal Calves.

A limited number sold at the old price of $3 to $6 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Trade in sheep and lambs remained steady. Export ewes, $3 to $3.40; rams, $2 to $2.50; lambs, $4 to $4.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Gunns, Limited, report selects, fed and watered, $6.25; to drovers, f.o.b. cars at country points, $6 to $6.15 per cwt.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Nov. 21, were 4300 cattle, 2300 sheep and lambs, 2800 hogs and 200 calves, while the supply for the local trade this morning consisted of 3300 cattle, 1050 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 200 calves.

Owing to the large increase in the receipts of cattle, the unfavorable weather for this season of the year for keeping stocks, and the fact that a large percentage of the stock was in poor condition, a weaker feeling developed in the market and prices since this day week show a decline of ¼c per lb. for all grades. There was a good attendance of local and out-of-town buyers, and the demand for top quality was ample to absorb all the offerings of such, but the trading in the lower grades was slow, and, as the supply was in excess of the requirements. Some lots had to be carried over for another market. Cable advices from Liverpool on Saturday reported trade very slow, but noted no change in prices, as compared with a week ago. Choice beeves in this market sold at 4⅝c; good at 4¼c to 4½c; fair at 3¾c to 3⅞c; common at 3¼c to 3c, and inferior at 1c to 2c per lb.

An easier feeling prevailed in the market for lambs, and prices, as compared with those a week ago, show a decline of 10c to 25c per 100 lbs., which is attributed to the labored supplies coming forward of late and the continued mild weather, coupled with the fact that there is little or no demand for export on account of the poor condition of the foreign markets. The demand from local buyers was fair, and sales of some choice lots were made at $4.90 to $5, and good at $4.50 to $4.75 per 100 lbs. There is no change in sheep prices to note, as supplies were comparatively small, for which the demand was ample to absorb them, and sales of good to choice stock were made at 3¾c to 4c, and culls at 3¼c to 3½c per lb. There was a fair demand for calves and prices ruled steady at $2 to $3 each, as to size and quality.

In spite of the continued weakness in the foreign markets for Canadian bacon, and the further decline in prices last week of 2s to 4s per cwt., coupled with the fact that the supplies of hogs coming forward here are fairly large, yet there continues to be a strong undertone to the market, and prices are steadily tending towards a higher level, which is claimed to be due to the scarcity of desirable stock. The demand is good for all selected lots, and sales were made at $6.50 to $6.60, and contracts were made for delivery later in the week at $6.75 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. These figures, as compared with those paid last week, show an advance of 15c to 20c per 100 lbs.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 23.—The live stock market has been discontinued for the present, owing to the quarantining of the yards.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—Cattle—Receipts, 25,000; market strong to 10c higher; steers, $4.00 to $7.75; cows, $3 to $5.25; heifers, $2.50 to $4.60; bulls, $2.75 to $4.50; calves, $3 to $7.50; stockers and feeders, $2.50 to $4.90.

Hogs—Receipts, 45,000; market 10c higher; choice heavy shipping, $6.10 to $6.30; butchers', $6 to $6.15; light mixed, $5 to $5.65; packing, $5.65 to $6.35; pigs, $4 to $5; bulk of sales, $5.75 to $6.10.

Sheep—Receipts, 25,000; market 10c to 25c higher; sheep, $4 to $4.75; lambs, $4.75 to $6; yearlings, $4 to $5.25.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

How He Managed It.

The bishop of Richmond told a good story about his father. "He was a farmer," said Dr. Pulleine, "and a nice old gentleman too. One year he took it into his head to grow flax, so he sowed the seed and, having a good crop, sent it away, to be made into a tablecloth. Some time later when seated at dinner he remarked to a lady near him, 'Do you know, I grew this tablecloth myself?' 'Did you really?' she answered, with the greatest surprise. 'However did you manage it?' 'Well,' most mysteriously, 'if you'll promise not to tell any one I'll tell you. I—planted a napkin.'"—London Mail.

Her Assistant.

The authoress of whom Fliegende Blatter tells bad said that she was very happy in her married life.

"I find my husband such a help!" she added fervently.

"Indeed!" said her friend. "Does he cook or write?"

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD

Belgrade Fears Raid.

Belgrade, Servia, Nov. 24.—Seventeen carloads of coin and the archives of the National Bank were yesterday removed from this city to the fort at Nish.

This step was taken because of the Government fears that Austria will make a raid on Belgrade, the capital.

It is rumored that the Government also will be removed to Nish.

New Customs Collector.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—F. M. Journeaux, president of the Reform Association of Ottawa, and for several years a member of the Ottawa City Council, has been appointed collector of customs for the port of Ottawa, in succession to J. W. Russell, retired.

To Prohibit Autos.

Lindsay, Nov. 24.—Victoria County Council yesterday decided to co-operate with Northumberland and Durham Counties to petition the Government to prohibit autos on county roads on Sundays and one other day each week.

Runaway Car Down Grade.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 24.—Frank Steinwitz, motorman, was fatally injured, and ten passengers were hurt, early yesterday, when a heavy suburban car, slipping backward down grade, collided with another car.

What the Breweries Lose.

London, Nov. 24.—A cable from Wellington, New Zealand, says that the capital loss to Auckland brewery interests through the result of the prohibition vote in the province is estimated $500,000.

Fatally Injured.

Toronto, Nov. 24.—With his head crushed so badly that he will probably die, Charles Hearn, a young man residing on Jarvis street, Toronto, was found about 12.30 yesterday morning at Georgetown Station, near Guelph.

He was riding between the baggage and combination cars and when the train stopped he was crushed between the cars and probably fatally injured. He is in the Georgetown Hospital.

Dry Dock at Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 24.—The Canadian Soo is in a fair way to secure a dry-dock. The Board of Trade, assisted by a grant from the council and private subscription, has engaged H. Calderwood, naval expert and consulting engineer of Toronto, who on Saturday visited the Soo and inspected several sites. The site most favorable is one west of the ship canal, and close to the power canal. This property is owned by the Government, and its location would permit of a dry-dock being conducted without the necessity of pumping.

Kills Burglar.

Rosthern, Sask., Nov. 24.—An attempt made yesterday morning to burglarize E. E. Ruttle's general store by two men, resulted in the death of one of them.

Ruttle had a burglar alarm connected with his home, and when it rang he, with Clerk Edward Tadie ran to the store.

Two men made a rush to escape, firing at Tadie, but missing, and he fired a shot from a rifle, hitting one burglar in the stomach. The other man escaped.

Burglars Ransack Store.

Avonmore, Nov. 24.—Burglars broke into the Beaver Hall Store, A. O. Miller, proprietor, and ransacked the whole place. They carried off about $200 worth of goods, consisting of one coon coat, gents' fur-lined coat, two or three suits of clothes, several ladies' fur collars, gents' gloves, razors, knives, etc.

German Balloon Fired On.

Breslau, Nov. 24.—A German balloon that passed over Russian territory last Saturday was fired on by Russian frontier guards near Zerkow. No less than fifteen shots were fired, and this, in spite of the fact that the balloon was flying the German flag.

Crew of Fireboat Drown.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 24.—Their fishing dory dashed to pieces on the rocks off Waddah Island, Wash., John Bergstrom and John Jacobson were drowned Sunday. Two companions got to shore by swimming. All four were members of the fireboat crew.

Father Hand For Bishop.

London, Nov. 24.—A rumor in Catholic circles to-day stated that Rev. Father Hand of Toronto is to be chosen bishop of the diocese of London, to succeed His Grace Archbishop McEvey.

Want Cheaper Cables.

London, Nov. 24.—(C.A.P.)—Henniker Heaton writes The Times stating that the only opponents to penny a word cables are the cable companies, and he hopes the visit of Hon. Mr. Lemieux will yield important results.

Government Elevators.

Winnipeg, Nov. 24.—The Premiers of the three western provinces will meet here to-day to consider the Government's internal elevator scheme submitted by the Grain Growers' Associations of the prairie provinces.

Sight of Mouse Kills Girl.

Florence, N.J., Nov. 24.—Having a horror of mice since early childhood, Miss Mary Isabel Mead of this place died of fright when a mouse, pursued by the family cat, darted across the kitchen floor in her home.

Thief at Tea Meeting.

Portage la Prairie, Man., Nov. 24.—In the course of his sermon Sunday night, Rev. A. E. Smith, pastor of the Methodist Church, caused a sensation by the statement that at a five o'clock tea held here a few days ago a purse had been stolen by one of the guests.

The preacher's comment was "Thank God that someone dared to be human at one of these five o'clock teas."

PAST YEAR A SUCCESSFUL ONE IN HISTORY OF COUNTY

Last Session of the Present Year Opened To-day—Warden Thompson's Address to County Council.

The last session of the County Council for the present year was opened to-day at the County Council Chamber, with Warden Thompson in the chair. The following Councillors are present, Messrs. Wm. Oakman, Asphodel; Jas. Russell, Belmont and Methuen; C. R. D. Booth, Burleigh and Anstruther; Wm. Hales, Chandos; D. Maloney, Douro; C. J. Darling, Dummer; S. Kilbon, Ennismore; C. Coben, Galway and Cavendish; Jas. Ingram, Harvey; John Brown, North Monaghan; J. H. Fife, W. J. Porter, Otonabee; R. N. Scott and T. H. Graham, Smith; F. J. Moore, Lakefield, and A. Breault, Norwood.

The session opened at 2 o'clock this afternoon with the Warden's address as follows;

To the council of the County of Peterborough.

Gentlemen.—It is very gratifying to me to look back from the present moment to the time you selected me Warden for 1908, from the fact that the business of the county has been transacted with the greatest of harmony existing between the council and myself and it must be gratifying to you also as the credit is due to you

This has been probably as anticipated one of the busiest years in the history of the county in the matter of bridge construction.

Three steel bridges having been built having steel abutments, at a cost of a little over $7000 is a fact that will compare favorably with anything heretofore undertaken. Two other bridges having been built of cedar with stone piers at a cost of about $800.

Burleigh, Cavan and Lakefield bridges have been renewed at a cost of about $1200 which leaves them in a condition that they will need no further expenditure for years to come.

I am surprised to note the fact that the rate struck by the chairman of the finance committee will, when all assets are considered probably cover all expenditures.

You will observe also the increase in the number of inmates in the House of Refuge, thereby straining the estimate provided for the maintenance of this institution.

A complete report of the House of Refuge will be brought in according to statute, at the next session, and I will not deal with the matter further.

Your council will no doubt bring in reports of their several bridges, thereby giving all the information necessary in that line.

Other expenditure has had to be met, such as county property, repairs and improvements, administration of justice and school purposes, that you will have seen in the monthly reports in the newspapers and the additional expenditure of the same will no doubt be set out in reports to the council from the several departments.

Some new matters will come up and I feel sure will be dealt with in a manner characteristic of you as a body you will join me in again referring to the continued prosperity of the Province in a spirit of gratitude

In closing, permit me to thank you for the consideration and courteous way in which you has treated me during the year and my earnest hope is that you will feel that I have done my best to merit the confidence you have placed in me

Yours respectfully,
JAS. THOMPSON

On motion of Councillors C. Coben and Jas. Ingram, a committee of five was appointed to report on Warden's address. The members of the committee are Messrs. C. R. D. Booth, D. Maloney, J. H. Fife, R. Scott and C. J. Darling.

A communication was read from Neil McNaughton, clerk of Northumberland, and Durham, asking the co-operation of Peterborough County in a petition to the Legislature to regulate and control the speed and operation of motor cars. The matter was referred to the Roads and Bridges Committee.

CHIEF JUSTICE'S JUDGMENT IN REGAN-LAWLESS CASE

Special to the Review.

Toronto Nov. 24.—Chief Justice Falconbridge has found for the plaintiff in the case of A. M. Regan against J. P. Langley, assignee of John A. Lawless, at one time proprietor of the National Hotel, Peterborough, Ont., which was tried at Peterborough. The claim of Regan, who was manager of the hotel, against Lawless was for $1,573.94, for salary, and Langley contested the claim. The Chief Justice finds the plaintiff entitled to rank as general creditor for $469.74 as to claim for money paid by him for and at the request of Lawless and $758.34 for salary from May, 1907, to April, 6th, 1908, and deducts $285.80 received on account, also to $91.36 as a preferential claimant and to payment of the assignee's costs.

CONSUMPTIVE WANTS TO RETURN HOME TO ENGLAND BUT HE LACKS THE FUNDS

An Englishman with a wife and two children, one about five years of age and the other an infant is desirous of returning to his home in England. He is suffering from consumption and despite the fact that he is very weak from the fatal disease with which he is inflicted and which is in an advanced stage. Some days he is scarcely able to reach the place where he is employed and frequently is entirely unable to do so.

At the conclusion of his day's work he is often to weak that it is only with the greatest difficulty he reaches his home. His case is a particularly sad one and one that merits the sympathy and material assistance of the public. He is not a man who drinks and uses to advantage any money he is able to earn but he is sadly handicapped by the condition of his health and as a consequence his earnings are small.

He realizes his physical condition and it is his desire to return to England but he has not enough money to buy tickets for himself and family. One hundred dollars it is thought would be sufficient and those desiring to give and in so worthy a cause may leave subscriptions with Mr. Finch Miller, city relief officer.

HOW MRS. CLARK FOUND RELIEF

After Years of Suffering Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Her

Pleasant Point Matron Tells Her Suffering Sisters How to be Free From the Terrible Pains That Make Life a Burden.

Pleasant Point, Ont., Nov. 23—Special—That most of the ills that the suffering women of Canada have to bear are due to disordered kidneys, and that the natural cure for them is Dodd's Kidney Pills is once more shown in the case of Mrs Merrill C. Clarke, a well known resident of this place and a prominent member of the Salvation Army. Mrs Clarke is always ready to give her experience for the benefit of her suffering sisters.

"My sickness commenced twenty years ago with the change of life," says Mrs Clark. "My health was in a bad state. Water would run from my head which would make me faint. When I came out of the fainting spells I took fits. I was bloated till I was clumsy. The pain I suffered was awful. It would go to my feet and then to my head. Many doctors attended me, and I tried many medicines, but nothing gave me relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first box stopped the fits and seven boxes cured me completely."

Every suffering woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They make strong healthy kidneys, and the woman who has good kidneys is safeguarded against those terrible pains that make miserable the lives of so many women.

Beatrice Dawson, aged 5, while coasting at Hintonburg, was killed by colliding with a milk wagon.

Duncan Bell, son of Duncan Bell of Ottawa, was drowned while skating near Vermillion Bay, Alberta.

LOCAL NEWS NOTES

Sons of Scotland

Camp Clan Alpine, Sons of Scotland, will hold a meeting to-morrow night to initiate several new members.

Open Meeting

The W. F. M. S., of Knox church are holding an open meeting to-morrow night and have invited the congregation to attend. Mrs. Burns, of Lakefield, will be the speaker and there will be special music for the occasion. A large attendance is expected. There will be a collection for missionary purposes.

Christmas

Just one month away. The Christmas money goes farther if put into an Edison Phonograph, farther because it carries with it more pleasure for more people, for a longer time, than any gift you could select. Come in and see them. J. M. Greene, Mc- & Co., Grand Opera House Building.

LADIES' ORANGE ASSOCIATION MAY BE FORMED

Miss M. Cullum, Right Worthy Grand Mistress of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association, and Mrs. Neally, of Lodge, No. 5, Toronto, are in the city to-day to institute a Ladies' Lodge.

Anyone wishing to become a member can join by being present this evening at the Orange Hall, Simcoe street, at 7.45 p.m.

It is expected that the organization meeting will be held to-morrow night. The mission of the visiting ladies is an important one, and they should meet with great success in their efforts.

PILES FOR FOUR YEARS

Only those who suffer from piles can know the agony, the burning, throbbing, shooting, stabbing pains which this ailment causes and the way it wrecks the sufferer's life!

Zam-Buk is blessed by thousands who used to suffer from piles, but whom it has cured. One such grateful person is Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor of Greenwood Avenue, Toronto. She says: "For four long years I suffered acutely from bleeding piles. During that time I spent an immense amount of money on 'remedies' and doctor's prescriptions but I got no ease. Zam-Buk was different to everything else I had tried and it cured me. I am grateful for the cure, and as I have never had piles once since, I know the cure is permanent."

Another thankful woman is Mrs. A. E. Gardiner, of Catelina, Trinity Bay. She says: "In my case Zam-Buk effected a wonderful cure. For 12 years I had been troubled with blind, bleeding and protruding piles. I had been using various kinds of ointments, etc., but never came across anything to do me good until I tried Zam-Buk which cured me! That this may be the means of helping some sufferers from piles to try Zam-Buk is the wish of one who has found great relief."

Zam-Buk is a purely herbal balm and should be in every home! Cures cuts, burns, bruises, eczema, ulcers, blood-poisoning, itch, cold-sores, chapped hands and all diseases and injuries of the skin, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Settled the Sign.

When William M. Evarts was secretary of state a new elevator man had been employed in the department who did not know Mr. Evarts by sight. In his car was a conspicuous sign to the effect that by order of the secretary of state smoking was prohibited. One day Mr. Evarts boarded the car in company with a famous senator, the latter smoking a cigar. The new man promptly touched the smoker on the elbow and said, pointing at the notice, "Can't you read that sign?" Mr. Evarts promptly tore down the offending notice and, turning to the elevator man, said: "What sign? I don't see any." The attendant, suspecting something, wisely held his peace, but he followed the pair out and asked the guard at the door who the chap with the large head was. The guard told him.

England's Prettiest Villages.

After a very careful survey we venture to write down the names of the six English villages that we consider the prettiest in the land so far as our own opinion and wide experience are concerned. The choice is made impartially and with full knowledge and due recognition of the claims of each to its high place. Here are the six: Bonchurch, Isle of Wight; Clovelly, Devonshire; Witchampton, Dorset; Sonning, Oxfordshire; Shere, Surrey, and Clapham, Yorkshire.—London Strand Magazine.

A Worthy Desire.

An ambitious young Chicagoan called upon a publisher of novels in that city, to whom he imparted confidentially the information that he had decided to "write a book" and that he would be pleased to afford the publisher the chance to bring it out.

"May I venture to inquire as to the nature of the book you propose to write?" asked the publisher very politely.

"Oh," came in an offhand way from the aspirant for fame, "I think of doing something on the line of 'Les Miserables,' only livelier, you know!"—Lippincott's.

Spoiled His Appetite.

"Every bit of food on this table," said the serving lady to Lamson as he sat down to eat at the church supper, "was cooked by your wife."

"Oh, I don't mind," rejoined Lamson faintly. "I'm not a bit hungry, anyway!"—New York Times.

A Foozle.

LECTURES OF MUCH INTEREST

At Knox Church Last Night by Messrs. Roy Menzies and Gordon Hall

After devotional exercises at Knox church last night Mr Roy Laing took the chair in the absence of Mr Carruthers. The chairman called upon Mr Roy Menzies and Mr Gordon Hall to give a lecture on "China, its social and religious life."

These addresses were a source of interest and benefit to those who listened to them.

Mr Mulligan, of the Gospel Hall, kindly sang two sacred pieces, which were much appreciated.

The splendid meeting closed with the usual ode. The next Monday, November 30th, being literary night, Mr G. Hall and Mr Chas Maybee will lead in a debate.

WELL KNOWN RESIDENT OF CAVAN IS DEAD

Death of Mr. John Howden Last Evening—Funeral Takes Place To-morrow

One of the most widely known and highly respected residents of Cavan, passed away last evening at six o'clock in the person of Mr John E Howden. The deceased had been ill for the past sixteen months. He died at the residence of his sister Mrs Jas F Staples, in Cavan

He was 51 years of age and was born in Cavan, being a son of the late James Howden. He was a man of sterling qualities, and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. He was a Methodist in religion and in politics a staunch Conservative.

Two brothers and five sisters are left to mourn his loss. The brothers are Messrs. Robert, of Peterborough, and Richard of Cavan. The sisters are Mrs J A Storey of this city, Mrs Alex Walsh, Perrytown; Mrs Caleb Lowe, Drayton and Mrs Jos F Staples, Ida.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon, at two o'clock from the residence of his sister, Mrs Jas F Staples, Cavan, to the English church cemetery.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM.

LATE J. R. McNEIL LEFT LARGE AMOUNT TO CHARITY

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—By the will of the late Mr. J. R. McNeil, merchant tailor of 203 Sparks street, who died on October 29, and whose net estate is valued at $26,375, about $19,000 is left to charitable institutions. The late Mr. McNeil's estate is made up of real estate to the value of $13,900 and personal property valued at $12,475.

Sarah McNeil, a sister-in-law, of Peterborough, gets a legacy of $2,131 and the household furniture.

To Miss May McNeil, a sister, of Preston, Eng., is left a legacy of $2,000.

John Crowley and John C. Martin, both of Ottawa, receive legacies of $1,000 and $2,000 respectively.

The Ottawa Old Men's Home and the Home for Friendless Women are each bequeathed legacies of $1,000, and the residue of the estate is left in trust to Mr. W. D. Hogg, K.C., to be administered among charitable institutions as he shall think proper.

The will was drawn up on March 11th, 1908, and was entered for probate at the Court House this morning.

PETERBORO' MAN UPHOLDS THE SHEFFIELD CHOIR

Characterizes the Opinion of Buffalo Writer as Unjust and Small-minded—The Depressing Conditions Under Which the English Choristers Sang

A Peterborough gentleman who is a prominent supporter of affairs musical thinks that the criticism of the Sheffield choir which appeared in Saturday Night by way of comparing the work of the English musical organization with the Mendelssohn choir of Toronto was most unjust and small-minded. It was in the form of a comparative review of the work of the two choirs by a conductor of a large choir in a Buffalo church

The pith of the remarks of the local man were in part as follows: The Sheffield choir was heard to decided disadvantage in most of it its concerts here. After a journey across the Atlantic to a climate which the members of the choir were unused to, they sang principally in skating rinks which were so low in temperature, that their voices and expression could not but be affected. To this must be added the ill effects of travelling on the railroads and the inferior hotel accommodation with which the choir had to be content during its visit. The latter was abominable in some instances and had a most depressing effect on the visiting vocalists.

The drawbacks mentioned with others of an incidental character naturally took much of the vigor out of the choristers, and as a result interfered to a very large measure with their vocalism. When the choir was in Peterborough it could easily be seen that the singers were tired, many nodding their heads sleepily as they sang. And yet under these adverse conditions they are not given any benefit from the circumstances when being compared with the Mendelssohn choir, which travelled the short distance from Toronto to Buffalo and gave a concert when all the singers were perfectly fresh and feeling in the best of spirits. If the Toronto choir could be heard in Buffalo and the Sheffield choir in Albert Hall, London at the same time, (London is about the same distance from Sheffield as Buffalo is from Toronto) I think the superb work of England's first body of choral singers, would overwhelm in its magnificence that of the Canadian choir, fine undoubtedly as the latter is. The opinion of the Buffalo man is only the individual assertion of an obviously thoughtless critic, who may or may not be competent to draw a comparison in so large a matter. I am satisfied that the opinion of the Canadian people generally is that the Sheffield choir is the grandest singing chorus in the English speaking work and their opinion is surely more valuable than that of a dissenting voice or two among thousands of enthusiastic approvers.

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN THE CASE OF REGAN VS. LAWLESS

His Lordship Chief Justice Falconbridge, who was presiding at the non jury sittings of the High Court yesterday reserved judgment in the only case that came up before him. It was in the action of Ambrose Regan against Langley the receiver for the estate of J A Lawless, late of the National hotel, to recover back salary from the estate.

Mr Regan stated that Mr Lawless had agreed to employ him at the rate of $100 per month and board and that he also was to be promoted from clerk to manager. That was in April 1907 and he remained in his employ until last July.

Mrs Regan, mother of the plaintiff also gave evidence in reference to the conversation between Mr Lawless and Mr Regan.

In defence Mr Lawless stated that the agreement was made with the understnading that if the plaintiff made the business profitable he was to receive the above salary. But it had not been profitable and he did not think he should be held liable for the amount.

SPRINGVILLE ANNIVERSARY CONCERT A BIG SUCCESS

An excellent programme was given at the concert held last night in Springville in connection with the anniversary of the Presbyterian church there. Rev. Dr. Marsh, the pastor, occupied the chair, and the audience was an exceedingly large one.

The following was the programme:—

Bagpipe Selections—Rev. A. K. McLeod.

Quartette—Messrs. W. F. Nelson, H. Gillespie, A. Lillio and John Crane.

Duet—Mr. and Miss Kennedy.

Recitation—Mr. Johns.

Solo—Miss Heatlie; Miss Lockwood accompanist.

Mandolin Solo—Mr. Harold Oxie.

Encores were numerous throughout the evening. Speeches were given by Rev. Mr. Johnston, Millbrook; Wetherald, Fraserville; McKenzie, Centreville, and McLeod, Brighton.

The offerings at the anniversary services on Sunday and the proceeds of the concert are very gratifying.

INVITATION TO CITIZENS

To the citizens of Peterborough.

Ladies and Gentlemen:— The formal opening of our new Collegiate Institute by the Hon R. A. Pyne, M. D Minister of Education, is to take place on Friday afternoon the 27th, inst at three o'clock. There will addresses by the Minister of Education, the Mayor, members of Parliament and others.

The citizens generally are invited to this function. This will be the first opportunity that you will have of inspecting our new building, which is considered one of the finest Institute buildings in the Province.

For those who cannot attend in the afternoon the building will be open in the evening. An orchestra will also be in attendance. Let everyone who can possibly attend either in the afternoon or in the evening do so.

I have the honour to be,
Your obedient servant,

GIVEN EIGHTEEN MONTHS IN PRISON

Heavy Sentence for Young Man Who Stole Horse Near Lindsay

Lindsay, Nov. 23—The young man who was convicted of stealing a horse and buggy from the Benson House sheds was sentenced to 18 months in Central prison this morning by Judge Harding. The pronouncing of sentence had been put off from time to time to give the convicted man a chance to make restitution, but he failed to do so. This morning his counsel, Mr I E Weldon, made a plea for another adjournment saying that the money was expected from the man's brother in Cobalt but the judge pronounced sentence. Mr. Davidson, whose horse was stolen by this man, is out a considerable sum of money, the horse having been driven to Blackwater junction from here and place in the sheds there, while the thief came home on the train.

OBITUARY

BERNARD HEENAN

The death occurred at midnight yesterday of Bernard Heenan, the only son of Mrs W. M Heenan, Crescent street. The deceased had been ill for several months. He was seventeen years old and was a general favorite among a wide circle of young friends

Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved mother in her sad loss.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at nine o'clock from 1 Crescent street to St Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

CHRISTOPHER LOWES.

Special to the Review.

Fowler's Corners, Nov. 21—Another aged and respected resident was called away by death early Sunday morning, 15th inst., in the person of Mr. Christopher Lowes.

The deceased was 74 years of age and was a life long resident of Emily township. Two years ago, Mr. Lowes was very ill, but after undergoing a severe operation, recovered. A week ago last Sunday, however, he was confined to his bed, and all that human skill could do was of no avail.

He was for many years a member of Bethel Methodist church and a continuous supporter towards the advancement of that cause. In politics he was a staunch Conservative, and for the past twenty years was postmaster of Frank Hill post office. Mr Lowes was an industrious farmer and had at the time of his death one of the most beautiful homes in Emily township.

His wife, whose maiden name was Maria Switzer, and two sons are left to mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and father. The sons are Joseph of Ennismore, and John, residing at home. Also four sisters, and two brothers survive, the sisters are Mrs Jacob Lowes, of Emily, Mrs. Christopher Switzer, of Sunderland; Mrs John Walton, Dakota, and Mrs. Joseph Mills, Saskatchewan. The brothers are, Julius of Emily, and Joseph of Saskatchewan.

The funeral of the deceased took place from the home on Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock, and was largely attended. Service was held at the house by Messrs Rev. R McCullough and McKenzie, after which the remains were taken to Emily cemetery for interment.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Geo. Calvert, Robert McElwain, Gabriel Switzer, Henry Jackson and Gustavus Howden.

LOCAL BRAKEMAN NOT IN WRECK

It Was Rumored That Mr. Chas Elliott, Aylmer St. Was in One of Wrecked Freight Trains

It was rumored in the city today that Mr. Charles Elliott, a C.P.R. brakeman residing at 93 Aylmer street, was on one of the trains that was in the wreck on the head-on collision on the C.P.R. near Pontypool. Inquiries at his home, however, elicited that the information was unfounded.

He was in the city Sunday and his departure was delayed by his receiving word that the wreck had taken place.

FURORE CREATED BY DIVORCE

The Popular Play to be Presented at the Grand

F. C. Whitney promises Peterborough theatregoers a treat when he presents "Divorce" at the Grand Opera House to-morrow night.

"Divorce" created a greater sensation in Paris than any play which has been seen there in the last ten years. So uncommon is the problem involved in it that the Parisian newspapers at once entered into an animated discussion concerning not only the play itself, but the ethical principles involved and the De Marten alone printed more than 200 columns on a discussion in which the greatest writers, politicians, and men of affairs generally participated.

From accounts received from Montreal and Detroit, it would appear that quite as much of a furore was created there, in proportion as was created in Paris.

Stanislaus Stange, who has made the American version of the play has done more than to give it a mere translation and has kept intact to a very large extent the basic ideas which Bourget seeks to enunciate through this medium. Stange has added his own very marked dramatic constructive ability to what Bourget has already accomplished, and has made a drama which perhaps will mark an epoch in theatrical history here.

To present this drama in a manner befitting its importance, Mr. Whitney has brought together a cast such as has seldom been seen here. It includes Miss Marion Terry, the youngest of the famous Terry family, a sister of Ellen Terry, who has long been accredited as the best emotional actress in England. In the role of Gabrielle Darras, it is understood that Miss Terry has a part that gives her every opportunity to display her remarkable powers. In addition to Miss Terry, the company will include Ida Conquest, who has been leading lady for many of the Frohman productions. She has played with Mansfield in "Old Heidelberg," and with Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes," and John Drew in "The Tyranny of Tears." Her most recent engagement was in the "Wolf," in which she was the only woman. She will play Bertha Planat the nurse in "Divorce." The cast also includes Julia Hanchet, an actress of many achievements, and Florence Howard. Vincent Serrano the original Lieut. Denton in "Arizona," will play Lucian, the son of Gabrielle, by her first marriage. John Glendenning will play Albert Darras and Eben Plympton, one of the best actors on the stage, will have the role of Pere Euvrard, the priest.

THE FENTON MINING PROPOSITION

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Fenton Mines Syndicate, published elsewhere in this issue. Efficient management being as essential to success in a mining enterprise as good properties, investigation of the personnel of those in charge of the affairs of this syndicate is invited.

Fred A. Fenton is a mining engineer and a geologist, who combines theoretical knowledge of mineralogy with long experience in mining operations in Ontario, British Columbia, Nevada and California. That he is an operator of ability is evidenced by the positions held by him. For several years he had sole charge of the extensive and varied mining interests on the Pacific Coast of A. D. Provand, M.P., for Glasgow, Scotland, and associates. About three years ago he entered the service of Messrs. F. H. & B. J. Clergue, founders of the great industries at Sault Ste. Marie, and until quite recently has been in charge of prospecting and general mining development work for them.

E. C. Sewell has successfully handled lead mining properties in Missouri, and is now largely interested in silver propositions in Cobalt and Montreal River districts.

John Gray, some years ago graduated from the rank of working miner into a mine valuator of exceptional ability, and his services are in constant demand by large capitalists.

O. W. Evans, prospector, is a young man whose work in the Temagami Reserve, Cobalt, and Montreal River districts has been such as to inspire confidence in his advancement in the mining business.

J. Millar Neil, consulting and chemical engineer, is a member of the Society of Chemical Industry, the American Chemical Society and the American Electro Chemical Society. He is also the owner of the largest laboratory and ore testing plant in this Province.

AN ENJOYABLE CONVERSAZIONE

Held Last Evening by the Woodmen of the World—Many Attended

A large number of ladies and gentlemen gathered at the conversazione of the Woodmen of the World last evening in the S.O.E. Hall. Sovereign Advisor Simmons, of Lindsay, was in the chair. The evening opened with a spirited progressive euchre contest, the prizes for which were a dainty bon-bon dish, won by Mrs. Westlake, and an ebony clothes brush won by Capt. Copperwaite.

The chairman opened the meeting with some humorous remarks, saying how futile it was to compare his home town with Peterborough. Turning to the subject of the evening, he said that the Woodmen had 675000 members in America, and was the second largest fraternal society in the world.

Mr. J. H. Burnham was called upon and made a few remarks.

Mr. Firth sang very finely, and Misses Rose and Goodenough favored the audience with an instrumental duet. Refreshments were served and an extremely pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of God Save the King.

Sovereign Haskell and Vice-Sovereign Gibbs, assisted by a number of ladies, superintended the entertainment, and are to be congratulated on the success of it. The Woodmen of the World are evidently a happy and prosperous society, if all the branches are like the local one.

GANTHONY ENTERTAINS.

Proves himself to be Comedian of High Order.

The large and fashionable audience assembled at Stanley Hall last evening had not merely the pleasure of aiding a good cause, but of enjoying one of the best entertainments that has been seen in Montreal for months.

It was Mr. Robert Ganthony's first appearance in this city, but it took him only a few moments to establish himself in the affections of the house. As a comedian, he is of the first order, with a fund of delightful absurdities that kept laughter rippling till it broke into unrestrained laughter and applause.

In the musical sketch that opened the programme he showed himself no unworthy successor to the late Mr. Corney Grain, his mandolin solo, supposed to be given by a girl, and his ludicrous recitation, "The Man with One Hair," being triumphs of humorous art. His "Mathematical Travesty" was another excellent item, exhibiting his skill as a cartoonist. His sketch of a clergyman lecturing to his parishioners on the poem of "Bo-Peep" was instinct with delicate irony, entirely free from offence, and the signal for hilarious applause.

The second part of the entertainment contained a sketch as given before His Majesty King Edward VII. "The Weathercock Concert" followed, Mr. Ganthony assuming the role of a "quick change artist" in a manner that would have done credit to Mr. Roberts himself. This brought the performance to a close, and, to judge from the opinions expressed by the audience, Mr. Ganthony's return to Montreal in the near future will be heartily welcomed. —The Gazette.

For date of Mr. Ganthony and Company's appearance here, see advertisement.

MGR. NAYLOR GIVES REASON FOR YANKEE ROGERS' DEFEAT

Says His Man was Suffering from Boils and Blood Poison in the Wrist—Says "Gotch Will Kill the Turk"—Rogers was Only a Joke

W. B. Naylor, Yankee Rogers' manager, has written the sporting editor of the Review, and says that Rogers, like a large number of other wrestlers throughout the country at the present time, is suffering from boils. The epidemic seems widespread. Hurtubise and Young Hack both have them. Rogers had seven and blood poisoning in his right wrist besides. Mr. Naylor says Yankee is rendered helpless by his condition and has been unable to do any training lately.

During the match with the Turk a large boil on Rogers' shoulder burst and he suffered intensely from it, and from the others also. On account of his condition two matches have been cancelled. Manager Naylor says;—"Rogers was a joke. Anybody could have beaten him. He will wrestle the Turk again as soon as he is well, and can win and easily. Gotch will kill the Turk."

A LONG-LOOKED-FOR MATCH AT ROLLER RINK TO-NIGHT

Between Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick—Young Hack Wrestles Five Men in Handicap Bout, Among Them Holloway, the 190 Pound Acrobat

Tonight will see a wrestling bout that has created a great deal of local interest, when Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick meet in a best two out of three catch as catch can match at the Auditorium roller rink. Both men are there with the condition end, opinion is pretty evenly divided as to which will win. The sporting public is looking at the affair this way: Fitzpatrick has been wrestling more than Burridge lately is a very hard man to hold and is generally regarded as having a good knowledge of the game. If anything he will have a little the advantage in weight. This may be a surprise to some, but nevertheless it is true.

Burridge is acknowledged to be the stronger of the two and with it, has science and good generalship, the latter attribute being evident in his brainy work behind the bat. He lacks nothing in condition and is capable of going through all kinds of strenuous work.

Regardless of the outcome the battle is sure to be a vigorous and interesting one and the crowd of the season is expected to be there for the match. A C Yokome will referee the bout.

WHAT HACK HAS TO DO

For the first time in the history of athletics in Peterborough one of the leading heavyweights in the mat business will be seen in a handicap go. Young Hackenschmidt will try to pin five men in 10 minutes and at that it would appear as though he had taken on a colossal proposition for among the men to stack up against him is none other than the heavyweight member of the Holloway acrobatic team. Holloway is a man of great strength and he has a good knowledge of the game. With this powerful parcel to bring to the carpet along with four others Hack will have a busy ten minutes. Many who saw Holloway perform his spectacular feats of strength and skill at the roller rink last night think he will be able to stay the limit with Hackenschmidt.

The other preliminary will be a six round boxing bout between Lillie and Guerin. Both boys are fast and confident.

The programme will be as follows;

Six round boxing bout, Lillie vs. Guerin: Mr G N Graham will referee.

Young Hackenschmidt will attempt to throw five men in ten minuets.

Main bout. Harry Burridge vs Ned Fitzpatrick. Catch as catch can wrestling bout, at catch weights, best two in three falls, strangle hold barred for $100.

Ty Cobb is to play outlaw baseball during the coming winter.

T.A.S.A.C. WILL HAVE TEAMS IN JR. AND SR. CITY LEAGUE

At a meeting of the T.A.S.A.C. last night it was decided to place a team in the junior city hockey league. Messrs. Derocher and Deannard were appointed to attend the annual meeting of the city league tonight where they will enter a team in the senior city league.

All arrangements have been made for their "At Home" on Friday evening which promises to be a peach. This will be the last social given this year and those wishing to have a good, pleasant evening certainly should attend.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CITY LEAGUE TO-NIGHT

The annual meeting of the City League will be held tonight at the YMCA. The annual reports of the officers will be presented and general business in connection with the holding of an annual meeting. A full attendance of all interested is requested and all the teams expecting to enter the league are expected to have representatives present

There seems no doubt that the city league will have the most successful season this year in its history. A large number of teams will enter and the juniors are making preparations to have a thriving junior division.

Tonight's meeting is called for 8 o'clock and it is desirable that those attending should be on hand in good time so that the business may be gone through with as soon as possible.

LOCK WORKS WON FROM GREYS IN OPENING GAME

The Peterborough Ten Pin League season was auspiciously opened last night when the Lock Works and the Greys inaugurated the schedule in a game which made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in merit.

All three games fell to the Lock Works, the first by a comfortable margin while the last two were hard fought all the way, the last being exceptionally well contested, three pins only separating the rivals at the finish.

The Lock Works started right off with a big start in the first game, mainly through the efforts of LePlant and Westbrooke the former opening up with a score of 212. In his next games he rolled 146 and 159, his total score exceeding the five hundred mark. In the second game Westbrooke was high man, while in the final contest LePlant again carried off the honors, just nosing out Clancy of the Greys.

In this game the last frame decided the issue, the Lock Works winning out by three pins.

A spare would have given the Greys the game but Clancy ran in to a split while LePlant got the necessary mark.

Tonight the second game will be played between the Belmonts and Lang's trio and a stubbornly fought game should result.

The game scheduled for tomorrow night between the Examiner and the Bankers has by mutual consent been arranged for this afternoon.

The scores last night were as follows:

GREYS

J E Sully	169	119	101—399
G C Snyder	95	145	127—367
M J Clancy	144	136	156—436
	408	400	384 1192

LOCK WORKS

Westbrooke	168	169	128—465

JUNIOR GUILD BASEBALL LEAGUE

New Secretary Elected at Meeting Last Night—Amendments to Constitution

A meeting of the Junior Guild Baseball League was held in the YMCA. parlors last night to wind up baseball matters for 1908. On account of Mr Wilkie leaving town, Mr. Ernie Reid of St Andrew's, was elected secretary-treasurer for the current year.

An amendment to a clause in the constitution was moved and carried, which says:

"That any boy will not be eligible to play with any club, unless he is a member and regular attendant at the meetings of such club, since the first of the current year."

It was also moved and seconded that a shield be ordered and engraved and placed on the league trophy bearing the name of the winners of such trophy, said trophy to be placed in the YMCA. building.

The forming of a Junior Guild Hockey League was also discussed and it was decided that such would be formed if the necessary arrangements could be made with the clubs.

Any of the boys' clubs wishing to enter such a league are asked to have a representative at a meeting which will be held in the near future. Date will be announced later.

The executive of this league also wish to thank the secretary of the YMCA for the use of the parlors.

CURLING

REV. MR. PEARSON ACCEPTS.

Rev. R. Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's church, has challenged Rev. E. A. Pearson to meet him with a rink of curlers from the George street Methodist church in a game at the Charlotte street rink against a rink from St. Paul's, the game to be played as soon as there is ice. Mr. Pearson has accepted the challenge.

HOCKEY

A FREE FIGHT

Pittsburg, Nov. 23.—The hockey game at Duquesne Gardens Saturday night between P.A.C. and Lyceum was more fight than hockey. The trouble began in the second half. Taylor and Sixsmith got into an argument and began beating each other with their sticks. Sixsmith went down with Taylor on top, then Campbell joined in and started to hit Sixsmith over the head with his stick. Macdonald came up and knocked down Campbell with a swing to the jaw. Then everybody joined in and it took Referees Lamb and Schooley ten minutes to straighten things out. Campbell was benched for the rest of the game.

President Gumbert has summoned players Garrett, Sixsmith, Fred Taylor, Lorne Campbell and Jack Macdonald to appear before him on Thursday.

The President was quoted yesterday as saying that he would stop this sort of hockey even if he has to send every player in the league back to Canada.

Lyceum won the game, 5 to 2, two men for each team being on the bench when the game ended.

The teams:

Goals, K Mallen, Kerr, McDonald, T Smith 2, J Mallen, Throop.

Time of halves, 20 minutes.

COLORS IN THE OCEAN.

Various Causes For the Different Tints of the Water.

Sky and cloud colors are often reflected in the sea, but just as the air has its sunset glory so water has its changing tints quite apart from mere reflection.

Olive and brown lines in the waves off the coast come from the muddy sediment washed from the shore, as blues arise chiefly from reflected sky. But there are many other colors in the ocean. On almost every long voyage at sea spots of reddish brown color are noticed at one time or another. When a few drops of the discolored water are examined under a microscope myriads of minute cylinder shaped algae are seen, some separate, some joined together in scores. It is this organism—sometimes called "sea sawdust"—which has given the name to the Red sea, although it also abounds in other waters. Sometimes the water far from land will be seen to be of a chocolate hue for an extent of several miles, and this is caused by millions upon millions of minute one celled animals which lash themselves along, each on his erratic individual course, by means of the finest of hairlike threads of cilia.—Pearson's.

The Traces of the Beasts.

On every side in the Malay wilds the traces of the beasts—which here live as scheduled, as safe from molestation, as did their ancestors in pre-Adamite days—are visible on tree trunk, on beaten game path and on the yielding clay at the drinking places by the hurrying stream. Here a belt of mud nine feet from the ground shows that an elephant has rubbed his itching back against the rough bark of a tree, and, see, coarse hairs are still sticking in the hardened clay. There a long, sharp scratch repeated at regular intervals marks the passing of a rhinoceros. Here, again, is the pad mark of a tiger barely an hour old, and the pitted tracks of deer of all sizes and varieties surround the deeply punched holes which are the footsteps of an elephant.—Cornhill Magazine.

German and Italian Students Fight.

Vienna, Nov. 24.—The German and Italian students attending the University of Vienna came into serious collision in the university precincts yesterday morning, and before the police drove the demonstrants away, revolvers had been freely used, and a number of young men wounded.

The trouble was occasioned by an Italian demonstration in favor of the establishment of an Italian University at Trieste. The opposing factions totalled 1,200 men, and they sang themselves into the fight with stirring patriotic airs.

New Atlantic Steamers.

London, Nov. 24.—(C. A. P.)—Nothing whatever is known at the London offices of the G.T.R. regarding the rumored negotiations with the Allan line. The same may be said with reference to the construction of a new depot at Montreal. Also the reported deal between the German shipping and Canadian railway companies is without foundation. The new service is purely a German enterprise and is working on straight business lines with the railways.

STAGE SCENERY.

Modern Settings Tax the Ingenuity of the Builders.

The big scenic artists do little actual painting beyond making the model, unless they have a panoramic effect. That they do themselves, standing on the paint bridge, many feet from the floor, while the canvas is raised or lowered. The panoramic effects are hard to handle. One difficulty is to avoid fluttering when a draft sweeps across the stage. Mountains that tremble hazily are not conducive to illusion.

With the elaborate productions of late years the importance of the builder of scenery has increased, says Everybody's Magazine. Formerly, when the scenery consisted merely of canvas stretched over a wooden frame, it was simple enough. But the struggle for realism and sensational effects has developed difficult problems for the builder of stage scenery to solve. Every piece of scenery must be made so that it can be folded into strips five feet nine inches wide, because the doors of the baggage cars in which it is transported are only six feet in breadth. Also every piece must be light and so constructed that one scene can be removed and another put in place within ten minutes. It may take thirty hours of continuous work to get the scenery "set up," to use a technical expression, after it is brought into the theater. After that the work of changing a scene is comparatively easy.

A DOGS' CLUB.

London's Luxurious Resort For Aristocratic Canine Pets.

London is the only city in the world boasting a dogs' club. The club is in a pleasant suit of rooms near the Trocadero and close to Regent street. Handsome rugs cover the floors, the windows are veiled in lace and silk, and luxurious sofas are ranged against the walls, while a profusion of soft pillows are scattered about for the comfort of aristocratic dogs who prefer the floor for a nap. Dainty satin lined wicker baskets are provided for the smaller pets. The membership fee is half a sovereign, but this does not include meals, baths or tips to the attendants.

Ladies going shopping or to the theater leave their pugs and poodles at the club and give the attendant in charge at the time a few shillings for looking after it, but if the dog is fed half a crown is charged. This pays for a mutton chop and milk. A whole crown provides the little animal with minced chicken. For a half sovereign Fido is bathed, brushed and perfumed, and if he is a French poodle his hair is carefully curled. A veterinary is attached to the club to see that only dogs in perfect health are admitted, all sick members being quarantined in a separate room. Blankets, boots, collars, harness, soaps and brushes and all the accessories of a fashionable dog's toilet as well as dog medicines are sold at the club.—New York Press.

A Candid Critic.

"A criticism that has helped me a great deal in my work came from a man to whom I took a picture to be framed," said a young woman who spends much of her time copying in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "As the picture progressed my friends told me it was fine. Some of the other copyists said it had value, character, good coloring and all those things, and even one of the guards in the gallery got real friendly one day and remarked that it was the best copy of that picture he had seen. I began to think that maybe, after all, my several years of study were beginning to bear fruit. At the framer's I picked out a nice frame, and the framer began to figure on the cost.

"'I'll tell you, miss,' he said, 'that frame will come to $3.98. If I were you I'd get something cheaper for that picture.'"—New York Sun.

"Setting the River on Fire."

In old English times, when each family was obliged to sift its own flour, it sometimes happened that an energetic man would turn his sieve so rapidly as to cause it to catch fire. The style of sieve used in those days was called a "temse," and it became a customary saying that a lazy man would never set the temse on fire. Now, it happens that the name of the river Thames is pronounced like the name of this old flour sieve, and after many years, when the old fashioned temse was forgotten, it was thought that setting the temse on fire meant setting the river on fire, and that is why today we say that a stupid person will never set the river on fire.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario, are located the curasaline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where tratments for nerous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

The Ghost of Lochrain Castle

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson—Author of "The Princess Passes," "The Lightning Conductor," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY MRS. C. N. WILLIAMSON

"I'm glad I don't believe in ghosts!" she said to herself. "On such a night"—— The sentence broke off short in Elspeth's thoughts, and her heart gave a leap. Just behind her head there was a new sound, which neither mice nor rats could have made, a queer, metallic sound, like the clinking of a chain or a jingling of keys one against another. Once and again it came; then, the top of a high heel on a stone stair.

The girl's blood knocked at her temples. She sat up in bed and listened through the thick beating in her ears. The sound was fainter now, as if farther away. With hands that shook a little she found the candle and matches on a small table by the bedside, and struck a light which glowed small and yellow in the white moonhaze.

All was still now, as she waited, and the impression she had had of something strange and horrifying began to fade. She must have imagined the jingling, and the tap, tap of little heels. It was well known that mice could make all kinds of extraordinary noises, scuttling about in the walls of the tower, a glorious playground for the mouse tribe. How stupid she was to have a fright, she who had boasted of her courage, and said that she "hoped the tower was haunted!" Now, she would blow out the candle and force herself to sleep, or she would not be at her best to begin work to-morrow morning.

Down she flung herself among the big pillows again, but scarcely had she begun conscientiously to count sheep jumping over a gate, when a soft, heavy weight brushed against the wall which was one with the head of the bed. A faint cry followed, sounding as if it came from somewhere above, and again the tap, tap, tap of heels.

Elspeth did not sit up in bed this time. She lay still as if frozen, her eyes staring wide, her ears strained to catch a troubled murmur of voices. It was as if a man and woman talked together, and then came footsteps mingled with the metallic clinking in which the girl had tried to disbelieve.

She no longer struggled to be brave. Cold and shaking with terror she sprang out of bed, and ran, pattering on her bare feet, out into the tower room.

There in the moonlight which filtered through the two windows left uncurtained, she could see the objects which had already become familiar to her eyes. Somehow, they did the details of life, soon to be her everyday life.

"Nonsense—nonsense — nonsense!" she repeated angrily, half aloud, glad to hear the sound of her own voice. "It's nothing. What could it be unless I dreamed it? Oh, why can't I get this lamp lighted?"

Soon she had the rosy glow shining through the fleecy silk of the lamp shade, but not satisfied with that, she must have all the candles as were a comfort, suggesting as they well. The light was like a friend. She could think now, ask herself questions, and answer reasonably.

What had the housekeeper told her? That she would be alone in the tower at night. In a room on the ground floor, the hotel carpenter worked by day; in the room above that, furniture and luggage were stored. Next, came her own floor, and over it—what? Mrs. Warden's explanations had gone no further; but Elspeth had noticed that the newly restored, winding staircase ended outside her room. The way beyond was blocked up with brick, therefore there could have been no voices, no footsteps, no tapping of heels. She must have dreamed the sounds. Besides, even if the staircase leading to the floor above were not obstructed, the walls were far too thick for noises such as she had fancied to penetrate to her room; and, at all events, that alcove where the bed stood was not a place people would pass in going up the stairs. But—if there were such things as ghosts, after all?

No, she would not let her thoughts turn that way. If she did—if she once indulged herself in such foolishness, there would be an end to the peace and pleasure in this tower room, to which she had looked forward. She would be sensible, but there was no use in going back to bed, until she should feel sleepy. She would grow more and more nervous lying there, imagining stupid things. Just for this one night she would allow herself to sit up and read, and to-morrow she would probably find out some perfectly simple explanation of the sounds which had seemed so ghostly. She would explore a little, and understand her surroundings thoroughly, before another night should fall.

She took up the volume of Scott which she had begun to read at dinner, but, as if to prove that she was not mistress of her nerves, she started so sharply at the noise of a scampering rat behind the wainscot, that the book fell to the floor. It lay open, on its face, and a square bit of blank paper escaped from some hiding place among the yellow, musty-smelling pages.

Elspeth picked up the scrap, and after all it was not blank. Upon the side which had lain next the floor, some one had sketched the face of a young boy. The penciled lines had faded, the paper was the color of old ivory, and the collar and tie suggested by a few light strokes were of quaint fashion. But the face was strikingly handsome, and so individual as to convince Elspeth that as a likeness the little sketch must have been a success. In one corner there were initials, and a date, but they had been blurred either deliberately or by accident, and Elspeth held the paper close to the light without being able to decipher them. Suddenly as she studied the faint lettering, something seemed to fall from above, past her eyes—something swift and small, from which the light struck a gleam as if from a ruby, and at the same instant the ruby was shattered in a red splash upon the sketch.

With a cry Elspeth sprang to her feet, still mechanically holding the bit of paper. The pictured face of the boy was stained red; there was a red liquid smear on her thumb and finger, and as she stared, horrified, dumfounded, again there was a swift, ruby flash before her eyes.

CHAPTER III.

Instantly the words of the housekeeper leaped into the girl's mind. The bell! The bell by which she could summon the night porter—where was it? Ah, she remembered, and almost as quickly as the thought had flashed into her mind her finger was hovering over the electric button.

A second more, and the summons would have gone flashing over the wire; but something seemed to restrain Elspeth's hand, as if it had been seized and forcibly held back. "No!" she said, half aloud, "I won't do it." And with great force of self-control, she turned her back on the bell, which meant help and human companionship, if she chose to have it.

"Very likely they have had the same kind of trouble here before with their secretaries," the girl thought. "Mr. McGowan told me the one from the neighborhood whom they had had before couldn't manage the work, but I'm sure he looked odd when he said it, and perhaps there was more behind. Probably they're expecting me to make a fuss of some sort, though I don't come from the neighborhood, and am not supposed to have heard the story of this Tower, whatever it is. Maybe the other girl knew it beforehand. But it doesn't matter, I won't make a fuss! I boasted that I was brave, and I'm going to stand it somehow, if it kills me. It can't be ghosts; ghosts don't have blood. The chances are that some one to-night has been playing a horrid trick on me. Well, they shan't get any satisfaction from it! I'm going to stop on here, and in this room, if I have to stay awake all night, and work all day, every day, till whoever it is gets tired."

This forceful determination poured courage into Elspeth's chilled veins, as if she had been drinking strong wine. Instead of completing the havoc already made in her spirit by terror, as for a few seconds it had threatened to do, the fall of ruddy drops from the ceiling had undone the work of the strange sounds behind the walls. The girl was even calm enough now to regret the damage to the sketch she had found in the old volume of Scott, and to attempt repairing it by pouring a stream of water over the paper while the red spot was fresh and wet. In spite of her efforts, however, a stain was left, but the vivid red was changed to a pale pink, which gave an effect as if the smiling face of the boy had been washed over with a faint flesh color. The penciled lines, faded before, were still more faded by the application of water; still, they were not obliterated, and Elspeth was vaguely glad. She did not know who the boy had been; if he lived, he must be an elderly man now, judging by the fashion of his dress; she would probably never learn anything more of his story, even if it had been worth hearing. Nevertheless, she was interested, and said to herself that, as she was apparently connected in some distant way with the Lochrain family, through her father's people, the Deans, the boy of the sketch was perhaps a cousin of hers, far removed. This house had always been the home of the Lochrains until lately, when it had been bought for an hotel, and as everything in it, furniture, books and pictures, had been the property of the Lochrains, it was likely that the boy was a member of the famly.

"I'll be worthy of their blood, if it's really in my veins," Elspeth thought, "and I won't be a coward in their house."

As if for a reward of courage, no further sounds came, and no more of those ruby drops fell from the ceiling. Had it not been for the pink stain on the sketch the girl might have begun to fancy by and by that it had all been a bad dream; but the practical side of her nature was in the ascendant now, and she did not fancy that. She realized, and acknowledged to herself that she had had good cause to be frightened, but her fighting blood was roused, and she meant sooner or later to have an explanation of everything that had happened.

"I will find out for myself if I can, without confiding in anybody," she decided.

The one thing the girl could not do, however, was to go back to bed. She sat up in her dressing gown until moonlight faded into dawn. Then, when the Tower room was gray with morning light, she lay down and actually went to sleep.

It was after 7 o'clock when she waked, and she had scarcely more than three hours of rest. Nevertheless, she felt well and strangely buoyant, helped by excitement, to go through whatever new experiences might be in store for her.

The first thing she did was to look carefully at the ceiling for any trace of red stain, but nothing was visible, though the early sunshine was pouring in through an east window. There was, however, a wide crack in one of the dark oak beams which crossed the ceiling, at exactly the spot, so far as she could calculate, whence the ruby-like drops had fallen, splashing down on to the sketch. But many more red drops might have come through such a crack in the black wood without leaving a visible mark. If she were to find out the mystery it would not be in such an obvious way as by a crimson stain on the ceiling.

Elspeth bathed and dressed quickly, and was almost ready to go down when the servant, who had brought her dinner in the evening, knocked at the door, with an attractive-looking breakfast tray. A delicious fragrance of tea, crisply fried bacon and toast, greeted her nostrils refreshingly, and she was more than ever glad, as the pleasant commonplaceness of everyday life seemed to come in at the door like an atmosphere, that she had not called any one to her rescue in the night. If she had, by this time the news would have spread over the hotel, and every servant would know that "the new secretary had had a fright."

Even as it was she thought the waiter looked at her with a furtive interest, different from the look of last night. It was as if he were expecting something. "I hope you rested well, miss," he said civilly, and Elspeth, thanking him, answered with serene cheerfulness that she had never been better in her life than she was this morning. The best of it was that it was perfectly true. The girl felt ready for anything.

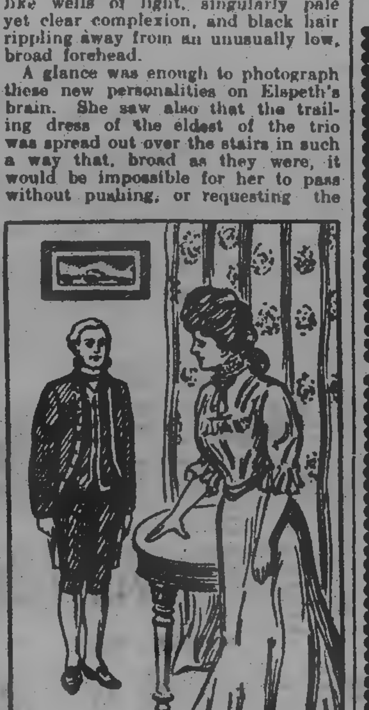
As soon as she had finished her breakfast, she started to thread her way to Mr. McGowan's room, but she had not yet "got her bearings" in this immense and rambling old house, and to reach the part she wished to find was easier said than done. After some wandering, she came out through a corridor into a square hall of considerable size, which she was sure she had not seen before. However, there was the stairway, which descended in the middle, and rather than retrace her steps, perhaps to be lost again, she decided that it would be better to go down. On the floor below she would probably meet servants of the hotel, who would put her in the right way.

There were, however, several ladies standing in a group on the third or fourth step. Elspeth waited for a moment at a distance, thinking that they would go up or down; then, seeing that they did not move, and that the stairway was very broad, she thought that she might pass without disturbing them. She moved forward rather timidly, conscious that she was a paid employe, and that it would be a grave offence for one in her position to discommode guests. Drawing nearer, she saw that one of the three ladies was the beautiful young girl with whom she had traveled up from London yesterday. This morning she wore a short, white serge dress, with dainty white shoes, and had on a hat, therefore she was presumably just going out, or had just come in, early as it was.

One of her companions on the stairway was an elderly and rather peculiar looking lady with cameo features, faded light hair, arranged in a would-be-artistic fashion, and an aesthetic gown more suitable for a London boudoir at tea time than a Scotch hydro in the morning.

The third figure was that of a very striking woman of perhaps thirty-two or three, foreign certainly, Jewish perhaps, with magnificent dark eyes like wells of light, singularly pale yet clear complexion, and black hair rippling away from an unusually low, broad forehead.

A glance was enough to photograph these new personalities on Elspeth's brain. She saw also that the trailing dress of the eldest of the trio was spread out over the stairs in such a way that, broad as they were, it would be impossible for her to pass without pushing, or requesting the wearer to move. She was close upon the group now, but was on the point of turning back after all, when something happened.



"I hope you rested well, miss," he said.

"Why, it was Captain Oxford!" exclaimed the lady with the trailing dress. "Didn't you know that, Lady Hilary?"

"No, I—I—" the girl stammered, and tottered slightly, as if recoiling from a blow across the face.

Instantly Elspeth saw a way of saving her from the shame of an involuntary revelation. "I beg your pardon," she said briskly. "I'm afraid I stepped on your dress, and pulled you back. I'm so sorry, I do hope I haven't broke any stitches.

With a start, Lady Hilary Vane looked round, and her eyes met Elspeth's, first with surprise, then recognition, then gratitude. The understanding of what the stranger had done for her, and why, was so clear in that lovely look that the young stenographer felt herself blushing. She also felt extraordinarily pleased that she had been able to do even so small a thing for this girl, and wished she might have the chance to do more, much more.

"I—why, I believe you must have touched my dress, but it is nothing at all," answered Lady Hilary, quickly recovering self-control like a brave girl. "You were trying to pass. How stupid of me to get in the way. Good morning, Lady Ardcliffe; good morning, Countess; I was just on my way to send off some letters."

"She felt she couldn't bear to go on with the conversation, whatever it was," thought Elspeth, who could not help wondering what had been said about Lady Hilary Vane's friend, Captain Oxford, which had made her start back as if she would fall.

Now, the two girls were going down almost side by side, but Elspeth did not speak, or glance at the other. She was the inferior, and it was not her place to remember that there had been a meeting before. Lady Hilary, however, chose to remember, and addressed Elspeth.

"You were in the railway carriage with us yesterday," she said, in a voice as sweet as her face.

"Yes," Elspeth answered. And then, lest the girl of high degree should mistake her, for an equal, and regret condescension when she knew the truth—"I have come here to be secretary and stenographer for the manager, Mr. McGowan."

"Oh, have you? I think that must be very interesting work," said Lady Hilary, on the same step with Elspeth now. "You must be very clever to get such a good engagement, and be independent, while you're so young. I quite envy you. I should love to be able to make my own living."

Elspeth laughed a little. "I don't think, if you had to, you would like it much, really."

"Oh, I would. You don't know. It isn't as if we were rich. But—there is something I want to say to you, though it seems rather odd, saying it to a stranger. You were very kind to me just now, and saved me from—from great mortification. I understand that you must have noticed what we were saying in the train yesterday—quite inadvertently, of course—otherwise you wouldn't have been so quick and sympathetic in coming to my rescue."

"I hardly know what did make me do it," said Elspeth. "I think it was just—a kind of instinct."

"Well, anyway, I thank you. I wouldn't for a great deal have had Lady Ardcliffe gossiping about me, and saying that I almost fell when I heard that it was Captain Oxford who was hurt last night. She isn't malicious, but she gossips about such things, because she's rather silly and sentimental; and as for Countess Radepolski, I don't know her at all. Lady Ardcliffe had just introduced me as they were coming up from their "beauty baths," as they call them. But somehow, I don't much mind you having seen me, for I feel that, if we were to know each other, I should like you very much."

"I should love you," exclaimed Elspeth, impulsively, "and if there should come a time when I really could do something for you—a big thing I mean—you don't know how gladly I'd do it."

"Thank you, I believe you would," answered the other girl, holding out her hand. "I would come to you, if I needed anything you could do—oh, but already there's something. You say you are Mr. McGowan's secretary. Then perhaps you know all about this strange affair of Captain Oxford—whether it's true, as Lady Ardcliffe would have had me believe, that he was hurt seriously last night. At first she told me the story, and didn't say who was the hero of it. It was only just as you came that she said it was Captain Oxford."

"I don't know anything yet, but I'll find out, and let you know as quickly as I can," said Elspeth. "I'm on my way to Mr. McGowan's room now, to begin work. I'm not sure if I can ask him questions, but if I see Mr. Grant, I'm certain he'll tell me. In any case, if you can wait in the big hall for a few minutes I'll make some excuse to come out, even if I've no news. If I've learned anything I'll write it on a piece of paper; if I haven't I'll write the one word 'nothing,' and do better next time. I'll pass you and say, 'Here is the memorandum you asked for.'"

By this time, the two girls had arrived in the great hall, which was almost deserted at this hour, except for a few men reading their letters or morning papers. They separated without another word, but Elspeth's mind was busy. What was the "strange affair of Captain Oxford," which had occurred last night, but of which she knew nothing? He had been hurt, Lady Hilary said. Could it possibly be that there was any connection between this event and those which had given her a night of wakefulness? The thought seemed absurd, yet Elspeth could not completely banish it from her head. "I do hope, for Lady Hilary's sake, that whatever has happened, it's nothing to bring discredit upon Captain Oxford," she said to herself. "It's certain that he's come to Lochrain to be near her, and there's no doubt she cares for him, though her mother is so anxious to keep them apart."

Elspeth had feared that, owing to her delay with Lady Hilary, she might be late for her appointment with Mr. McGowan, but to her relief neither he nor Mr. Grant was in the room when she knocked at the door, which stood slightly ajar. As it was empty, she went in, and a moment or two after Mr. Grant appeared.

"I hope Mr. McGowan hasn't been wanting me, and gone away?" she asked, when they had exchanged "good mornings"; "I'm five minutes behind time"——

"No, he has not wanted you, I know," Grant reassured her. "He's been detained by the doctor, who has come down from the room of a gentleman—Captain Oxford, who had a queer adventure last night, and got hurt. Perhaps you've heard about it from one of the servants. It's all over the house already. You know how these things go."

Elspeth replied that she had heard nothing, and begged Mr. Grant to tell her what had happened.

"Why, no one knows exactly," said Grant, who was evidently more willing to be drawn out concerning this story than he had been regarding the haunted room. "Captain Oxford is a young officer on leave. I believe there's some old wound of his, got in the Boer war, that's been bothering him, and he was recommended to come here. Anyway, he arrived yesterday morning, I think it was. I don't know what he was doing out of the house after 12 o'clock last night, for everybody goes to bed early here; but be that as it may, he was out, and was shot at—in fact, struck by a bullet in the arm already wounded—the left, fortunately for him. He says he had a struggle with a man in the dark and that, though the fellow—a poacher I suppose he must have been, and mistook Captain Oxford for a keeper—got clear away. The dog which goes everywhere with the captain must have bitten him, the proof being that when they came to the house the collie's mouth was covered with blood."

Elspeth shuddered a little, remembering the wet rubies that had come drip, dripping through her ceiling and had splashed upon her book. It was nonsense to connect one affair with the other, she said to herself again, as she had said before, but the thought was in her mind, and she rejoiced more than before than she had gone through her strange ordeal in silence.

"I really believe there's a mystery of some sort," Grant was continuing in rather a confidential way, and it was all Elspeth could do to keep back the words which flashed into her brain: "If there is, maybe I shall be the one to find it out." But that idea was nonsense, too, of course, coming only because her nerves were overstrained, and she hastened to ask Mr. Grant a few more question to which the answers might be of interest to Lady Hilary.

"What kind of mystery do you mean?" she inquired.

"Oh, about Captain Oxford being out at that time, for he seems to avoid saying anything about that part of his adventure, doesn't want it spoken of at all. He just managed to get to the house, and the night porter called our resident doctor."

"Was the wound serious?" asked Elspeth.

"No. He lost a good deal of blood, but he will be about again in a day or two, the doctor says, with his arm in a sling. The bullet was extracted without difficulty; it was only a flesh wound, but being on the left side it might easily, if the bullet had entered the body, have proved fatal."

"Strange that a poacher should fire at a supposed keeper with a bullet, wasn't it?" remarked Elspeth thoughtfully.

"Yes. That's one of the queer bits of the business, though it will probably turn out to be simple enough at last. The police are already looking into it, but Captain Oxford hasn't helped them much so far. Mr. McGowan is exceedingly annoyed that such a thing should have happened

TRAFFIC HAS BEEN RESUMED TRACK FREE FROM WRECKAGE

Traffic is going on without interruption on the C.P.R. again. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon the wrecking crews at work at Sandbank had the line leared and the trains have since been running on schedule time. Of course a large amount of the wreckage has still to be cleared away, but the track was freed from obstructions about three o'clock yesterday. A number of freights which were tied up at Peterborough, on account of the wreck, proceeded on their way last night. The yard engine was kept busy all night getting them in shape to start on their trips. The engines will be taken to Montreal and it is likely that two of them can be put in shape for use again. One of them will be reduced to scrap iron.

Toronto, Nov. 24.—Officials commenced an investigation at the Union Station to-day into yesterday's wreck at Sandbank in which three trainmen were killed. The inquiry is being conducted in private, but it is said the evidence confirms the reported carelessness of some one in leaving open the switch in which the standing train was waiting.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPES IN THE WRECK AT SANDBANK

Men in Second Engine of Double-header Had Close Shave —One of Them Injured—Inquest Opened

Further details have been secured of the wreck near Pontypool early yesterday morning.

The dead are;—Edward Finley, engineer; James Sweet, fireman, and Albert Conroy, brakeman, all of West Toronto. The only other person injured was Engineer Edward Dorricott, 865 Dovercourt road, Dorricott, who received some nasty scalp wounds and a bruised back, but whose injuries are not serious.

A west-bound freight train (first section No. 54) was standing in the Sandbank siding to await the passing of two trains—the midnight passenger train for Montreal and a double-headed freight (No. 55) from Havelock. The former having passed safely it is said that the brakeman of the standing train, W. C. Reed not knowing that another train was to follow, opened the switch, with fatal result. The double-header came along about 12.20 a.m. and smashed with fearful impact into the waiting train. The engineer and fireman of the leading engine and the brakeman of the second were instantly killed. No one on the east-bound train was injured. The leading engine was literally torn to shreds, and little more than the boiler of the second remained intact. The standing engine was damaged slightly in comparison, but the front truck was knocked clean from under it. A score of cars were smashed to kindling wood, several were thrown bodily into the adjoining fields and freight, including bags of flour, rolls of paper, barrels of salt herring and a great mixture of other stuff was strewn everywhere.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPES.

That the escape of Engineer Dorricott and Fireman W. A. Taylor, both of whom were on the second engine was miraculous could readily be realized by anyone who saw the piles of debris out of which they were able to crawl unaided immediately after the wreck. Conductor John Hay, of No. 55, also escaped uninjured. According to the story told by Dorricott, they knew nothing whatever of the waiting train, which was inferior to them and bound to make way for them. Their instructions were to proceed right through, and they had no intimation that anything was wrong until it was too late. "Everything happened so quickly then," Dorricott said, nursing his bandaged head, "that I didn't have time to think. I only heard a crash, saw a flash, and the next thing I remember was climbing out of the wreck. It was five hours before I got my head attended to." Taylor said; "I only know that those poor fellows are gone and that Conroy was with us in our van, while we are here, and we are very thankful."

INQUEST OPENED.

Dr. A. S. Tilley was called from Bowmanville to act as coroner over the dead bodies, and a jury was gathered from among residents of the neighborhood and sworn in on the spot at about nine o'clock. The inquest was adjourned until Thursday evening at Burketon Junction. The body of Finley, which was viewed by the jurymen, was a horrible sight, being terribly mangled. Following is the jury which has been sworn in: Thomas Bailey, foreman; Wm. Corbett, John Corbett, Charles Gibson, Hugh McCullough, Thomas Tuck, Robert Byers, Jerry Henry, Samuel Wright, Samuel Robins, and Theadore McKnight.

Edward Finlay, who lived on Pacific avenue, West Toronto, was married and about 34 years of age. He leaves no children, and his wife is at present in Plainsville, Ohio. Finley joined the C.P.R. about ten years ago, and was laid off some time back. He went to Plainsville and had resided there till about a week ago, when he was reinstated in the company's service, and this was his third trip since rejoining.

Bert Conroy a bright, popular young fellow, was nineteen years of age, lived with his parents at 99 Dundas street, West Toronto, and entered the company's service about six weeks ago.

Fireman Sweet was not very well known in West Toronto. He was recently transferred from Ottawa. He boarded on McMurray avenue and was 21 years of age. His people live at Niagara Falls.

THE OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—The C.P.R. gave out the following official statement regardin gthe wreck near Pontypool:—"While an east-bound freight train was on Sandbank siding early this morning a west-bound freight collided with the same. Engineer Finley, his fireman, James Sweet, and brakeman P. Conroy, were killed and Engineer Dorricott, and Fireman Taylor injured but not seriously. The east-bound switch was found to have been turned for the siding, supposed to have been done by the brakeman after the passage of another train."

Toronto, Nov. 24.—Mr. James Osborne, superintendent of the division in which the accident occurred, who was early at the scene of the wreck, returned to the city last night. When asked for a statement Mr. Osborne said that an investigation would be opened at the Union Station this morning. He also said that the brakeman (who it is alleged by some, left the switch open) was still missing. "The accident will be thoroughly investigated," concluded Superintendent Osborne.

LAST GOOD RAIN WAS ON AUG. 10th

So Said Mr. J. H. Fife of Otonabee To-day

Mr J H Fife, of Otonabee, who is in the city today attending the sessions of the county council, stated today that there hasn't been a rain, productive of any good, since the 10th of August. He was of the opinion that a rain like that which took place today, was of little good. Never was the country in such need of a heavy rain as it is at the present time. Many of the wells in the country are dry and farmers have to take their cattle long distances to water.

Joseph Johnston, a well known farmer of Brussarth, was found dead in his barn.

OBITUARY

MRS. GEORGE ATCHISON.

A highly respected and much beloved resident of North Monaghan passed away when the death occurred of the wife of Mr. George Atchison, of the above township last Sunday. The late Mrs. Atchison had lived in the neighborhood in which her death occurred practically all her life and was held in the greatest regard by all who were acquainted with her. She was 49 years of age.

Deceased is survived by her husband, three daughters Mrs. Fairburn, of Smith township, and Mary and Carrie at home and two sons, William and Roland, both of whom resided with their mother. The late Mrs. Atchison was a member of the Presbyterian church at Springville and was a prominent and earnest worker in the church. Interment took place in the Fraserville cemetery on Tuesday.

HAVE YOU $25 TO INVEST?

PUT IT INTO ACTUAL MINING.

If you are interested in mining you want your money in something having merits and possibilities above the average proposition. You look for a good investment. We believe that investors are entitled to more consideration for the money they put up than is usually accorded to them, therefore, this is a "ground-floor" offering to everyone.

The Fenton Mines Syndicate will be operated on the lines of a close corporation. It is not a promoter's stock-selling scheme, but a mining and business man's opportunity. Its system of organization is simple and so fair that it appeals to all investors. And it is so conservative that its main support comes from the best posted mining investors.

The ordinary mining company has but one legitimate source of revenue. Its dividends must come from the profits derived from the shipment of ore.

This syndicate is a co-operative association in which the investor participates in every form of profit that the prospector and promoter make; an organization of investors run in the interest of the people who put up the money.

The ordinary mining company has the disadvantage of requiring to purchase properties and in case the venture does not win, the company's entire capital is tied up.

One of the best methods of operation is under what may be termed "the bond and lease system" and by its use the syndicate will not have its capital invested in properties. The party also operating under the leasing system will have a bond in the property, so that if it proves as valuable as it is believed to be, it can be acquired at the price fixed before development work had proved the existence of valuable ore bodies. Thus the fruits of its money will be secured for the syndicate, not solely for the term of the lease, but for the future as well. A reasonable percentage of net profits from the shipment of ore is also to be set aside for a sinking fund, to be applied toward the acquisition of properties. This sinking fund will accumulate as the ore is produced and when the bond becomes due if it is advantageous to acquire the property the cash is ready to be so used.

The syndicate is seeking public subscriptions because its organisers are not men of large means and more money is needed for pushing to a successful conclusion development work upon highly promising properties in the very best sections of Cobalt and Montreal River Districts. Enough work has already been done to encourage exploiting the properties systematically. Experienced miners and prospectors say that they have never seen better ground and the showings are certainly such as to justify active mining operations.

We do not want to over-estimate the chances and do not care to make rash promises, but as in every instance to date values have been found to increase as greater depth is attained on adjoining claims, record-breaking ore will, it is believed, be encountered on these properties at a greater depth.

In commercial mining, management is one of the most important features. You must have men who know how in any business to make a success of it. Therefore, the best officers for a mining enterprise are those who know the most about practical mining. The name of a member of parliament or a bank director may look very nice and prove enticing as an officer of a syndicate or company, but we don't think it would make as much for its prosperity as that of clear-headed mining men, who know pay ore when they see it and the cheapest way to get it out of the ground.

The active management of this syndicate is in the hands of the following men, who have all made mining their life work and are experienced in every branch of that business.

Sometimes there are real opportunities in mining and this is one of the times. It is an opportunity to become associated with men with practical experience in mining, covering everything from active service with the pick in the prospect field, to superintendence of operations, and who realize that with the needed funds in hand they they will be able to score a much larger and quicker success and make more money for themselves by offering the public perhaps "a better run for their money" than has ever been offered them before. The opportunity is made so good that every investor should act quickly and thereby assist in financing the syndicate, so that we can get to work and open the ore bodies without delay. No liability to members in excess of subscriptions.

While we have a strong, conservative proposition, it is not a "sure thing" pet, and we only solicit the subscriptions of those who have the means and are willing to take a small risk for big profits. No subscriptions for less than $25 will be received and bear in mind that this is a limited offer. AS ONLY 2000 MEMBERSHIP SHARES ARE OPEN FOR SUBSCRIPTION.

MARINE INQUIRY CONTINUES IN SESSION AT ST. JOHN

One Agent Borrowed From Firms.

Witnesses Testify to Lending Marine Agent Sums From $50 to $2,500.

St. John, N.B., Nov. 25.—Judge Cassels resumed his enquiry into the affairs of the Marine Department yesterday. Several witnesses were examined and it was shown that J. F. Harding, agent of the Department, had been in the habit of borrowing money extensively from business men who sold supplies to the Government through him.

These loans, according to Judge Cassels, were simply "greasing the hands" of the officials.

Mr. Watson, on the opening of the enquiry, said he found that the bulk of expenditures, or recommendations passed through the hands of F. J. Harding, the agent; John Kelly, inspector of lights, and Capt. Bissett of the Lansdowne.

In 1904-05 the expenditures here were $275,782, passing through the hands of the agent; 1905-06 expenditures were $255,560, and in 1906-07 totals $222,495. He also found that the latest patronage list in use contained one hundred and forty names, while the one used in 1905 had only fifty-five names. He formally announced the abolition of the patronage system in St. John.

Charles McDonald, manager of the St. John Iron Works, testified as to transactions with the Government. The company had built buoys for the Department, and had supplied materials bought elsewhere, and only a small portion of the work had been received by tendering. He told of a loan to Capt. Smith, Department agent, and said he had written to Smith for payment. The amount was entered on the company's books, by the check number, but Smith's name was not on the books. Another loan of $50 was not entered.

Replying to Judge Cassels, McDonald fancied the payments might be in order to make things pleasant with the officers.

McDonald said he had received a note for $150 from Smith two weeks ago, Smith saying he had been "under hot fire in Quebec."

Another man, Morris, had received small presents from McDonald as a sort of commission, and Capt. Bissett got some whisky.

Asked if he had any paper of Mr. Harding, the agent, witness produced a check dated May 9, 1908, promising to pay bearer $575. For this check witness said he had given to Mr. Harding $575 in cash.

His lordship said it was simply a case of greasing the hands of the officials. If Mr. Harding did not choose to pay it back; nothing would be said.

Witness said Mr. Harding always paid his checks.

During 1907 the transactions amounted to possibly $900. He could not remember the amount during 1908.

The fact that borrowing operations of J. F. Harding were not confined to one firm was shown at the afternoon session, when W. E. Vroom, coal broker, and John E. Moore, lumber merchant and tugboat owner, both admitted having advanced large sums without other security than Mr. Harding's check or note. Charles McDonald was again on the stand and gave evidence that he had loaned amounts totalling about $5,000 per year for short terms during the last several years without interest. He admitted that his firm had a practical monopoly of Government work. He was allowed to stand down until to-day to give him time to ascertain how many of his loans Harding had paid.

W. E. Vroom of Vroom & Arnold, who has during these years sold $20,000 worth of coal to the Department, testified that he had a running account with Harding to record his loans and produced his books showing accounts. He cashed checks for Harding regularly about once a month, taking Harding's check in exchange. He regarded the transactions simply as a matter of accommodating a friend and did not charge interest. He declared he would do the same if Harding was not agent of the Marine Department, but admitted that it now placed Mr. Harding in an awkward position.

Chief interest centered in the evidence of John E. Moore. During the past four years he had supplied the Department with lumber and had hired his tugboats to the Department. The price for all but two purchases of lumber had been fixed between himself and Mr. Harding. Moore's books showed only one of these transactions and it was explained by the fact that Moore was out of town at the time and his partner, Jarvis Wilson, Jr., knowing of the relations between Moore and Harding, had advanced $480 and entered the amount in the cash book.

Moore said he had never entered the others, as they were only short term loans, though some of them ran from six months to a year.

A note of Harding's for $1,800, which was held by Moore, was produced. Moore testified that this was in renewal of balance of note dated Oct. 17, 1907, for $2,500, on which Harding had since paid $700 in two instalments. He had lent Harding money with his check as security regularly for several years. In one year it amounted to $3,000. He had never asked Harding what he needed the money for and did not know if he speculated in stocks.

STEAMER ON FIRE

And 200 Believed to Have Lost Lives.

Steamer Was Only a Mile From Harbor When the Fire Broke Out.

Special to the Review.

Valetta, Isle of Man., Nov. 25.—Nearly two hundred persons, passengers and crew of the Ellerman Line steamer, Sardinia, are believed to have perished to-day when the steamer was destroyed by fire just after she had sailed for Alexandria, Egypt.

The Sardinia was scarcely a mile off Grade Harbor when the first sign of fire appeared but with a strong wind to fan the flames the whole ship soon was ablaze and the passengers and crew had scarcely a chance for their lives.

Most of the passengers were Levantines, Maltese and Egyptians.

ARKANSAS WAS STORM SWEPT FIFTY KILLED IN CYCLONE

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 25.—Two tornadoes, one north and the other southbound, swept over West Arkansas on Monday, destroying many lives and much property.

It is estimated that at least 30, and possibly 50, lives are lost, and the property loss is placed at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The counties through which the tornado passed are Lafayette, Columbia, Miller, Pike, Howard, Hempstead, Montgomery, Yell, Pope, Johnson, Franklin and Carroll.

The storm was at its height when it swept through Piney, a German settlement on the Iron Mountain Railroad between Knoxville and London. From 12 to 20 persons were killed and about 30 injured at Russellville. Five lives are also reported to have been lost ten miles from Mulberry.

A report from Fort Smith says 25 lives were lost in towns outside of Piney and Mulberry. This despatch says that the destruction of Cravens was complete. Four persons were killed and two fatally injured and eight are missing.

At Cravens four persons are known to be dead, members of the family of John Rosin, a farmer, who were caught under the falling timbers of their home. L. G. Holt and wife, an aged couple, were seriously injured and may die.

The entire intermediate country has been laid waste by the wind and hail which followed, the hail in some places standing to a depth of six inches.

PETERBORO' MAN FINED AT LINDSAY

Was Charged With Being Drunk and Incapable

A Peterborough man drifted into town yesterday and proceeded to hit up the booze in a manner characteristic of the topers from that burg. A sudden weakness overcame him, and the police gave him the rest cure over night, and this morning Police Magistrate Jackson tried him on the charge of being drunk and incapable. He pleaded guilty to that charge and also to coming from Peterborough, and he was accordingly assessed $6.60.—Lindsay Post.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Geo. Munro, alias "Portland Fatty," arrested in New York, will fight extradition to Montreal on charges of bank burglaries.

At Winnipeg, John A. Fraser, proprietor of the Gordon Heights Dairy Co., while driving, was run down by a train and killed.

The Windsor city council will submit the question of Windsor taking power from Niagara to the ratepayers at the municipal elections in January.

Two New York firemen saved the lives of four men from the top flat of a seven-storey building on Canal street Monday night. The loss was $200,000.

GOVERNMENT BARGE SINKS

Acetylene Goes Down and Crew Are Saved With Difficulty.

Montreal, Nov. 25.—The Government barge Acetylene, with a crew of 11 men, loaded with gas buoy machinery, sank off Vercheres, right in the channel, at 7 o'clock last night.

Capt. Beliveau and his crew were rescued with great difficulty by the steamer Hosanna, which was some distance away at the time of the accident.

When taken out of the water the crew were thoroughly exhausted, the work of rescue being impeded by the darkness and fog.

The cause of the accident was overloading and there was no explosion. Eleven buoys are now floating down the river.

INDIANS ARE AFTER BRIDGE

Mr. D. Whetung, Jr. Waited Upon County Council To-day

Mr. Dan Whetung, jr. of Chemong, waited on the county council today in reference to the proposed bridge across Chemong lake from the Indian Reserve to Ennismore. The Indians have decided to contribute one-fifth of the cost of the bridge and are anxious that the county should make a grant as the Ontario and Dominion Governments have promised to give assistance if the county does.

FARTHING IS CHOSEN

Kingston Rector for Montreal Bishopric.

After Several Ballots Diocesan Synod Chooses Him to Succeed Late Bishop Carmichael.

Montreal, Nov. 25.—Very Rev. Dean Farthing of Kingston was last evening elected Anglican Bishop of Montreal by the Diocesan Synod to succeed the late Bishop Carmichael.

The vote was between Dean Farthing and Dean Evans. The former has been supported by the lay delegates throughout, but Dean Evans had the support of the clerical delegates.

On another ballot being taken last evening Dean Farthing secured a majority of both orders.

BISHOP FARTHING.

The new Bishop of Montreal was born in the United States in 1862 of English parents, and was educated in England. He held curacies at Woodstock and London, Ont., and two years ago was appointed dean of Ontario and rector of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston.

Clerical, necessary to elect, 50—Farthing, 56; Evans, 17; Dean Williams, Quebec, 16.

Lay, necessary to elect, 41—Farthing 57; Evans, 14.

Kingston, Nov. 25.—Dean Farthing intimates that he will accept the bishopric of Montreal to which he was elected yesterday by the Diocesan Synod.

ROCKEFELLOW'S INVESTMENTS

Oil King Says His Income Goes Into Railway Bonds.

New York, Nov. 25.—Closing his testimony in the federal suit to dissolve the Standard Oil Co., John D. Rockefeller threw some unexpected light upon the long popular question of what channels of investment he turns his tremendous earnings from the oil combination.

Mr. Rockefeller was loath to state the names of the railroads in which his investments were made, but did so after entering his objection.

He declared that his holdings in railroads consisted chiefly in bonds.

John D. Archbold, vice-president of the Standard Oil Co., proved a mine of detailed information under the direction of the company's counsel, regarding the early production of crude oil and the development of the pipe line system.

It is not unlikely that an adjournment will be taken to-night until next Monday.

Special Train Brought Large Number to Attend Masonic Lodge of Instruction

A Masonic Lodge of Instruction is being held in the local Masonic hall this afternoon and evening. A special train arrived here from Bowmanville, Port Hope and intermediate points and a large number of visitors are in the city. The event is an important one in Masonic circles.

CABLE AND TELEGRAPHIC

Immigration Only Half.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—For the first seven months of the present fiscal year the total immigration into Canada was only slightly over half the volume of the corresponding period in 1907.

The total number of arrivals from April 1 to Oct. 31 was 109,575, as compared with 212,024 last year. From the beginning of the calendar year to Oct. 31 there were 86,481 arrivals from ocean ports, as compared with 204,617 for the same period last year.

From the United States during the same period immigration was 50,238, as against 49,455, an increase of 783 over 1907.

To Probe Tuberculosis.

Montreal, Nov. 25.—A deputation of medical men waited on Premier Gouin yesterday and requested the appointment of a royal commission to investigate the spread of tuberculosis in the province, and consideration was promised. The members of the delegation said that the medical profession would tender their services free to the province in the matter.

It is expected that the commission will include Dr. E. P. Lachapelle, Dr. T. G. Roddick, Dr. J. E. Dube, C. M. Holt, K.C., and Lieut.-Col. J. H. Burlands.

Youth Attempts Assault.

Lindsay, Nov. 25.—A young fellow named Moon, from Scotch Line, near here, is said to have climbed into the house of a widow living near Scotch Line and attempted an assault. He is alleged to have hit the woman over the head with a piece of elm stick. The woman threw him to the floor, holding him, while her children summoned help.

Shah's Quick Change.

Teheran, Nov. 25.—The Shah already has repented of his proclamation posted in the mosques Monday in which it was set forth that the people, in spite of his promises, shall not have a constitution, and during the night he sent out orders to withdraw this proclamation from circulation and to destroy all copies of it.

Newspaper Building Wrecked.

St. Thomas, Nov. 25.—An explosion of gasoline used to operate the engine in the office of The Weekly News in Port Burwell completely destroyed the building and contents.

The proprietor, J. W. Burns, was severely burned. He was burned out in Merlin less than a year ago. His loss is $4,000.

Shoots Daughter and Son.

New York, Nov. 25.—Realizing that his home was about to be broken up because of his actions, Carl Loose, a baker, yesterday shot and killed his daughter Meta, aged 11, and probably fatally wounded his son Frederick, pastor of a Lutheran Church at Yale, S.D., while they were at breakfast.

Car Shops Burned.

Amherst, N.S., Nov. 25.—Fire last night destroyed the passenger shops of Rhodes, Curry & Co. The fire started at 7 o'clock and it is supposed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion.

The building destroyed was 360 feet long and 160 wide, and contained four tracks. The building contained four colonist sleepers for the I.C.R., and 12 baggage cars for the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the entire fittings and machinery were completely destroyed.

The loss is probably $125,000. Insurance $75,000, in small amounts in a number of companies.

Local Option Thrown Out.

Woodstock, Nov. 25.—The City Council by 5 to 4 Monday night refused to submit a local option bylaw in January, on the ground that the petition was not properly signed. Legal proceedings will likely be taken to compel a submission of the bylaw.

Will Revise Tariff.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Speaker Cannon issued a statement yesterday declaring that he was in favor of an honest revision of the tariff. He added that the people had voted for a revision and he believed that they would get the kind of a tariff that they voted for.

New Zealand Results.

Wellington, N.Z., Nov. 25.—(C.A.P.)—Second ballots give the Government 11 seats, the Opposition 9, Independents 2, one undecided.

The parties now stand: Government 45; Opposition 25; Independents 5. The Opposition gained 9 and the Independents 4.

Fleeing From Husband.

Toronto, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Annie Barlow, 35 years, with three trunks and two children, aged five and seven years, was taken off the 8.40 train from Owen Sound at Parkdale last night by Detectives Murray and Guthrie. They also removed Thomas Ratcliffe, also 35 years old, also of Owen Sound.

This action was taken at the request of the chief of police of the northern town, who charges the woman with theft of the trunk from her husband. Ratcliffe is charged with abducting the children.

The woman says that the man was just taking her to her home in England, and that she was leaving her husband, who abused her.

SOO SECURITIES SOLD TO CANADIAN IMPROVEMENT CO.

REED IS BLAMED

For the Wreck at Pontypool.

Investigation Being Made by C. P. R. Officials --- Several Witnesses Examined

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 25— Superintendent MacNeiley, of the C.P.R. began an investigation yesterday into the cause of the freight wreck near Pontypool. A number of employees immediately concerned were examined and the evidence all pointed to the conclusion that the collision was due solely to the fact that the brakeman, Reed, turned a switch when there was no reason for doing so. The eastbound freight had to take the siding at the west end to allow the express, also eastbound to pass it. The passenger train went by in safety and passed a westbound freight at Pontypool. The latter train then proceeded west and when it reached the ill-fated siding, Reed, who was on the east-bound train apparently threw the switch open at the east-end for some inexplicable reason, thus allowing the two freight engines to come together, head-on.

General Superintendent Osborne, of the C.P.R. declined that night to make any statement regarding the matter pending the result of the enquiry. He stated, however, that he had made enquiry of the agent at Burketon and ascertained that there was an ample supply of oil on hand, so that the accident was not due to any neglect on the part of the company.

Mr MacNeiley will continue his investigation at Peterborough today and a statement will be issued when he completes the work of getting evidence.

Reed has disappeared and it is not believed that he will return to face the consequences of his action.

Name Was Omitted

In the report of the death of Mr. John E. Howden in last evening's Review, the name of Mrs. Thos. Morrow, Edinburgh street, was inadvertently omitted as being one of the sisters who survive the deceased.

The Commercial Trust Co. of Philadelphia

Bought From Banks, Which Foreclosed on Loan Over a Year Ago.

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—A deal was completed here yesterday whereby the control of the $40,000,000 Lake Superior Corporation passes from Philadelphia financial institutions to interests represented jointly by New York and Philadelphia parties. President Lloyd of the Commercial Trust of this city, completed the negotiations, paying yesterday afternoon for the bonds of the corporation held by Philadelphia institutions. Mr. Lloyd says he is acting merely as an agent and refuses to give the names of those interested in the deal, which ends, it is said, a long struggle between interests represented by the Canadian Improvement Co. and local banks.

The securities referred to in the despatch were given in respect of loans to the Canadian Improvement Co. to the amount of between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. The Canadian Improvement Co. defaulted a year ago, and the banks which made the loan foreclosed. The banks are now realizing on the securities and about $5,000,000 out of $40,000,000 of the capital is involved. The control of the Lake Superior Corporation is affected only to that extent.

IS ROSE STILL AT BROCKVILLE

Man Who Broke Into General Hospital There Said to Look Like Gaol-Breaker.

Brockville, Nov. 25.—It is believed that Alex. Rose, the Toronto jailbreaker, is still lurking about. The Brockville General Hospital was entered about 12 o'clock Monday night by two men, one of whom is thought to have been Rose.

They forced a rear door from the verandah on the second storey leading into the nurses' sleeping quarters. One of them was prowling around the room and the noise awakened two nurses who, at once made an outcry and the burglars decamped quickly empty handed.

They were followed by one nervy nurse, who threw a pillow after them. Over it one of the burglars tripped and fell several steps to the bottom.

ALD. HALES SAYS HARD THINGS OF TORONTO WOMEN

Hamilton, Nov. 25.—Ald. James Hales, Toronto, last night made a statement that is almost as serious a reflection on the women in Toronto as that made on the women in Winnipeg, to the effect that a great many there have a mania for gambling, which they indulge. Ald. Hales was speaking at St. Andrew's Church at the second of the temperance meetings that are being held this week, and in the course of his remarks he said: "I will vouchsafe that there are hundreds of women in Toronto who would not think of going to a summer resort without a flask of something strong." Their excuse, he said, for taking this drink with them, was that it was to be used in case of emergency. He said a cockfight was held in Toronto recently, and that the police interfered. He thought they should be as diligent in putting down the drinking evil as they were in stamping out such things as that.

JAPAN AND THE U.S. AGREE TREATY SAID TO BE SIGNED

Honolulu, Nov. 18, via San Francisco, Nov. 25.—The Hawaii Shinpo, the leading Japanese daily newspaper in Hawaii, has received from Tokio what purports to be the text of a treaty between Japan and the United States regarding coolie immigration.

"The high contracting parties in their desire for the independence of the Chinese Empire and the preservation of the territorial integrity of that empire, agreed with each other to protect the principles of Chinese independence by peaceful means, to guard the existing situation in the Chinese empire.

"That neither Government shall allow the emigration of the laborers of their population to the country of the other until further understanding in the matter be reached, believing and agreeing that the employment in one country of the laborers of the other tends to impair the existing friendly relations between the two Governments."

STR. RAINBOW MADE LAST TRIP OF SEASON YESTERDAY

The steamer Rainbow made her last trip of the season yesterday afternoon, when she brought up one hundred and fifty hogs from Rice Lake. She returned into dry dock at Birdsall's Landing for the winter.

The latest trip last year was on the thirteenth of November. There have been no leakages since the fourteenth, the boats stopping at the street railway wharf.

The steamer Monarch will continue her Saturday trips just as long as the weather permits.

GENERAL MANAGER HAYS OF THE G.T.R. HERE TO-DAY

Messrs. C. M. Hays, General Manager of the Grand Trunk Railway Company; W. R. Tiffin, Divisional Superintendent, and W. G. Brownlee, Master of Transportation, were in the city to-day. They came in on the Belleville train from Montreal. They were looking over the ground at the Quaker Oats Company, with a view to laying a siding into that factory.

They left on a special train shortly after 10 o'clock for Toronto.

Court Stanley

Court Stanley, A.O.F., met last night in the S.O.E. Hall. There was a good attendance of members. Bro. T. Hendry was in the chair. One candidate was duly initiated into the mysteries of Forestry. Considerable business was transacted, after which a social hour was held and several members spoke. Plans were made to make the meetings more interesting and induce the members who do not attend the meetings to take more interest in the Order. December 8th being the next regular meeting, the officers for the year will be elected.

The Daily Review

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 25, 1908.

THE LATE MR. CARSLEY

The death of Mr. Carsley, of Montreal, seems to have reawakened the spirit of chivalry in the people of that city. It is easy to become rich without scruple, or to buy people that one may sell them again at a profit, but Mr. Carsley did none of these. He was a man of honor and a fine Christian character. Although an ardent Anglican, he was not a mere denominationalist. His broad sympathies extended beyond the narrow confines of sectarianism or his own sult. Vulgar pride, whether denominational or otherwise, did not appeal to him. His gifts and sacrifices were never made to attract the public gaze. He was above all a man of whom even the shifty spoke well. Far from the cynical wretchedness which prompts a man to laugh at anything or everything that does not bring grist to his mill, Mr. Carsley was the "light of a benighted age," and it may be said of him, as is so commonly said of Sir W. C. McDonald, that the claims of humanity he regarded as superior even to those of his church. Unless virtue is practised for its own sake manifestly it becomes merely a toy, a gaud, a joke, or an asset of the hypocrite. Time always tells. We may be swayed for a moment by a touching appeal to our hearts, our stomachs or our pockets, but in the end the sense of duty triumph and the truly great and the truly good become identified. The basic virtues are the same in all men. All can understand them. The heart of man is doubtless desperately wicked, but it can furnish goodness as well. The heart of Mr. Carsley was thoroughly sound. His whole conduct and therefore his whole character rang true. To be upright always, frank and truthful, is the most difficult of attainments. Few are equal to it, although many would pretend to be. It is almost the monopoly of poverty. Virtue and wealth, all philosophers, ancient and modern, from Democritus to Andrew Carnegie, agree, is a corrupting influence, a curse, a vice, but never a virtue. He is greatest who scorns it most. As Carnegie has said, "It is a disgrace to die rich."

THE POLICE COURT

Some people including our friends, the police themselves, criticize the newspapers of this city very severely for not publishing the names of all those who are dragged into court by the strong arm of the law. They charge that the severest punishment the offender can be afflicted with is publication of his name in local newspapers. In reply, we may urge several strong arguments in support of our present custom of publishing or not publishing, as we see fit. In the first place the newspaper is not part of the court machinery. It is under no obligation as such to help the court. Then again the punishment meted out in court is the total amount of it that is supposed to fit the crime. To add to it by a still greater punishment is unjust, improper and inhuman. Thirdly, we do not consider that we have a right to disregard the request of a citizen to keep his or her name out of the paper in connection with crime. It is doubtful if we have a right to put it in at all. Our critics come back at us with "Well then, why do you put the names of the poor drunks and derelicts in?" On this point as in the heel of Achilles we are vulnerable. It is done to gratify the curiosity of our present critics that we do so, but it is really inexcusable. The news it is bad news and of no use even as a record of horrible examples. It would be better to wipe out Police Court news altogether from the columns of the papers. However, we are glad to see that the proverb that "evil communications corrupt good manners," is inapplicable in the case of the police. They are proof against their surroundings.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What is all this whining about?

As a Frenchman naively expressed it: "I am devvout no longer. It is not in the air."

Stocks and building operations seem to be picking up again. But speculative stocks rise or fall as wires are pulled and are not a criterion as building is.

Frightened by the possibility of Britain's going in for protection, the U.S. Trust, via Carnegie, is putting up a bluff with regard to it that will probably deceive the British into the belief that it is genuine.

A protest has been filed against the return of J. R. Stratton, in West Peterborough. But is an ordinary protest sufficient in the case of a man like Stratton. —Hamilton Spectator.

The election of J. R. Stratton in West Peterborough has been protested—thanks to the enterprise of the Peterborough Review which is determined that no seat that is dishonestly won shall be held—and it believes that it can prove that Mr. Stratton's seat was so won. We shall see what we shall see.—Kingston Standard.

If what Lord Roberts say is precisely true and accurate Britain is merely a mouthful for Germany or a mere tail-feather of the latter. The world is fast coming to the conclusion that there will be no peace until every man, woman and child becomes a soldier. It will then be necessary to retreat from an untenable if logical position by more assiduously cultivating the arts of peace.

(Medical Press and Circular.)

A red nose is by no means a sign of drunkenness, and is as common among teetotalers as tipplers. Indigestion is responsible almost more than anything else for red noses while excessive tea drinking is apt to play havoc with the complexion in general and with the nose in particular. Sometimes the congested nose is a sign of some serious disorder of the heart or it may point to a sluggish circulation. The habit of inhaling cigarette smoke and puffing it through the nostrils may contribute to the external wealth of color.

ELDERLY FOLKS SHOULD TRY IT

Simple Home Mixture Relieves Kidney and Bladder and Rheumatism

The great majority of men and women at the age of 50 years begin to feel the first signs of advancing age in some form of kidney trouble and bladder weakness. Few are entirely free from that torturous disease, rheumatism, which is not a disease in itself, but a symptom of deranged function of the kidneys, which have become clogged and sluggish, failing in their duty of sifting and straining the poisonous waste matter, uric acid, etc., from the blood, permitting it to remain and decompose, settling about the joints and muscles, causing intense pain and suffering.

The bladder, however, causes the old folks the most annoyance, especially at night and early morning.

Hundreds of readers who suffer will find the following which is known as the Dandelion mixture, the most harmless and effective treatment to clean the system of rheumatic poisons, remove irritation of the bladder and relieve urinary difficulties of the old people. It is a true vitalizing tonic to the entire kidney and urinary structure, reinvigorating the entire system."

The Dandelion mixture consists of the following simple prescription, the ingredients of which can be obtained from any good pharmacy at small cost; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and upon going to bed, also drink plenty of water.

This prescription, though simple, is always effective in the diseases and afflictions of the kidneys and bladder and rheumatism.

THE HOUSE WAS BURNED TO THE GROUND

On Saturday it was announced in these columns that a father of six small children had been taken very ill leaving them and his wife in a destitute condition. Since then their house was burned to the ground. Few of their few pieces of furniture, wearing apparel and bedding were saved. While the local Children's Aid Society is exerting itself in their behalf, anything that may be sent to the Review will be forwarded without charge.

OF INTEREST

What purports to be an absolutely accurate and authentic synopsis of the interview obtained from the Emperor William of Germany by Dr. William Bayard Hale and subsequently withdrawn just as it was about to appear in the 'Century Magazine,' is printed in the 'World' today. The 'World' declares that the article, as originally written, was submitted to Dr Hale, and that it appears as changed by Dr Hale.

The interview is said to have taken place on the Imperial yacht 'Hohenzollern, off Bergen, Norway, while Dr. Hale was the Emperor's guest. The 'World summarised the main points of the Emperor's interview as follows:

'That King Edward, of Great Britain had been humiliating him for more than two years, and that he was exasperated; that Germany was the paramount power in all Europe, and that England was trying to neutralize that power; that he held France in the hollow of his hand, and that Russia was of no account since the disastrous war she had waged with Japan.

'That if the Pan-European war, which had been so much talked about, was inevitable, the sooner it came the better it would be for him, because he was ready and was tired of the suspense.

'That Great Britain had been a decadent nation ever since her victory over the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, because hers was an unrighteous, ungodly cause, and Divine judgment was bound eventually to overtake the powerful nation that waged such a war.

'That the Anglo-Japanese alliance was an iniquitous alliance against all the white races, England providing absolutely her faithfulness as a Christian nation; that Japan was honeycombing India with sedition and flooding it with spies while professing openly to be England's friend and ally;

'That the only way to counteract this alliance was for Germany and America to act together at an early date or America would have to fight the Japanese in ten months;

'That in the event of a great war, England would lose many of her large colonies, especially those in the Pacific and that all he would take for Germany would be Egypt, though he would liberate the Holy Land from the yoke of the infidel, presumably meaning the Sultan;

'That the perfecting of the Zeppelin dirigible balloon would give Germany a powerful advantage in war, and she was ready to make use of it to the fullest extent.'

The 'World' declares that the Emperor William knew when he made these statements that Dr Hale was an American newspaper man and magazine writer, but that nevertheless the statements were made without reservation, and that no secrecy had been imposed. The interview had been formally arranged through the German Foreign Office, it is said and that at the conclusion of the interview Dr Hale returned to Berlin and told high officials of the Foreign Office of the success he had met with.

'They forbade him to publish it,' the 'World' story continues. 'Then they explained to him at some length that even a hint at possibilities so serious, coming from one who had been the Emperor's guest, might throw the whole world into the most disastrous war of all time. The attitude of these officials is said to have been that the Emperor was irresponsible when he gave way to such fits of temper.'

It is said that Dr Hale obeyed the instructions of the Foreign Office in the preparation of his interview, but later when the manuscript was submitted to the high German officials, they are said to have butchered it so that little which was worth while was left.' It was in this final form, according to the 'World,' that the article was accepted by the 'Century.'

It was practically ready for publication when the request came from Berlin that even the interview in its revised form be suppressed. Then the electrotypes and all copies of the interviews were destroyed before the public announcement that the interview had been withdrawn was made.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness—caused by catarrh—that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Of nervous prostration we hear much nowadays, and it is comforting to know that there are places specially equipped and located for combating this phase of modern life. On the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway System, at St. Catharines, Ontario, are located the curative saline Springs, known as the "St. Catharines Well." Connected with the Springs is "The Welland," where treatments for nervous prostration, rheumatism, etc., are given by skilled attendants in charge of a resident physician.

St. Catharines is the mildest point in Canada during the winter months. For further information and all particulars apply to agents G.T.R. System.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market since Friday, as reported by the railways, were 84 carloads, composed of 1295 cattle, 1472 hogs, 1528 sheep and lambs, 53 calves and 1 horse.

Exporters.

There were a few exporters reported by McDonald & Halligan at $4.50 per cwt.; bulls were reported at $3 to $3.75; exporters are not wanted.

Butchers.

The best lots of butchers' cattle sold at from $4 to $4.25; medium, $3.60 to $3.90; common, $2.50 to $3.50; cows, $2.50 to $3.50; canners, $1.25 to $2.

Feeders and Stockers.

A limited number of feeders and stockers were reported by Messrs. H. & W. Murby as being offered on the market to-day. Prices were reported by them as being steady as follows: Best feeders, 950 to 1100 lbs. each, at $3.65 to $4 per cwt.; best feeders, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.25 to $3.75; stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, at $2.90 to $3.15; common and medium stockers, 500 to 600 lbs. each, at $1.75 to $2.30.

A moderate delivery of milkers and springers met a strong market, as usual, at $30 to $60 each, the bulk selling at $45 to $55 each.

Veal Calves.

The bulk of calves coming forward are not in the strict sense of the word worth the name of veal calves, being 4 to 6 months old, with little flesh on them, and selling at about $3 per cwt. Good vealers are worth $6 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

A moderate run of sheep and lambs sold at steady prices. Export ewes, $3 to $3.40; rams, $2 to $2.50 per cwt.; lambs, $4 to $4.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reports prices unchanged, at $6.25 for selects, fed and watered, at the market, and $6 for lights.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—(Special.)—The total exports of live stock from the port of Montreal for the season of 1908 were 19,680 cattle, 10,111 sheep and 104 horses. These figures, as compared with those of last year, show an increase of 2853 cattle, a decrease of 1474 sheep and a decrease of 79 horses. The increase in cattle is accounted for by the large movement of Canadian Northwest ranch stock, as the exports of American cattle for the season were only 10,200 head, which figures show a decrease of 9768, compared with 1907. The decrease in the sheep shipments is due to the fact that the markets abroad were in bad condition all season on account of the heavy exports from the United States and the large arrivals of chilled and frozen mutton from other sources.

Elora Man Killed.

Parry Sound, Nov. 25.—By walking off a car on the C.P.R. Sudbury branch, Frank J. Bell of Sudbury was killed at the Still River bridge on Monday night. Bell, who is 22 years of age, with his father, was coming from the west with some cars of cattle. The freight train on which he and his father were accompanying the cattle, broke in two and came to a standstill on the bridge, and the young man stepped off the platform, falling to the ravine below, a distance of 40 feet, breaking his neck.

Ships Will Tour the World.

Washington, Nov. 25.—Senator Flint of California yesterday requested President Roosevelt to keep the battleship fleet in whole or in part in the Pacific Ocean, but the President told the Senator that he did not feel that there was any reason for diverting the fleet from its course around the world.

Peacemakers Shot.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 25.—Two men who attempted to stop Andrew Bagotas, an Italian of Pittsburg, from beating his wife, were shot yesterday by the infuriated husband. Charles Bagotas, a brother of Andrew Bagotas, is dead, and John Hanso is not expected to live.

Fiddled Into Office.

Lossing relates that in 1848 he met at Oswego, N. Y., Major Cochran, then nearly eighty years old, a son-in-law of General Philip Schuyler, who told the story of his election to congress during the administration of the elder Adams. A vessel was to be launched on one of the lakes in interior New York, and people came from afar to see it. The young folks gathered there, determined to have a dance at night. There was a fiddle, but no fiddler. Young Cochran was an amateur performer, and his services were demanded. He gratified the joyous company, and at the supper table one of the gentlemen remarked, in commendation of his talents, that he was "fit for congress." The matter was talked up, and he was nominated and elected a representative in congress for the district then comprising the whole of New York west of Schenectady. He always claimed to have "fiddled himself into congress."

Rev. J. C. Sycamore, of James street Baptist church, Hamilton, has declined an invitation to New England.

A Feeling of Security

Is ever entertained by the man who carries an insurance policy that will cover the loss of, or damage to, his home or property through the ravages of fire. He has a safe-guard against loss, and it gives him a spirit of confidence that he is protected from one of the worst dangers to which we are all daily exposed. A fire insurance policy is the best investment any business man can make.

This is the season of the year when fires are most prevalent and also the time when a person most wishes protection against such misfortune. We shall write a policy for you in one of the oldest and strongest companies in existence. For particulars apply to

Ask "Times" to Apologize.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—A letter published recently in The London Times has raised the ire of the members of the National Transcontinental Commission, and Hon. Charles Russell, Canada's legal agent in Great Britain, has been given instructions to ask for an apology. The letter was from a Canadian correspondent, and would lead the readers to believe that graft was rampant.

A Canal Through Michigan.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—The State of Michigan may construct a deep waterway as an auxiliary to the Georgian Bay Canal. This new route would cut diagonally through Michigan from the south part of Lake Michigan to Saginaw Bay. A saving of hundreds of miles would be effected with the present waterway from Chicago via the Straits of Mackinac.

Rolling Stock Inspectors.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—With the idea of providing for a thorough inspection of rolling stock the Railway Board has established a number of inspection divisions with inspectors in charge of each. In Ontario James Clarke, who recently came here from Winnipeg, and James Ogilvie will attend to inspections.

Sheriff's Writ No Protection.

Cobourg, Nov. 25.—Wm. Benson of Brighton was arrested on a charge of housebreaking. It appears that with a sheriff's writ in his pocket he took the furniture of a widow, it is said, and put it in a field, and she had him arrested. Bail was accepted.

Want Cheap Postal Rates.

Berlin, Nov. 25.—Various chambers of commerce in Germany are petitioning the Imperial Secretary of Posts to establish in the interests of the trade a two-cent postal rate between Germany and the United States.

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

Killed by Train.

Toronto, Nov. 25.—Alfred Hopkins, aged 36, living at 23 Abbs street, had both legs completely severed by a train on the G.T.R. two hundred yards northwest of the Queen street subway, and died in Grace Hospital yesterday morning. He had been picked up from the tracks at 3.15 a.m. by P. C. Richards, who heard him groaning. It is calculated that he had been there an hour before he was found. Hopkins was taking a short cut to his home. He was a teamster and unmarried.

Power Users Suffering.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—The low water in the Ottawa river is now so serious that the board of control yesterday afternoon deputed the mayor and city engineer to demand that the power users at the Chaudiere either shut down altogether or greatly reduce their consumption.

If they refuse the Minister of Public Works will be appealed to. If a fire broke out here there is not enough pressure to fight it.

Murray For Commision?

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Premier Murray of Nova Scotia is spoken of in connection with the vacancy on the Railway Commission, caused by the death of Hon. Thomas Greenway.

The position belongs to a western man, but should Premier Murray be successful, the leadership of the Nova Scotia Provincial Government will probably fall on A. K. Maclean, M.P. for Lunenburg.

Lords Threw Out Bill.

London, Nov. 25.—By a large majority a meeting of 200 members of the House of Lords decided in favor of rejecting the licensing bill summarily when it is brought up for its second reading.

As the Unionists are in a strong majority in the Upper House there will be no difficulty in throwing out any radical legislation distasteful to them.

Nanking Situation Serious.

Pekin, Nov. 25.—The situation at Nanking, where a mutiny on the part of the Chinese troops broke out Nov. 19, is serious.

There has been fighting in the streets of the city, and a portion of the foreign residents have taken refuge on board a British gunboat. Others of the foreigners preferred to remain on shore.

A Humanitarian Viscount.

Talking of men prominent in affairs of state brings to mind the fact that Viscount Morley, Secretary of State for India, is one of the most humane of men. So great is his love for animals that he will neither shoot nor fish, and it is said that he never comes across a stray cat in the streets without endeavoring to give it a gentle pat. When driving in the country, too, he descends from his carriage at the approach of each steep hill, and nothing will induce him to get in again until the summit has been reached.

Richmond & Gordon, Ltd.

The Duke of Richmond, whose regular practice it is to make the round of his vast estates in Scotland each autumn and visit all his tenants, once wrote to a firm from Goodwood House, and, as usual, signed his letter "Richmond and Gordon." The firm in question, not knowing much of the ways of peers, upon receiving the letter, conceived it to be from another firm, and addressed the reply to "Messrs. Richmond & Gordon, Goodwood House." The duke kept the letter for a long time as a curiosity.

Work has begun on the new dock at Welland in the canal, and the cost will be about $50,000.

THE OPSONIC TEST.

What It Showed the Man Who Smoked a Great Deal.

His friends knew that he would rather miss half an hour of a play than cut short his after dinner cigar, and they were astonished when he announced that he had quit smoking.

"What's the trouble?" he was asked.

"Opsonic test," he replied gloomily.

"What in the world is that?"

"I've been run down of late and feeling pretty blue. As there is consumption in my family, I consulted a specialist. He said I didn't have the disease yet, but he would tell me what my chances were of getting it. We are constantly breathing tuberculosis germs, he explained, but healthy blood has the power to destroy them. So he took a drop of my blood and inoculated it with a certain number of germs. In half an hour he examined it under the microscope and found that only half as many germs had been killed as should have been the case. Normal, healthy blood is said to have an opsonic test of 100, so my test was only 50. He advised me to build up my strength by sanitary living—lots of fresh air day and night, plenty of sleep, wholesome food and moderation in work and pleasure."

"Where does smoking come in?"

"He said that tobacco had an extraordinary effect in decreasing the power of the blood to destroy germs. Some men who smoke a great deal have an opsonic test of zero—that is, their blood has no effect whatever on germs. I am fond of my cigar, but when a specialist levels an opsonic test all cocked and primed at your head and says, 'Tobacco or your life,' what are you going to do but throw up your hands?"—New York Tribune.

DESOLATION ISLAND.

Kerguelen Land Is a Region of Perpetual Storms.

Of all places on earth outside the arctic and antarctic regions Kerguelen Land, in the Indian ocean, is the most isolated and inhospitable. Indeed, it is generally known to mariners not by its official title, but as Desolation Island.

Most nations have owned it by turns, but it has been sooner or later abandoned by them all as worthless, and this although it covers an area variously estimated at from 1,500 to 2,000 square miles. At present France is in nominal possession of it, she having annexed it in 1893.

The soil is utterly barren. Practically the whole of the interior is covered with snow fields of unknown depth, whence glaciers flow down to the sea. Where there are no snow fields there are morasses and hidden, treacherous mudholes.

The climate is probably the worst in the world. Terrific tempests follow one another practically without ceasing and are accompanied by torrents of ice cold rain, hail, sleet and snow. The Challenger expedition spent a month there, during which time there were only three fine days. And this was in December-January, when it is midsummer in those latitudes.

Its discoverer, M. Kerguelen Tremarec, although at first he professed to be enraptured with it, lived to confess that it was unfit for human habitation. "Not even Eskimos," he exclaimed, "could exist there."—Pearson's.

AN OPEN LETTER

Results so Surprising That They Seem Marvelous Are Common to Mi-o-na the One Dependable Stomach Remedy.

Mrs. J. A. Pillow, of North Street, Gananoque, Ont., says: "Mi-o-na is worth its weight in gold for quickly and permanently curing dyspepsia. I became so bad that I was a constant burning in my stomach. I would belch up gas every few minutes and could eat but very little, as the food would quickly ferment and make gas that caused a serious depression of the heart. Perspiration would break out all over my body, I would become so weak that I could not stir and would often fall on the floor in a helpless state. The pains in my stomach were terrible. I could find no position in which to sit or lie without suffering, and I was so nervous that the least noise affected me. Headaches were constant, I would become and dizzy and spots would appear before my eyes. I had no ambition to get around and everything seemed to tire me. The first box of Mi-o-na gave me more relief than anything I had previously tried. The box of Mi-o-na cured me. I am well and strong and I have not had an hour's suffering since. I will always feel grateful to Mi-o-na for the cure given me and glad to recommend."

In the face of such evidence it is easy to understand why Wm. Madill, druggist, Peterborough, feels assured in saying to you, money back if Mi-o-na fails to relieve either trivial or serious stomach trouble.

ARCTIC TEMPERATURES.

Zero Weather Is Regarded as Mild and Agreeable.

According to eminent arctic explorers, physical sensations are relative, and the mere enumeration of so many degrees of heat or cold gives no idea of their effect upon the system.

One explorer states that he should have frozen at home in England in a temperature that he found very comfortable indeed in Lapland, with his solid diet of meat and butter and his garments of reindeer.

The following is a correct scale of the physical effects of cold, calculated for the latitude of 65 to 70 degrees north:

Fifteen degrees above zero—unpleasantly warm.

Zero—mild and agreeable.

Twenty degrees below zero—sharp, but not severely cold. One must keep one's fingers and toes in motion and rub one's nose occasionally.

Thirty degrees below zero—very cold. Particular care must be taken of the nose and extremities. Plenty of the fattest food must be eaten.

Forty degrees below zero—intensely cold. One must keep awake at all hazards, muffle up to the eyes and test the circulation frequently, that it may not stop somewhere before one knows it.

PETTING A HORSE.

If You Want to Please Him Rub Him Between the Ears.

"Not many people know how to pet a horse, from the horse's standpoint, at any rate," said a trainer. "Every nice looking horse comes in for a good deal of petting. Hitch a fine horse close to the curb and you'll find that half the men, women and children who go by will stop for a minute, say 'Nice horsy' and give him an affectionate pat or two.

"The trouble is they don't pat him in the right place. If you want to make a horse think he is going straight to heaven hitched to a New York cab or delivery wagon, rub his eyelids. Next to that form of endearment a horse likes to be rubbed right up between the ears. In petting horses most people slight those nerve centers. They stroke the horse's nose. While a well behaved horse will accept the nasal caress complacently, he would much prefer that nice, soothing touch applied to the eyelids. Once in awhile a person comes along who really does know how to pet a horse. Nine times out of ten that man was brought up in the country among horses and learned when a boy their peculiar ways."—New York Globe.

Queer Old Book Titles.

These are some of the odd titles of old English books published in the time of Cromwell:

"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay For God's Saints to Smell At."

"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, carefully conserved for the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion breathed out of a Hole In the Wall of an Earthly Vessel known Among Men by the name of Samuel Fish."

"Eggs of Charity Layed For the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled with the Water of Divine Love. Take ye out and Eat."

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot to make the Soul Sneeze with Devotion."

The Sailor's Prayer Book.

"This is what you call the sailor's prayer book," a seaman said bitterly as he kicked a holystone out of the way. "Why is it called that? Well, in the first place, it is called that because in using it, in holystoning the deck, the sailor has to kneel down, and, in the second place, because all holystoning is done on Sunday. Don't you know the chantey—

"Six days shalt thou work and do all that thou art able
And on the seventh holystone the decks and scrape the cable.

"The stone is called holystone because the first holystones were bits of tombs stolen from cemeteries. It's got a pious, religious sound—holy and prayer book and Sunday and all that—but it is when he is using this stone that the seaman is most profane."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

It Happened Before.

A self made, self satisfied and self assertive itinerant preacher was expatiating to a college graduate on his own eloquence.

"Colleges," he declared, "ain't necessary when a preacher's got a genuine call to the ministry. I'm thankful to say the Lord opened my mouth without education."

"That's interesting," returned his hearer. "Come to think of it, something like that happened several thousand years ago in connection with Balaam, wasn't it?"—Circle Magazine.

In a Nutshell.

"Big talker," declared the Indian who had been listening to a local candidate. "Heap scrap."

"And what if he is not elected?"

"Scrap heap."—Kansas City Journal.

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Frank Emsley, Lindsay, Ontario, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"When I wrote to you some time ago, I was a very sick woman suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the feminine organs and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do.

"A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman.

"I most heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer with female troubles."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Too Cheap.

The class at kirk had been reading the story of Joseph and his brethren, and it came to the turn of the visiting minister to examine the boys.

The replies to all of his questions had been quick, intelligent and correct, such as:

"What great crime did these sons of Jacob commit?"

"They sold their brother Joseph."

"Quite correct. And for how much?"

"Twenty pieces of silver."

"And what added to the cruelty and wickedness of these bad brothers?"

A pause.

"What made their treachery even more detestable and heinous?"

Then a bright little fellow stretched out an eager hand.

"Well, my man?"

"Please, sir, they selt him ower cheap."

AN ELECTION PROTEST

Editor of the Review

Sir,—A number of inquiries have been made as to when a protest can come up for trial or how long it can be postponed by either side

Yours truly,
INQUIRER.

Six months from the date of fyling may be put down as the outside limit of the date of trial including the suspension of proceedings rendered necessary during a session, if the case is ready. The various steps connected with the proceedings before trial, such as the examination "for discovery" of the parties of the protest by each other are as a rule almost as interesting and instructive as the trial itself. Time is required as in an ordinary action for preparation for trial by both sides. There is nothing to prevent the completion of the proceedings of getting ready for trial before the contemplated session in January and when a session is ended the Election Court judges are ready to move. The coming session especially, if closure be applied will not likely extend beyond May 1st, 1909, after which the Election Court can sail immediately for trial of petitions. Those early on the list and ready for trial can proceed without delay.—Ed.

A Common Mistake About Glasses

Many persons think themselves afflicted with some disease of the eye—believe their eyes need medical or surgical treatment—because they are conscious of physical pain or some impairment of the vision, when their whole visual trouble is caused by some error of refraction than can be remedied by proper glasses. No medicine or operation can relieve such cases. Being prejudiced against wearing glasses, even rapidly failing vision sometimes fails to convince them of the truth until too late. How often we hear the remark, "I won't wear glasses as long as I can see without." Just such a vow has ruined many a pair of good eyes. Don't be foolish—IF YOU NEED GLASSES, GET THEM. CONSULTATION FREE. CHARGES MODERATE.

MIKADO WILL BE PRESENTED HERE DECEMBER 3rd AND 4th

By Peterborough Amateur Operatic Company—Intention of Company to Enter Earl Grey Competition.

On Thursday and Friday, December 3rd and 4th, Gilbert and Sullivan's famous musical play, "The Mikado," will be presented in the Grand Opera House, by a company of local amateurs, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, who, under the name of the 'Peterborough Amateur Operatic Company," propose to compete for the shield in the competition instituted by Earl Grey, to be held in Montreal next spring.

The forthcoming Mikado performances will, it is hoped, furnish a substantial sum towards the expenses of the competition, and it is proposed also to put on four performances of "The Geisha" in the spring, by the same company. The financial side of the enterprise will be assured if all citizens will support the first company to enter the National competition. The Mikado will be the work presented in Montreal, so it will be kept in rehearsal all winter. The company is about seventy strong, all working heartily for the success of the enterprise.

The costumes for this series of performances have been kindly lent by Mrs. E. Goliver, an English lady, who is one of the cleverest amateurs in England in the part of Kalisha. Tickets for advance sale are in the hands of the members of the company, such tickets to be presented at the box office on Monday next. Ordinary sale at the box office on Tuesday next.

INVITATION TO CITIZENS

To the citizens of Peterborough:

Ladies and Gentlemen:— The formal opening of our new Collegiate Institute by the Hon R. A. Pyne, M. D. Minister of Education, is to take place on Friday afternoon the 27th, inst. at three o'clock. There will addresses by the Minister of Education, the Mayor, members of Parliament and others.

The citizens generally are invited to this function. This will be the first opportunity that you will have of inspecting our new building, which is considered one of the finest Institute buildings in the Province.

For those who cannot attend in the afternoon the building will be open in the evening. An orchestra will also be in attendance. Let everyone who can possibly attend either in the afternoon or in the evening do so.

I have the honour to be,
Your obedient servant,
ROBT. FAIR,

WILL ERECT STORES ON PROPERTY ON GEORGE-ST

Mr. W. C. McCall, who for many years has conducted a blacksmith shop on George street, just to the south of the Grand hotel, has moved around to Water street and to-day is engaged in a new shop opposite the Peterborough Canoe Works.

It is understood that on the property between the Grand Hotel and Fanning's Laundry, Mr. J. J. Lundy, who is the owner of this land, intends to erect new and handsome stores.

It is learned that these will be started at once. Men were to-day looking over the ground, taking measurements and getting ready to commence.

Stores at this place would no doubt be in much demand and certainly would add greatly to the appearance of this portion of the street.

PLENTIFUL GERMS IN KISSES SWEETHEARTS' WORST OF ALL

Philadelphia, Nov. 24.—"Kissing, Its Evils and Benefits," might well be the title of the argument being waged here among members of the Women's Medical fraternity and hospital staffs, and it is all brought about by sensational statements concerning the danger of osculation, which Dr. John V. Shoemaker makes in the November issue of the Monthly Cyclopoedia and Medical Bulletin. In this article Dr. Shoemaker declares that in kissing germs are carried to the mouth and thence to the lungs and stomach.

One warm advocate of the anti-kissing propaganda is Dr. Clara Scott, a homoeopathic physician.

"Not only is Dr. Shoemaker correct in his statements about the evils of kissing, but in my opinion he does not go far enough," she said. "The number of diseases which kissing causes is unbelievable to one who has not studied the question. I firmly believe that the day will come within a generation when a formidable anti-kissing movement will be established, and when kissing practically will be confined to the lower classes, the educated people having been brought to see the evils of the habit.

"Of all forms, however, the kissing of babies is positively the most dangerous. More diseases are thus communicated than the world has any idea of.

"Next to the evil of kissing babies comes the sweetheart's kiss. This is one of the most dangerous of all. A husband's kiss generally soon loses its fervency, but the kiss of two sweethearts is the paradise of the tuberculosis germ, and the diphtheria germ, and other germs too numerous to count. During the long intervals while the sweetheart's kiss continues one may imagine the various germs rushing backward and forward with unholy glee."

Not quite so pessimistic a view of the kissing problem was taken by Dr. Rachel S. Skidelsky, whose opinion on the question of women smoking, recently stirred up a spirited discussion.

"Dr. Shoemaker is right," said Dr. Skidelsky, "but let us be practical. It is my opinion that all unnecessary kissing—the kissing without real affection—should be abolished. This would reduce the germ evil to a minimum."

Other doctors declared that the percentage of deaths caused by kissing is not so great as Dr. Shoemaker would have the public believe.

TWO IN ONE FAMILY DIE OF FEVER WITHIN FEW WEEKS

Within a little over a month two members of one family in Peterborough have succumbed to typhoid fever. The mother of these two persons was only removed from Nicholls hospital on Saturday last, after several weeks' illness with the same disease. It was then that she learned of her son's death, which occurred over a month ago.

The family referred to is that of Mrs. John Trotter, Smith street. Her eldest son passed away a few weeks ago and this morning at four o'clock her daughter, Mrs. William Simmons, died at Nicholls hospital.

Her maiden name was Flinda Grace Trotter. She was thirty-five years of age and was married eight years ago to her now surviving husband. four small children are left to mourn her loss, the youngest being an infant only four months old.

Her mother, three brothers and two sisters also survive her. The brothers are Messrs. George, of Moosejaw; Bert., of Orangeville, and Charles, of Peterborough. The sisters are Mrs. Robert Robinson, and Mrs. George Barrett, of this city.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery.

LADIES' ORANGE BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION WAS FORMED

"Sentinel" Lodge No. 66, of the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association was successfully instituted last night. Miss M. Cullom, of Toronto, Worthy Grand Mistress, and Mrs. Neally, of Lodge No. 6, demonstrated the work of the first and second degrees. The following officers were duly elected and installed;—

Worthy Mistress—Miss L. E. Calder.

Deputy Mistress—Miss Hattie Lee.

Chaplain—Mrs. T. Harrison.

Rec.-Secretary—Miss Marie Hopkins.

Financial Secretary—Miss Ada Lee.

Treasurer—Mrs. Chas. Wiley.

Director of Ceremonies—Miss E. Calder.

First Lecturer—Miss Alice Hopkins.

Second Lecture—Miss Lillie Pogue.

Inside Guard—Miss Iva Crombie.

Outside Guard—Bro. Newton Hopkins.

Guardian—Bro. S. W. Lowry.

The trustees of the Lodge are Miss L. E. Calder, Miss Hattie Lee and Miss Marie Hopkins.

The meeting was harmonious throughout and much interest was manifested by the ladies present. With such an efficient staff of officers the prosperity and success of the Association in Peterborough seems assured. Another meeting for instruction in the degree work will be held this evening.

"THE PRIVATE SECRETARY"

Will be Presented Here by Company of Local Amateurs

"The "Private Secretary," a three act comedy, will be presented by a company of local amateurs in the near future. The cast will include the majority of those who took part in "All the Comforts of Home" and a high class production can be looked forward to. The play will be produced under the direction of Mr Irving Bears.

Angelo Monte was sentenced at Macleod to 15 years for manslaughter.

HOUSING LAUNCHES OVER THE WINTER

The Mosquito Fleet Put Under Shelter for the Next Six Months

In a quiet way a piece of enterprise has been carried out that reflects credit on the enterprise of the owner, and fill not a long—but a new felt want. The Otonabee Boathouse property, on the river at the end of the street car line owned by Mr. H. B. Rye, has been enlarged, and a complete set of bays put in to handle launches and small steamers.

Last season the launch owners got together and discussed what might be done to provide housing for the winter for the small gasoline and steam craft. Few owners had boathouses fit to cover the power boats. To build each a boathouse would be a pretty costly matter, and it was felt that some united effort might bridge the difficulty. A stock company was proposed but a canvas of the owners showed that sufficient support could not be had to warrant the erection of a suitable building. At considerable inconvenience Mr. Rye made storage room in his boathouse.

This season Mr. Rye decided to cut the knot and put up a building, and the result is a 40x40 addition to the boathouse and ample room for all purposes. The addition joins the main boathouse, a part of the walls and roof being removed to make the connection. The western end, facing the tracks of the Street Railway, is provided with wide double doors, and a complete system of "bays" has been laid down. A track is laid from the bank into the river. On this truck a carriage hauled by a rope attached to a powerful winch. In taking out a launch the boat is floated over the submerged end of the track, the crandel run underneath, and the boat quickly and safely drawn from the water. Opposite the entrance the boat is transferred to a truck, which carries the craft into the boathouse and deposits it where required.

To provide additional storage space all canoes and skiffs were transferred to the upper story and piled together, where they will reamin until spring. The upper flat is to be devoted to a spacious painting and repair room, where the equipment of the business can be overhauled and made ready for the boat livery service.

An onerous feature of the enterprise is entailed by the great variation in the height of water in the river. Just now it is at a very low point. In the spring it will be at least eight feet higher. The system of slips or wharves, if left where they are, would be frozen in, and eventually carried away by the ice. To guard against this disaster, the entire equipment has to be taken from the river and piled on the bank. This is a pretty serious job when it is considered that twenty-seven launches were moored all summer, each having its own platform. In addition the platforms of the boathouse have to be taken out lest they be wrecked by the ice, and a complete system of electric lighting over the slips taken down.

All this has been done and everything put away for winter, at the cost of a great deal of work and a very considerable expense.

WEDDING BELLS

HUTCHISON—WOOD.

At three o'clock on the afternoon of November 18th, between fifty and sixty guests were gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hutchison, South Monaghan, to witness the marriage of their youngest daughter, Annie, to Mr. Lewis R. Wood, of Cavan. The bride looked very sweet in a dainty gown of cream eolienne trimmed with embroidered chiffon and cream satin. She carried a handsome shower bouquet of white chrysanthemums and smilax and wore orange blossoms in her hair. Her only ornament was the gift of the groom, a pearl crescent brooch.

Little Helen Jackson, cousin of the bride made a charming little flower girl. She was dressed in white embroidered muslin with pink ribbons and carried a lovely basket of pink and white carnations, lily of the valley and smilax. The groom's nephew, Master Harold Wood, filled the position of ring-bearer very well indeed. He wore a suit of white linen and carried a silver tray bearing the ring.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. J. Weatherill, under an evergreen arch.

The bride entered the drawing-room on the arm of her father to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, which was played by her sister Edythe. After the congratulations a dainty repast was served in the dining room, which was decorated with evergreens.

The young couple were the recipients of many useful and valuable presents.

The groom's gift to the flower girl was a pearl and amethyst brooch and to the ring-bearer a gold scarf pin.

The bride's going-away gown was a navy-blue suit and she wore with it a white hat having touches of blue. The happy couple departed amid showers of rice and confetti for Trenton and points east and on their return will reside in Cavan.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood have the best wishes of a large circle of friends for their future happiness and prosperity.

"DIVORCE" SCORES HIGH AT OTTAWA

Brilliant Play and Admirable Company at Russell.

From the Ottawa Citizen of Tuesday, 24th inst., we take the following;—"Divorce, a play that appeals to the intellect as well as to the the heart, a production that is staged with F. C. Whitney's well known devotion to artistic details, an interpreting cast the members of which may all be classed as stars of no mean magnitude—such is the attraction at the Russell theatre, which was given its initial presentation last evening and which will be seen for the last time to-night. But in its Ottawa experience Divorce has scored a distinct advantage. Its reputation had preceded it here from Montreal and Toronto, and the audience last night was quite a large one, in fact, the theatre was well filled. Their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Countess Grey, with a party from Government House, occupying the vice-regal box. The success of the play was evidenced from the start, and the entire audience was enthusiastic in its appreciation. And there was every reason why it should be so. See "Divorce" at the Grand here to-night.

BIBLE SOCIETY ANNUAL MEETING LAST EVENING

Held in St. Paul's Church---Address by Rev. J. Gibson of Toronto---The Officers

There was a very large attendance at the annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Upper Canada Bible Society held in St. Paul's church last night. The work of this society is pretty generally known, and it is one which receives the moral, if not the financial support of all. During the past year the reports showed that $200 had been raised by the local society in aid of the work, which is very satisfactory. The chair last night was taken by Sheriff Hall.

Rev. Jesse Gibson, of Toronto was present and gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on "From Cape to Cairo." It was illustrated by limelight views.

The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows;—

President—Sheriff Hall.

Vice-Presidents—All the ministers of the city.

Secretary—Mr. Morrison, of Knox church.

Treasurer—Mr. John Crane.

SHIPPED GOODS TO LONDON, ENG.

J. J. Turner and Sons today shipped fifteen crates of camping goods to a large firm in London, England. This speaks well for the enterprise of the local firm to be able to sell goods in the largest city in the world.

DIED.

TROTTER.—At Nicholls Hospital, on Wednesday, Nov. 25th, Flinda Grace Trotter, wife of Wm. Simons, aged 35 years.

The funeral will take place on Friday at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, 243 Stewart street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

South African veterans are being offered $500 and $550 for their land certificates.

Rings revealing the skill of the goldsmith and lapidary—superb creations for Christmas Gifts.

Rings of wonderfully wrought gold or in plain effects—some studded with gems—all bewitchingly beautiful—all awaiting to carry with them the delicate sentiment you cannot express in words.

Every safeguard is offered buyers here—no charge for the protection—little charge for the gems.

DEATH CLAIMS SENIOR MEMBER

Of the Well-known Firm of Chase & Sanborn, Famous as Coffee Merchants, on This Continent.

Mr Caleb Chase, a leading Boston merchant, senior member of the firm of Chase and Sanborn, Boston and Montreal, died at his home in Brookline Nov. 23.

He was born in Harwick, Mass. on December 11, 1831, being the son of Job and Phoebe (Winslow) Chase. He was educated in the Harwich schools, and was in his father's general store until he reached the age of twenty-four. He then went to Boston, entering the employ of Anderson, Sargen and Company, a leading drygoods house. He was with this firm five years, travelling for them on Cape Cod and in the West, and in 1859 he made a connection with the wholesale grocery house of Claflin, Saville and Company.

In 1864 he began business for himself, forming the firm of Carr, Chase & Raymond, which in 1871 became, Chase Raymond & Ayer, and in 1878 was merged into the present firm of Chase & Sanborn. Owing to ill-health the active management of the business of late years has been assumed by his partners.

Mr Chase will be long remembered for his benefactions. There was a personal element in his public and charitable gifts: something of the giver himself seemed to enter into each.

He kept an active interest in his native town as long as he lived and Harwich owes much to his public spirit. At his personal expense he improved Harwich Harbor, including the building of the sea wall.

He contributed largely to the betterment of the roads in the town, gave to West Harwich its library building, and another building for a town hall.

He gave liberally to his own Baptist church in Harwich and to other churches in the town, irrespective of denominations. To the Brookline schools he gave a fund for the purpose of placing in the school rooms, copies of some of the world's best sculpture. More recently he gave to the Boston Salvation Army $15,000 for its People's Place, the main hall of which is named in his honor, 'Caleb Chase Hall.'

Mr Chase's private charity was endless. It was said of him that he could never resist the appeal of misery or distress. It is quite certain that there are literally thousands who will remember his generosity and personal sympathy in times of adversity.

Mr Chase belonged to the Algonquin Club and was an enthusiastic member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery. He was one of the 173 members who went to England in 1896, and when the London Ancients came to Boston in 1903, he was an important factor in making the visit of the Englishmen a memorable one.

He was married in 1864 to Miss Salome Boyle, of Thurston, Maine, who survives him.

AN AMENDMENT IN GOOD ROADS ACT

Counties Will Petition Legislature for it---Matter Discussed by County Council

At the County Council meeting yesterday afternoon a communication, asking for the co-operation of this county in a petition to the Legislature for an amendment in the Good Roads Act, so that townships may be enabled to adopt a good roads system and take advantage of the Government's offer of assistance instead of the county taking it up. It was pointed out that in a large county, such as Peterborough, it was very difficult for the county to carry the scheme, as a county and have it satisfactory to all the townships.

It was moved by Mr. Brown seconded by Mr. Moore that this County Council authorize the Warden and clerk to sign the memorial as presented by the County of Grey.—Carried.

The Council is meeting in committee to-day.

FREMAN SWEET LIVED AT OTTAWA

One of the Victims of Pontypool Wreck Came From the Capital

An Ottawa despatch says;—One of the victims of the Canadian Pacific Railway wreck at Pontypool, near Peterborough, Ont., yesterday was James D. Sweet, an Ottawan, aged 21, who for over a year had been living with his uncle, Mr. Robert Sweet, 298 James street. The despatch announcing the death yesterday, as published here, gave the name as Sweetman, and stated that he belonged to West Toronto. The young man lived here and had been railroading for over three years. He had another uncle here, Mr. Joseph Sweet, of Ottawa East, and his family lived at Niagara Falls, where the funeral will take place. The deceased left a father, Mr. Wm. Sweet, a brother, Willie T., and two sisters, Miss Mary and Miss Lina Sweet. He was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters and from what relatives here understand, also carried an accident insurance policy.

SPORTING NEWS

PETERBORO' WILL LIKELY HAVE INDOOR BASEBALL LEAGUE THIS WINTER

The proposal to play indoor baseball at the armories this winter coming in for considerable discussion and it is practically a certainty that popular game will be played by the 57th regiment this winter. The talent in town it is understood is good and the public will have the opportunity of seeing some interesting sport should an indoor baseball league be organized here. Although the people of Peterborough are not familiar with the game, and to the large majority it is practically unknown in fact, they are sure to like it and it is held in much favor in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and other American and Canadian cities where it is played. The league if formed will probably be composed of eight teams one from each company of the 57th, and perhaps more should the Dragoons and 24th Field Battery desire to be represented.

While most of the games would be local, matches could be arranged with outside teams. It is certain that the game will gain a firm footing here if it is introduced.

BANKERS AND BELMONTS WIN TEN PIN LEAGUE GAMES

The Bankers and Belmonts were victorious in the two league games played at the PBC alleys yesterday the first named taking three straights from the scribes while the Belmonts took two out of three from Lang's trio. The Bankers and Examiner, played in the afternoon, the game having been originally scheduled for this evening.

The winners showed exceptionally good form and it will just about take the best team in the league to down them in the games yet to be played. Ford was high man though Barber managed to squeeze him out for the single honors by running up a big score in the last game.

Ferguson was a shade off, but was improving steadily towards the end, showing something approaching his old form in the final game.

Harry Leaher had the best average and high single with the Examiner, and but for a series of the most unlucky splits he would have had a much higher score. He was forced to make some of the most sensational splits to get even with the comparatively small scores he put up.

Huston showed good form except in his second game while Delafosse was bothered by the foul line rule.

In the evening the strong Belmonts had no great difficulty in capturing two from Lang's team, though the second contest was decided only on the last couple of frames, the game going to the winners mainly through Hay's poor work.

Pollard gave Billy Wareham a strong run for high honors, while Wesley, a new bowler, made them all sit up and take notice. He has a splendid style and very effective delivery and with a little more seasoning will make them all go some.

Hemstead was easily the best of the losing team and the man with the cannon-ball delivery, finished up with a very respectable average for the three games. Given support by his team mates the big fellow should have pulled out with two games.

The scores follow:

BANKERS

Ford	168	159	180—507

Y.M.C.A. WILL LIKELY HAVE HOCKEY TEAM

Meeting to be Held on Friday Night to Consider City League Septette

The YMCA will likely place a team in the senior city league. The association has an abundance of good material and will likely have a strong septette. A meeting will be held at the YMCA on Friday night at 8 o'clock to consider the proposition and everyone interested is requested to be present.

AFTER IT'S OVER

Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick called at the Review office this morning and both discussed last night's bout. The boys, who are good friends off the mat shook hands when they met and extended mutual pleasantries. Both expressed themselves as satisfied with the way the match had been handled from the referee's standpoint.

The spectators all expressed the opinion of having seen a most interesting, hard and square struggle and every spectator got his money's worth to the last nickel.

CENTRALS AND PETERBORO'

Great Basketball Game at Y. M. C. A. Gymnasuim Next Saturday Night

The best local basketball game of the season will take place at the YMCA. gymnasium on Saturday night when a picked team from the Peterborough association will play the Central YMCA. team of Toronto. The Central has one of the crack teams of the province and play a beautiful game. An unusually strong lineup, however, will be picked from the local forces and the visitors will have to do some vigorous playing to win. Mr. G. W. Collings, physical director of the "Y" is picking the team here.

SPORTING TALK

Tom Longboat is engaged to be married. It is understood that his manager had nothing to do with the making of this match.

Talk of next Saturday's Rugby final generally turns to possible roughness. Rival supporters declare that the husky Hamilton wings will soon take the ginger out of Gall and Lawson, or that Ben Simpson will soon get put out of business and that Burton will probably ask for a substitute. However, Dr. Hendry, the referee, can be counted on to cut out all rough work, and straight football will likely decide the championship.—Toronto World.

BASEBALL

Tokio, Nov. 23.—In the presence of an enthusiastic crowd of more than 3000 persons, the American baseball team which came to Japan to play some of the Japanese University teams opened the season yesterday and defeated Waseda University, 5 to 0. The Waseda team played snappy ball but did not get a man as far as second base. Count Okuma, the sage of Waseda University, wearing the cap and coat of one of the American team tossed the first ball across the plate. After the game the American players were the guests of Count Okuma at a garden part given by him in their honor.

BURRIDGE WON FROM FITZ IN TWO FALLS, 27½ AND 47½ MINS.

The first fall in 27 1-2 minutes and the second in 47 1-2, with Burridge getting both. That's the story in the concisest possible form of the bout between Harry Burridge and Ned Fitzpatrick at the Auditorium roller rink last night, making the entire time of the bout one hour and fifteen minutes. It was probably as warm a go as was ever seen in Peterborough. It shaded down to pretyt nearly a question of pure strength withth e required strength on the part of the winner. Fitzpatrick at that put up a wonderful resistance. Time and time again when he was all but down he got away, and although he was kept in dangerous positions for minutes at a time, it was not without the greatest difficulty that Burridge managed to throw him. Both of the men were in great condition, and were strong at the finish considering the fact that they went through such a gruelling.

Fitz was on the defensive much more than his opponent although for the first fall he wrestled aggressively, and for a few minutes the chances of the pair looked pretty even. After fifteen minutes or so of work, however, Burridge commenced his forcing tactics, and his strength stood him in good stead. He worked very little on the lower parts of Fitzpatrick's body and confined his attention to Nelson and bar holds, gaining both falls with a bar arm hold and a necklock. Once or twice he essayed a crotch hold, but as it didn't come easy enough to him he changed his tactics. One very severe hold was the head scissors, and with his legs he held Fitz's head as in a vise, until it seemed that the latter would have to turn, but he stuck gamely to his work and banted every inch of the way. From the manner in which both boys took all kinds of punishment it was evident that both were game to a degree, and that the man who won would have to do so by forcing his adversary's shoulders tot he mat, as the employment of punishment holds could not force either man to quit. It was a hard and long struggle fort he money and the crowd were on edge all the time.

Everyone who attended the match was highly pleased with the exhibition, and many were of the opinion that it was the most interesting and hardest fought go seen here this season. The winner was given an enthusiastic reception by the audience.

As before mentioned the first fall some good aggressive and defensive work on the part of both men. At the commencement of the second Burridge went in to secure a fall in the quickest possible order, grabbing hold of Fitz around the waist and swinging him to the mat. He apparently was taking a chance on his man being rather done out by the first engagement, but Fitz had all kinds of staying ability left and made a strong resist[illegible]ght up to the time of the second fall. He is slippery as an eel, and a remarkably hard man to pin, Burridge having gradually to wear him down by his superior [illegible] strength. A. C. Yokome refereed and had a hard time of it, the crowd urging him repeatedly to give or not give falls as the sympathies of the two factions moved them.

The first preliminary was a six round boxing bout between B. Guerin and G. Lillie. Lillie had it all over his man, and it looked as though he would knock him out. Referee G. N. Graham, who handled the bout with every satisfaction, stopped it after two and a half rounds, giving the decision to Lillie, who clearly outclassed Guerin. The decision met with the approval of the crowd.

The main preliminary was a handicap affair in which Young Hackenschmidt was to throw five men in ten minutes. Only two faced him, however. John Fitzener, who was thrown once, and then came on again to be thrown in quick fashion. For the second fall Hack swung him around till he looked like a circus performer on the high bars. He let him down gently though for the fall.

Holloway, one of the acrobats appearing at the roller rink this week, next faced the crack heavyweight, and lasted two minutes and a half in a pretty bout. Gene Hurtubise and Young Hack finished the preliminary programme in interesting exhibition.

Mr. Chris. Graham acted as promoter of the evening's bouts, and deserves great credit for the excellent bill of sport provided.

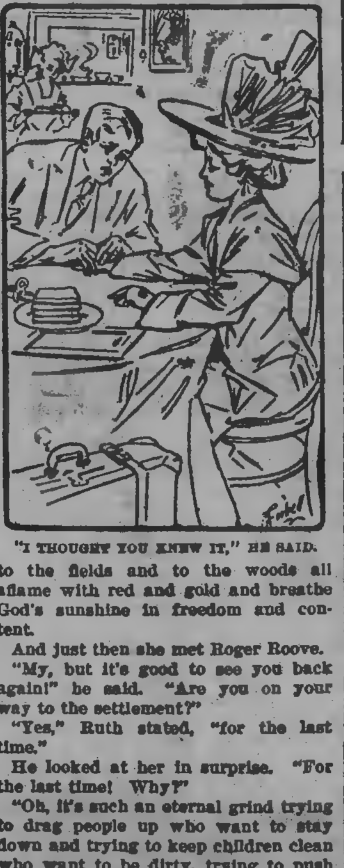
A COFFEE HOUSE COURTSHIP.

By PHILIP KEAN.

Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Ruth Bradford came out from the elevated station into the street that led to the settlement. Fresh from her summer outing, her whole being rebelled against the squalor of the city street, the clamor of shrill voices, the wailing of babies in the fetid tenements.

Life was too short, she reflected passionately, to spend one's days trying to uplift one's fellow men. She decided that she would give it up, go back to the fields and to the woods all aflame with red and gold and breathe God's sunshine in freedom and content.



"I THOUGHT YOU KNEW IT," HE SAID.

And just then she met Roger Roove.

"My, but it's good to see you back again!" he said. "Are you on your way to the settlement?"

"Yes," Ruth stated, "for the last time."

He looked at her in surprise. "For the last time! Why?"

"Oh, it's such an eternal grind trying to drag people up who want to stay down and trying to keep children clean who want to be dirty, trying to push back waves of the sea with a broom."

"Why, Ruth"—his tone showed his intense astonishment—"when you left us in the spring you were an optimist, and now you have come back a pessimist! I believe you are joking."

"No, I'm not," Ruth declared. "I'm in dead earnest. This summer I've been living up among the hills, and I want to go back—I want to go back and forget the city and these hideous streets. After all, why am I responsible? Why should not I live a life of ease as well as other people?"

He shook his head.

"Don't expect me to answer," he said, "but something has change you awfully. And you might as well tell me what it is, because I'm going to find out if you don't."

"Well, if you must know," said Ruth slowly, "I've had a proposal."

"Then you're in love?" he asked quietly.

"I'm not sure," Ruth reflected, "whether I'm in love, but—oh, we can't talk about it here, Roger!"

"No; it is pretty public," he admitted, "but I haven't any classes for an hour or two, so why can't we have lunch together in the settlement coffee house?"

The coffee house, quaint and comfortable, with its Russian coppers glowing red against the dark wood, its smooth brick tiles, its somber tables and chairs, brought forth an exclamation from Ruth.

"It's so good to be at home again!" she said as Roger drew out a chair for her by the window and took a seat opposite.

"So you think of it as home?" he asked, his dark eyes reading her sparkling face.

"Oh"—her eyes grew startled—"I believe I do! A minute ago I was so depressed, and now—I think it is the spirit of the place that rests one, Roger—to feel that these poor foreigners can come here and find something familar in a strange land of strange customs."

Roger smiled thoughtfully as he consulted the menu. "But about that proposal," he reminded her.

"Oh, yes!" Ruth slipped off her gloves and folded her hands before her on the bare table. "The—the man is rich, Roger. He has two automobiles and a country place and a house in town, and—and he sent me a box of candy nearly every day, and flowers and books, and drove me through the country in his big car, and—oh, I had the time of my life, Roger!"

The man eyed her a little wistfully. "I'm glad you had such a good time," he said, "but—but we shall hate to lose you from here."

"But you can't blame me," she said feverishly. "Surely you can't blame me, Roger. I'm young, and I've given the five years since I left college to work among the poor people of this neighborhood, and my heart has been in it, and I've been glad to do it, but now—oh, I want something of ease and beauty and brightness!"

He tried to speak lightly.

"You have earned it," he said, "and of course the man is—Prince Charming."

Ruth shook her head. "No; that's the trouble," she faltered. "He's not very young and not very handsome, and he's very dictatorial, Roger."

"But you love him."

"Oh"— Ruth hesitated as the waitress brought them their omelet and bread and butter. Then when they were alone again she said, "I—I don't believe I love him, but I love the things he can give me."

Roger flung back his head, his dark eyes flashing.

"And you think you can be happy with a motor car and a house in town and a complacent husband? Oh, Ruth, Ruth, where are your dreams?"

She stared at him with a pale face. "My dreams?" she faltered.

"Yes; the things that we planned at college. We were to give our lives to others, separately at first, because each of us must be very sure that we wanted to live for humanity, and then, if love continued, we were to be married and have our home in an apartment near the settlement and carry on our work together."

They were alone in the dim corner, and suddenly Ruth reached out her hand across the table.

"Oh, Roger, Roger," she cried, "why didn't you say that before I went away? Why didn't you, Roger?"

"I thought you knew it," he said, with his big hand over hers. "Have you ever doubted it, Ruth?"

"Yes," she confessed. "In the spring when I went away I was so tired—so tired of bearing the burdens of the unhappy, with no happiness for myself—and it seemed that—that if you had cared, Roger, you would have said, 'Let's bear it together, Ruth!'"

"And I"—his voice was deep with emotion—"I was so afraid that you were tired of me that I didn't dare speak. Oh, you see what a misunderstanding it was, Ruth! And now, and now, you have strayed into greener fields and have promised"—

"But I haven't promised!" she cried.

His face was illumined.

"I—I told him I must think about it. But, oh, Roger, it was because I could not separate my future from yours!"

"Dearest dear," he murmured softly as the waitress came with their salad and cheese and black coffee, and after that they made a pretense of eating.

But presently Ruth said:

"We'll live in that little apartment that overlooks the settlement courtyard, and I'll take a mother's class in cooking, and you shall talk with the men, and everything will be worth while, Roger."

And Roger, his glance coming back from the open window, through which he could see the crowded street, where Greek and Italian and Slav mingled, to the face of his beloved, bent forward impetuously.

"Everything is worth while," he said, with a wonderful smile lighting his fine countenance—"everything is worth while when love is the inspiration!"

The Unwise Shoplifter.

"It is strange," said a store detective, "why women shoplifters want to take the whole family along when they go out on a thieving expedition. It is a fact that many of them are accompanied by children when caught stealing. That seems a short sighted policy. A woman hampered by a child stands twice the chance of being detected that she does when operating minus such an incumbrance. Of course it can be argued that she fares better in the long run, inasmuch as she is more likely to be dismissed with only a reprimand on account of the child. This is no doubt true, for unless the offense is very serious it takes a hard hearted man to press a charge against a woman accompanied by children. But that very line of reasoning makes the act more reprehensible.

"My own theory is that most shoplifters do not go shipping with the fixed intention of stealing. The mania for taking something overcomes them after they get in the store, and they snatch the goods on impulse, no matter whether or not they have children in charge."—New York Globe.

TORTOISE SHELL.

The Way the Plates Are Removed From the Animal.

The comb of tortoise shell has a very pale and translucent yellow, the only really valuable kind of shell.

"Many people think this pale, unmottled shell the cheaper kind," the dealer said. "Do you know why? Because the imitations are all made like this.

"That is one vulgar error about shell. Another is that the tortoise is killed to get its shell casing. That is as absurd an error as it would be to say a sheep was killed to get its wool.

"What is done is this: The fishermen, having caught a tortoise, tie him and then cover his back with dry grass and leaves. They set fire to this stuff, it burns slowly, and the heat causes the thirteen plates of the shell to loosen at the joints. With a knife the plates are pried off, and afterward the tortoise is set free. The base, or root, of his shell is intact and will grow again. If tortoises were killed to get their shell they would long since have become extinct.

"No, no. Every tortoise is, as it were, a farm—a shell farm. Fishermen catch him regularly and with heat and a knife gently remove his shell."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Ghost of Lochrain Castle

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson—Author of "The Princess Passes," "The Lightning Conductor," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY MRS. C. N. WILLIAMSON

here, but, of course, it has nothing to do with the hotel, and Captain Oxford does admit that he was on or near that part of the estate which still belongs to Lord Lochrain."

At this moment the manager himself came in, but announced that he wanted a little conversation with Mr. Grant before beginning work with Miss Dean. This gave Elspeth the chance she wanted, and scribbling on a bit of paper the words, "Not hurt seriously. Will be well in a few days," she slipped out into the hall to find Lady Hilary.

As she had expected the girl was there, but two or three people were talking with her, and if she saw Elspeth she gave no signs of doing so. It was not good form for an employe of the house to linger in the great hall among the guests of the hotel, with no apparent object, and Elspeth would have been at a loss how to keep her promise to Lady Hilary, had not Mr. Trowbridge come up and spoken to her with an air of marked cordiality.

"I hope you haven't forgotten your hour with me?" he said, looking at the pretty young typewriter, with the same rather bold air of undisguised admiration she had been half inclined to resent yesterday. But, as she answered politely, a little coolly, the man's face changed so suddenly that Elspeth could not help glancing about in surprise, seeking for the cause of such a transformation. His eyes had lighted up with some genuine and powerful emotion, very different from the easy gallantry of his look when directed at the stenographer.

A second served to enlighten Elspeth. Lady Hilary Vane had turned away from her friends, and was coming toward them. It was the sight of her unusual and high-bred beauty which had lit the new light in Mr. Trowbridge's eyes.

The Scotch girl did not wait for her to come nearer, but advancing a step or two, held out the folded bit of paper, saying in quite a professional voice: "Here is the memorandum you wished to have."

Lady Hilary blushed deliciously, looking lovelier than ever. "Thank you so much," she murmured, and moved away, burning with anxiety, Elspeth was sure, to learn the contents of the "memorandum." At the same instant, however, Lady Lambart came into the hall, her eyes darting a keen glance at her daughter, and Elspeth could only hope that she had not been in time to see the paper slipped from hand to hand.

"Who is that?" asked Trowbridge in a low but eager tone, and in this moment of sincere feeling it seemed to Elspeth that his accent was different. "Why, I don't believe he's an American!" she said to herself in bewilderment. "That's his real way of speaking, the other is put on. But why? Why should he pretend to be an American if he is not? And Mr. McGowan says he is a millionaire, so he can't have any reason to pretend things, like people who are hard up and unknown."

All this flashed through the girl's head in the fraction of a second, and she answered, without seeming hesitation: "That is Lady Hilary Vane."

"By Jove! so that is Lady Hilary!" exclaimed Trowbridge, and Elspeth knew from the tone that this was not the first time he had heard the name. "She is a great beauty."

"Yes," assented the typewriter. "I think I must go to Mr. McGowan now, Mr. Trowbridge. I won't forget"——

"Wait a minute, please," urged the other. "Do you know Lady Hilary?"

"Not at all," Elspeth replied promptly, "except that I was able to do her a very small favor in the way of my work."

"All the same, she likes you. Her eyes showed that," said Trowbridge reflectively. "You can make a friend of the girl if you like, I would bet." His accent was strongly American once more.

Elspeth laughed. "I am afraid that won't come in the way of my work. She is the daughter of a countess, and I—am Mr. McGowan's secretary." With this, and a civil nod, which excused herself from Mr. Trowbridge's society, she moved away.

CHAPTER IV.

Elspeth hoped that, during her hour and a half with Mr. McGowan she might glean further news of Captain Oxford and his mysterious midnight adventure, but nothing was said on the subject, and she was kept steadily at work taking down letters from the manager's dictation. He spoke rapidly, as if to test her skill, but though she was nervous at first, through overanxiety to give satisfaction, she made no mistakes, and at 10.25 exactly Mr. McGowan stopped, declaring himself very pleased with his new assistant.

"Mr. Kenrith will be ready for you," he said, "and I trust you are not tired, as I should not like him to be kept waiting."

Elspeth answered that she was not tired in the least; and five minutes later she was knocking at the door of Mr. Kenrith's private sitting room, carrying her own small typewriter in its leather case.

"Come in!" said a voice on the other side—a voice whose tones had lingered in her memory; and suddenly, though the girl had been calm and composed a moment ago, her heart began to beat very fast, as it had beaten in the strange dark watches of the past night.

"How silly I am," she thought. "I suppose it must be that I'm wondering how he will feel about yesterday. He may be vexed that I'm the same girl who traveled in the carriage with him yesterday, and I heard all the talk about his jewels and about Captain Oxford."

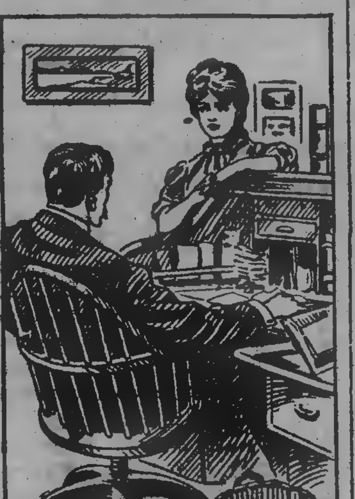
She opened the door rather slowly, and instantly met the eyes of John Kenrith, who sat facing it at a writing table. But, judging from his expression, he was rather pleased than annoyed to find that he had already met his new secretary. He referred to the journey, asked if she was not tired, and was so sympathetic and pleasant that before they began work together the girl felt as if they had known each other for a long time.

She could see that in beginning to dictate for his new book, he was almost as shy as a boy, and his embarrassment made him seem younger than he had yesterday. Tactfully, she put him at his ease by trying to make him think of her as a machine, and soon he forgot self-consciousness and warmed to his subject. Elspeth, too, grew interested in his clear way of explaining the great scheme the Northern millionaire had thought out for the benefit of mankind, and he must have seen what she felt in the glowing eyes which dwelt often on his face.

"I was afraid this would be dull business for a young girl," said Kenrith at last, "but I believe you must care something for Socialism."

"It's one of the most absorbing subjects in the world," answered the girl, "and I have thought a lot about it, since I came to live in London alone and get on as best I could; but I never really understood much about it—until now."

"Thank you," said Kenrith, smiling his pleasant smile. "That is a pleasing compliment for an aspiring author, at work on his first book." And he would not go on until Elspeth had told him something about her life in London. He asked her questions, and she was led on to answer as if he had been an old friend, for she felt, even if she could not have defined, the difference between this man's interest in her and that shown by Trowbridge.



He referred to the journey and asked if she were not tired.

In spite of the interludes of talk, however, they managed to do a good deal of work, Elspeth typing from Kenrith's dictation so quickly that her fingers flew over the keys of the small and almost noiseless machine. When it was nearly half-past twelve Kenrith stopped her, saying that they had done enough composition, and he would like to hear what he had written, if she did not mind, from her lips. He believed that he could judge of his own work better in that way.

Elspeth was only too pleased to do as he asked, for not only did she like to read aloud, but she herself was anxious to know how the sentences she had taken down would sound. They had not gone far, however, when the reading was interrupted by a knock at the door, and again Kenrith called "come in," but not so readily, Elspeth thought, as he had done when waiting for her to begin work.

Quickly the door opened, and Lady Lambart, looking very handsome, and almost girlish, in a youthfully made white dress, stood on the threshold. She had had a charming smile on her lips for Mr. Kenrith, but it froze at sight of Elspeth sitting cosily at his table with sheets of manuscript in her hand.

"Oh, I am so sorry to interrupt you. I didn't dream you were working," she said. "You know you told me last evening that if I wanted a book to come to your sitting-room and choose it when yours have been unpacked. Hilary and I have nothing worth reading, so I took you at your work, but"—— "There is no 'but,'" Kenrith assured her, pleasantly. "Miss Dean and I had really finished, and our time for work is over. My man has filled the bookcase with the contents of my boxes, you see, and you have only to choose."

Lady Lambart came in, ignoring Elspeth, though Kenrith had spoken her name in a way to make a bow a gracious act. The girl rose, and, having replaced her typewriter in its case, would have gone quietly out of the room without a word, had not Kenrith sprang to open the door for her. "Thank you very much, Miss Dean," he said. "You have been splendid, and with such kind help as yours I shall look forward to my hours of work here, even more than I had expected."

His words, so evidently spoken to show Lady Lambart, as well as the girl herself, his appreciation, touched Elspeth, and warmed her heart, but she was not to leave the room with such a happy impression for her last one.

"Isn't it that common little creature who got in first-class with us yesterday, and I took for some one's maid?" she heard Lady Lambart ask in clear tones as the door closed.

Perhaps, if she had caught Kenrith's answer, she would not have felt so crushed; but she did not catch it, and so she went away with tingling cheeks, wondering if she really did look common, and if she were the sort of girl to be mistaken for a lady's maid.

Her next hour of work, directly after luncheon, was with Lady Ardcliffe, whom Mr. McGowan had described as a "peeress who wished to be a poetess." Elspeth had seen her in the morning talking with Hilary Lambart, but Lady Ardcliffe, who was near-sighted and would not wear glasses, did not recognize the girl. She was fussy and flighty, with an air which would have suited a spoiled young beauty of twenty-one, and though she announced that she was engaged upon a dramatic poem for a Review, which must be finished within a week, she would not settle to work. Instead she talked about herself, and what she had written, and how much all she had done had been admired. "I do think," she said, dreamily, "that I have a little of the divine afflatus. People sometimes ask me to teach them how to write; but how can one teach what is as elusive as flame? Countess Radepolskoi, for instance, is quite foolish over my work. She's Polish, and has attempted verses in her own language. I don't know how successfully. Now she is keen to try in English with my help. Perhaps she will want you to type for her, but if she does, mind I can't give you up a moment of my hour. You must find other time for her. Have you seen her? Has she asked Mr. McGowan to [illegible] her have you yet?"

"I saw [illegible] morning," returned Elspeth, "but nothing has been said about my working for her." The girl clicked her machine as if to quietly remind the poetess that time was being wasted, but Lady Ardcliffe rushed off upon a new tack.

"Tell me, did you admire the Countess?" she inquired, with an eagerness which Elspeth was at a loss to understand. "I should like the opinion of a newcomer on that subject."

"Oh, yes, I thought her exceedingly striking," the girl was replying frankly, when Lady Ardcliffe's face fell almost pitiably. "But very foreign looking," Elspeth went on.

"Very, isn't she?" the elder woman caught up the words. "I should hardly think, should you, that she would be the sort of woman to attract an American or an Englishman?"

"Perhaps not," admitted the girl, wondering what this was leading up to.

"Of course," went on Lady Ardcliffe, "a poor man might wish to marry her for her money, for she is said to be rich, and I suppose she must be, as she dresses extravagantly, and has some very fine jewels, but millionaires don't need to think of such sordid things in connection with a woman."

"Poor creature," thought Elspeth, "she must be over fifty, yet I do believe she's in love, and inclined to be jealous, either of Mr. Kenrith, or Mr. Trowbridge, the only two millionaires I've heard of as stopping in this hotel. I wonder which it is?"

But she did not have to wonder long. Lady Ardcliffe's next sentence helped her to make a shrewd guess. "Mr. Trowbridge said last night he was going to have Mr. McGowan's new secretary to help him with his multitudes of letters," the poetess went on. "I suppose he meant you?"

Elspeth replied that she was to assist Mr. Trowbridge from 6 o'clock until 7 every evening, unless—she added rather mischievously—he wanted to lend her services to one of his friends.

"Lend you to one of his friends" echoed Lady Ardcliffe, suddenly in a flutter of excitement. "That means Countess Radepolskoi." She paused a moment, evidently thinking very earnestly. Then, with flushed cheeks and dilated eyes, she went on: "Look here, my dear, I have something to ask you. Are you fond of jewelry? But of course you are. All normal young girls are. Now, you are going to help me nicely with my work, and I want to give you something pretty to encourage you. Perhaps you have heard that I have rather a fad for jewels, and own a great many. Now, I'm going to get a box where I keep my rings, and I will point out some from among which you may take your choice."

"Oh, no, Lady Ardcliffe, please not!" cried Elspeth. "You are very good, but I couldn't take such a present. I am paid by the management of the hotel for all I do for you, and"——

"Ah, but there is something else I want you to do, a great favor to me, something the management has nothing to do with, and will hear nothing about, if you are the nice, sensible girl I take you for," broke in Lady Ardcliffe. "You needn't hesitate to have the ring, and perhaps another little token later on, if you use me good, for you will have earned them. Don't look so anxious. It's only quite an easy thing I want you to do, and it won't interfere with any duty. All I ask is that you will tell me if Mr. Trowbridge writes any love letters, or, indeed, letters of any kind, to women, or if when with him you hear or see anything which makes you suppose he cares about Countess Radepolskoi."

"I couldn't possibly," Elspeth replied in haste. "I'm sure you are speaking thoughtlessly, but if I did what you ask I should be a spy, a very mean spy, and I should deserve to be discharged."

"Oh, dear!" exclaimed Lady Ardcliffe, distressfully, "such an idea never occurred to me. Of course, I would not have asked you if it had. Please forget that I did. But you shall see my jewels some day, in any case; now, if you like"——

"Hadn't we better get on with your work?" suggested Elspeth. "We have been talking for half an hour."

But Lady Ardcliffe protested that she was in no mood for writing. She had worked herself into quite a nervous state, she said, and would feel better if she chatted quietly. And so she did chat, though scarcely quietly, about not only her own affairs, but the affairs of everybody else of any importance in the Hydro. She told Elspeth that Lady Lambart was horribly in debt, that wherever she went duns rained upon her, and that "poor pretty Hilary" led a terrible life with such a mother. Somehow or other, however, Lady Ardcliffe went on, confidentially, Ida Lambart had contrived to fascinate John Kenrith, the Lancashire millionaire, whom everybody liked so much. He was an exceedingly clever man, as well as a charitable and a good one, but he had not been clever enough, apparently, to see through Ida Lambart. People were saying that she would sooner or later succeed in becoming his wife, and of course it would be a glorious thing for her, as well as for Hilary, if she should bring off such a great coup as that. Still, tradesmen were not confident enough of her ultimate success to trust her, in the hope of future benefits when she should have secured the rich man, and that looked rather ominous, as tradesmen had such an extraordinary sharp scent.

Elspeth felt very guilty to sit hearing these intimate details concerning Lady Lambart and poor Lady Hilary, and would have been glad to stop Lady Ardcliffe if she could, although she could not help being interested. It would have been impossible, however, for a person in her position to dictate precepts of propriety to one in Lady Ardcliffe's and she had no alternative save to listen, till her hour was at an end.

She had been told, when she had finished work with Lady Ardcliffe, to return to Mr. McGowan's room to learn whether or no the time left open for extras was to be filled. As she was about to enter, the door was opened abruptly, and Mr. Trowbridge came out so suddenly that Elspeth had to start back out of his way. He begged her pardon, and hurried on, but she had time to notice a look of extreme satisfaction on his handsome face.

"He has perhaps got some favor out of Mr. McGowan," thought the girl; but Mr. McGowan was not there. Mr. James Grant was alone in the room, sitting at his own desk with a bundle of papers in his hand. He had not the air, however, of having been at work with them. Evidently he was laboring under some strong excitement, which, at sight of Elspeth, he used all his self-control to hide. But he could not conceal the shaking of his fingers that fumbled nervously with the papers, nor the spots of red which burned on his rather high cheek-bones.

Elspeth could only fancy that Mr. Trowbridge must have said something to annoy or offend Mr. Grant, possibly criticising some defect in the management, with insolence, which Mr. Grant, as subordinate, had not been able to resent. She felt sorry for the pale young man, and smiled at him in a sweet and friendly way, as she asked if there was any work for her to do between three and four-thirty.

He did not answer at first, or even seem to have heard her question, though his eyes were fixed intently upon her, as if he would have spoken. Jumping up, he began walking about the small room in a restless, uneasy way, like an animal in a cage.

"I am glad you have come—glad you have come, Miss Dean," he said at last.

"Were you wanting me?" she inquired.

"Yes—no. I mean I am glad you have come to Lochrain. I am not happy here. I am a man with boundless ambition. This has been no place to satisfy it. I have been eating my heart out, with no one to speak to as a friend—no one I would have cared to speak with in such a way. But the first moment you looked up into my face yesterday I felt the presence of a kindred spirit. I want to have you for a friend. May I think of you so?"

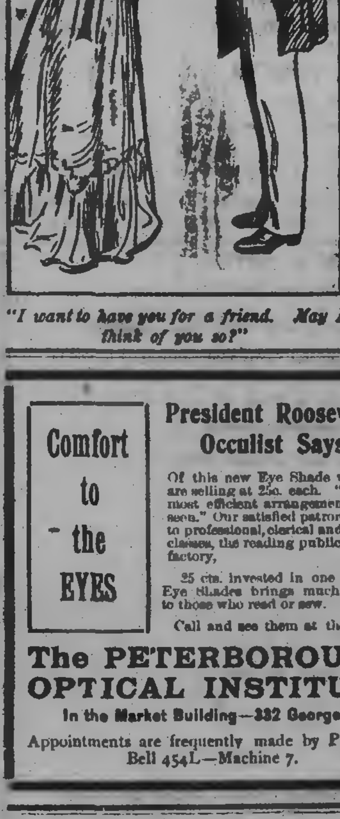
"Please do," said Elspeth, rather puzzled and not quite at ease, but still with kindness in her heart for her fellow employe. She was very far from sure that she was a kindred spirit of Mr. Grant's, but she was quite willing to be his friend.

"Thank you. Shake hands upon that," he said, seizing her hand and crushing it so hard that she could scarcely refrain from crying out. "Before long I may test your friendship, by asking help such as only a woman can give. But I shall not make selfish demands upon it. Don't fear that. I want the friendship which you have promised to promote your advantage and advancement. I can't explain how at this moment, though you will know what I mean before long."

"You are very good," replied the girl. "But you haven't told me yet whether I am wanted for the spare hour and a half before 4.30"——

Grant seemed to wake from a feverish dream. "Yes—yes!" he said. "I had forgotten Captain Oxford—the man I told you about this morning—has sent to know whether there is any one who can write from his dictation a few letters which he is very anxious to get off as soon as possible. I suppose you will have to go to him, though I don't quite like the idea. Indeed, I suggested to Mr. McGowan that I might do what was wanted, but he thinks he has some work which I, and nobody else, must do for him this afternoon. Rather inconsiderate, I call it. However, patience is the word for the present. Everything may be very different soon. Captain Oxford has a little room opposite Mr. Kenrith's, and Mr. Kenrith—who is a friend of his—has lent him that handsome sitting room which you saw this morning. Captain Oxford has been moving over there for the afternoon, and it is to be at his disposal each day after lunch, as often as he likes, while he's on the sick list. Very kind of Mr. Kenrith, I call it, quite unnecessarily kind. Anyhow, that is where you will find the interesting invalid."

There was bitterness in Grant's voice, and it was clear to Elspeth, as it had begun to be earlier in the day, that the manager's assistant did not like Captain Oxford. This, for some perverse reason, made her the more curious to see the young man of whom she had heard so much that was interesting and even mysterious. It seemed, therefore, that whenever she went to Mr. Kenrith's sitting room, she was destined to look forward with more than ordinary interest to the events that awaited her on the other side of the door.



"I want to have you for a friend. May I think of you so?"

What would he be like, this young man who loved Lady Hilary Lambart, and was loved by her in return; who had begun life as a foundling, and made a career for himself in the army; who had won John Kenrith's friendship and loyal admiration; who was labelled "dangerous" by Lady Lambart, and bitterly disliked by James Grant?

This was the thought in her mind as she tapped at the door of Mr. Kenrith's sitting room, for the second time that day.
